A man who has most likely been black-balled, solaces himself by writing as follows to the Golden Era:

I can afford to place this secret society business just where it belongs, for it is a shame and a disgrace to our civilization that a man is no longer rated by his honesty and industry. Talents and accomplishments no longer amount to anything unless their possessor is branded with just so many badges. We have the ancient Order of that, and this secret society, and that secret society. Now I propose that we have a modern society; we are a modern people and let us be a public society, and I would suggest that it be called the Non-Affiliators.

In order to become a member of this society, a man must be thirty-five years of age.

1. He must have been at least ten years in the United States.

2. He must never have been a member of any secret society, nor ever applied for admission to one.

3. He must never have been convicted of any offense, or have been indicted by a grand jury.

4. He must never have been bankrupt.

5. He must be able to read and write his own name.

In order for a man's name to appear on the records as a Non-Affiliator, he must swear to the above five articles before a regular notary public, and not a secretly elected official; and if this Modern Public Society does not take precedence of all the ancient secret societies very quickly, why, I'm no judge of the best element of society in America. Let the Non-Affiliators be known by their simplicity; no fuss and feathers, no badges, no gaudy sashes and stars. Let them take their places in the procession in the ordinary wearing apparel; ordinary wearing apparel on great public occasions should be their distinction. Let the names of the Non-Affiliators appear on record with the name of the different towns or cities where they have resided for the last ten years, also the nature of the different occupations they have been engaged in during that time. This Modern Public Society would be a very desirable one, and would certainly have in its ranks the solid men of America.

MESSRS. STUART BROS. & Co. of London have made a proposition to the South San Francisco Dock Company to erect two docks, dry dock of graving, on land owned by the latter company in this city. The company propose to receive in payment for the work seven blocks of land belonging to the South San Francisco Dock Company. The docks are to be put in working order within two years.

Population of Montana.

Montana must have assimilative powers superior to any thing recorded in the history of the nations, if she succeeds in making a homogeneous population out of the unnumbered varieties of races, peoples, and tribes which are pouring into our Territory. No commonwealth has ever before undertaken to harmonize and make congruous so heterogeneous a population.

Of Indians, we have Crows, Piegiens, Gros Ventres, Flat Heads, Bannacks, and remnants of several other tribes. Of Mongolians, there are Chinese, Japanese, and Laps. The Shemites are represented by Jews and Arabs. Africa sends us Cops, Congoes, Moors, and Caffers. The Aryans are represented by Pilgrims, Norwegians, Russians, Poles, Swedes, Danes, Austrians, Hungarians, Prussians, Dutch, Swiss, Italians, French, Canadian French, and Halfbreeds, Spaniards, Spanish Americans, and Peons, English Canadian English, and Half-breed English, Scotch and Irish, Mennonites and Mormons.

But the most discouraging feature of this gathering of races and people, is the fact that there is a majority of no one nationality. If we had a majority of Anglo-Americans, of Englishmen, of Frenchmen, or of Germans, we might hope that such a majority would so assimilate all the others as to make a harmonious if not a homogeneous people. But with every nationality largely in the minority, and with so many conflicting civilizations, clashing religions, and national and social customs, it will be almost impossible to avoid most irritating frictions and deadly feuds. The first immigrations into Montana were less heterogeneous, and the Anglo-Americans and Irish-Americans, and German-Americans, largely assimilated in the States, had a vast majority of the whole population, and after a rapid but somewhat destructive fermentation of the conflicting elements, the result was a population similar to the populations of the Northwestern States whilom so called. But there were several circumstances which greatly hastened this happy result.

The early settlers of Montana found themselves in the midst of savage and hostile tribes, and more than a thousand miles from any civilized people to whom they could look for efficient succor, and the necessity for self-defense in this isolated condition, drew them together as with bands of steel. Probably there never was a frontier people in which there was so large a proportion of first-class, well educated and well disposed men as were found in the early mining camps of Montana, and these men in their organizations for defense against external savage foes, and still more savage road agents and gambling roughs, learned to appreciate each other's good qualities, and to work together in establishing the regular machinery of civil government and social progress. These facts rendered the assimilation of conflicting elements a short and easy work, and the result was one of the best populations of the continent.

Then came the Utah & Northern and poured into our southwestern towns and camps the restless, lawless crowds which ever follow the progress of all railroads penetrating unsettled regions. And now comes the Northern Pacific rushing in from the east an eager multitude of all the conflicting elements of Canada and Europe, and from the west the mongrel hordes of Asia and the Pacific Islands, stirring society to its very depths.

What will be the result of this new fermentation no one can tell; but every anthropologist and every patriot will watch the struggling civilizations, and mark well the results. Montana is now working out the most complicated social problem of the ages. It is our belief, however, that the various civilizing and enlightening agencies at work in our midst will produce a homogeneous people worthy of the grand country we possess.—Helena Independent.

Iron Stone and Terra Cotta Pipe, etc., for all Purposes.

The manufacture of iron stone pipe for purposes of drainage, irrigation, sewerage water carriage and the like, and the manufacture of terra cotta work for chimneys, for architectural decoration, and for a thousand other uses, is one of the great industries of the country, and is most intimately connected with the health, comfort and convenience of the people. A little idea of the extent of the business may be gained from the fact that for the one purpose of farm drainage there was manufactured in the United States during 1882 about five and one-half million dollars' worth of drain tile. This is one of the most humble uses to which earthen pipe is put, and affords only an inkling to the extent of the production which includes the higher class of goods required for sewerage water carriage and for ornamental purposes. The Pacific coast figures creditably in the pro-source nothing can be more wholesome than a clean stone pipe, and in no other way can a large body of water be delivered so cheaply. Well laid, this pipe will stand a pressure or head of sixty feet, and the material should be examined by those who contemplate bringing water long distances for house use or irrigation. It is well understood that irrigators in some parts of the State will have to resort to piping, as the open ditch is so wasteful by evaporation and seepage. Miles and miles of water pipe are being put in this year in San Bernardino county.

Stone pipes make most excellent culverts for roads or railroads. They are easily made, neat and serviceable, and so durable that the use of planks for small road-culverts should be laid aside where the pipe can be had. The engravings on this page show how neatly a culvert can be made with pipe.

Drainage and sub-irrigation are twin benefits, and for these purposes there is a constantly increasing demand for stone pipe. These pipes

Origin of Nitrogen.

The authors, A. Muntz and E. Aubin, show that the only noteworthy agent for the production of nitric or nitrous acid from the free nitrogen of the atmosphere is the electric discharge. They consider that unless the supply of the oxides of nitrogen thus generated is greater in tropical regions than it has been found to be in Europe, it will be difficult to explain, by electricity alone, the compensation of the nitrogen which is incessantly wasted, and especially the accumulation of combined nitrogen which exists on the surface of the globe. Hence, another cause must be sought for the production of nitrogenous compounds. It has been proved by the experiments of M. Boussingault upon plants, and those of M. Schloesing upon the soil, that neither of these are able to assimilate free nitrogen. Hence, the authors are inclined to seek the source of combined nitrogen in the violent combustions which must

Which is situated at Lincoln, Placer county, California. The works, of which a sketch is given (3d page), comprise buildings covering an area of 160x230 feet, partly two and partly three story structures. One, just finished, is of brick, 85x230 feet, and is handsomer than one shown in the engraving. The establishment was started in 1875, and has been enlarged continually until the present time, and now has two acres of floor room inclosed. The power is furnished by a 60-horse power engine, driven by two boilers. There is the best machinery for the purposes designed, including a steam sewer-pipe press, clay mills, and tile mills, all run by steam. There are five down draft kilns. The works are made accessible to the cars by 1,500 feet of side-tracks from the main line of the Oregon division of the C. P. R. R., and the site is 11 miles from the junction of the C. P. and Oregon railroads, and 28 miles or tile are manufactured without sockets or collars, in one-foot lengths, and are laid in the trench with their ends joined as closely as possible. If to be used for drainage, the water will enter where the ends of the tile meet; and if for irrigation, it will escape at the same points. It is shown by statistics that 52,647 miles of tile drains were laid in the United States last year. California has not done as much in under-draining as she should, but there is now a disposition to wise expenditure in this direction, for it has been shown that well drained land is an advantage even in a dry country like ours. Of course some fields are naturally drained by condition of soil, etc., but there are many fields which need tiling.

The fine quality of the fire clay found at Lincoln, not only enables Gladding, McBean & Co. to turn out their fine goods, but the clay in itself is much sought for in the market for fire-brick work of all kinds where heat resisting quality is desirable. The Lincoln fire clay is sent all over the coast for these purposes.

have ensued at a certain stage of the earth's existence, when the elements which had been dissociated by an elevated temperature recombined in presence of oxygen and nitrogen, involving the formation of nitrous compounds. It is known, indeed, that large quantities of nitrous acid are formed whenever any body is burnt in air.

According to the authors' experiments, 1 grm. of hydrogen burning in air yields as much as 0.001 grm. nitric acid, while 1 grm. yielded as much as 0.100 grm. Hence, at the first appearance of organic beings upon the earth, there existed a large stock of nitrogenous compounds in the air and the soil upon which we are still subsisting, and which is decreasing under the influence of the causes which effect the escape of free nitrogen, unless the supply is kept up by the action of atmospheric electricity.

from Sacramento. The vein of clay is 30 feet thick and of first quality, which justifies the liberal expenditure for manufacturing facilities. There are 75 men employed, and the output of the factory is immense, and goes to all parts of the coast. The main office is at 1310 to 1316 Market street, San Francisco, near the new City Hall, and the firm has agencies all through the Pacific coast towns.

The Products.

Space will not permit us even to enumerate all the varied and useful forms into which clay is made in this large establishment. Indeed, it is not necessary, for the firm issues a handsome illustrated catalogue which gives all necessary information. But we shall allude briefly to some of the manufactures which seem to us of chief interest. First, there is vitrified iron stone sewer pipe, which renders it perfectly impervious to moisture. This pipe makes the perfect conduit for house or street sewerage, which is essential to health and comfort. It is made in all sizes, and with all curves, traps, etc., which may be desired. No one should take the risk of contaminating his well or vitiating the air of his habitation by using a leaky sewer pipe of stone or brick or wood, when a perfectly tight and durable pipe can be obtained at such a reasonable figure as it is now offered at.

For the conduct of water from a distant

even where brick is not to be had. The terra cotta chimney takes little room. They are cheap, light, easily put up, they do not clog with soot—in fact, so desirable is terra cotta in this respect, that large quantities of terra cotta lining for brick chimneys is sold. Terra cotta chimneys are claimed to be safer than brick if the pipe is well cemented. These chimneys are of different sizes and the terra cotta chimney tops are made in a great variety of handsome forms, so that they are regarded as fit for our finest structures as well as for our cottages. Gladding, McBean & Co.'s catalogue is very full on the subject of terra cotta chimney work, and should be consulted by house builders.

Another interesting branch of manufacture at Lincoln is flower-pots, plain and ornamental, garden vases, hanging baskets, wall pots and fern cases, and everything of that kind to delight the amateur or professional florist and gardener.

We have not space to examine these interests farther at this time, but those who feel inclined have the privilege of doing as we did—call and examine the samples of manufacture at the large yard near the New City Hall in this city, or send for the illustrated publications of the firm, just issued.

mental labor. A writer, who evidently holds this opinion, ridicules Charlotte Bronte because she became disgusted with Thackeray on seeing him eat, while sitting beside him at the table on the occasion of first meeting him, although she had formerly idolized him and worshiped his productions. Johnson, Dickens, Thackeray, Bayard Taylor, and other characters whom we might mention, were almost as notorious for their gormandizing as for their literary productions, but their literary fame was achieved in spite of their dietetic abuses, rather than by their aid. It would be very easy to show that several of the literary characters named were cut short in the midst of their brilliant careers by habitual abuse of the stomach. A temperate life and a simple dietary would have enabled several of them to prolong their lives to the present moment, with increasing ability in the lines of literary effort for which they are celebrated.—Good Health.

THE POPULATION OF CHINA. The Rev. A. P. Happer, D. D., figures out a steady decrease in the population of China. He says the present number of inhabitants cannot exceed 300,000,000. Chief among the causes of the diminution is opium. He believes that the population of India will soon exceed that of China, the latter ceasing to be the most populous country on the globe.

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSEMENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

Favorable to Advertisers.

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

The Grand Lodge Anniversary.

From present indications it looks as though there would be two mammoth celebrations of the sixth anniversary of the Grand Lodge of California on the coming 13th of November—one in San Francisco and one in Oakland.

'Tis well. Each of the cities have a large enough membership to have a celebration of their own, and double the good may be thus accomplished.

Although the San Franciscans first broached the subject, the Oaklanders seem to be agitating it more briskly. Committees from all the Lodges in Alameda county (for it is not to be confined to Oakland proper), have been invited to meet and confer in regard to the celebration. It is understood that Oakland Lodge, No. 2, is taking the lead in the matter.

The San Francisco Lodges having made the first move and secured promises of attendance and participation from most of the Grand Lodge officers, the character of the demonstrations will probably differ somewhat, unless the said officers can be secured for both places by making one an afternoon and the other an evening celebration.

If they do differ, so much the better, as each may then try to rival the other in its own peculiar form of excellence, instead of both following the same cut and dried formula of speech making throughout.

Whatever the plans, good will undoubtedly accrue, for all understand the advantages derived from these public meetings in increased interest both in the Lodges and among the public at large, and in the consequent increased membership. The WATCHMAN would like to see this anniversary celebrated all over the State.

In addition to the Idaho news noted on another page, we learn that a third Lodge was to have been instituted in Ketchikan, Idaho, last Monday.

The Golden Opportunity.

Our old Degree of Honor Lodges are slow in getting down to business under the new order of things; indeed we fear many of them will never get out of the "slough of despond" into which they had fallen under the old regulations. In our humble opinion but one thing will save them or perpetuate any of the others, and that is the beneficiary feature. Those that promptly and energetically embrace it, may expect success—those that do not, may live and prosper, but the chances are as a thousand to one they will not. Perhaps not less than 500 Degree Lodges have been instituted, and we do not know that twenty of them are in good working condition at the present time. The record is convincing of the correctness of our position. The other Lodges of the Order have, as a rule, proven a grand success. Why? No one will question, we presume, that it is wholly owing to the beneficiary feature of the Order. There is no good reason why Degree of Honor Lodges might not be equally successful if worked substantially on the same plan. This it is the design to do in this jurisdiction. No new Lodge should be organized except on the idea of making the beneficiary feature its leading object; and every old Lodge should lay hold on it as the only hope of longevity and success. The laws governing this feature are new and untried. We believe them excellent in their general scope, but if in any regard they may prove faulty—as no doubt they will—it will then be time to make such alterations as the part of wisdom may suggest or necessity require. Actual test alone can prove these things.

The eyes of earnest Workmen everywhere are watching the result of the efforts we are making to establish the Degree of Honor on a safe and sure foundation. They are anxious to institute Lodges of the Degree, but knowing that heretofore it has proven, as a rule, a decided failure, they naturally and prudently hesitate. Let us show them that they need hesitate no longer. Our Deputies should go to work and get up new Lodges in their respective districts, constituted: first, of such as desire to become beneficial, not of course denying admission to the charter list of others, but yet not seeking for them.

Again, our Lodges should favor the organization of D. of H. Lodges, and as an inducement, give one Lodge night in the month principally to the Degree. This they could easily do by meeting half an hour earlier on such nights, and transacting only the necessary business, and then adjourning for the accommodation of the Degree Lodge.

Most ladies will, of course, make their Beneficiary Certificates payable to their husbands. This will give to the husbands a special interest in the Degree. Many young ladies will be admitted, and as a consequence many young men will seek admission also through the portals of a Workmen Lodge who would otherwise stand aloof.

A little good, earnest and honest work just at the present time would result in untold benefit to the A. O. U. W., not only in this jurisdiction but everywhere. The time is opportune to win a greater glory for this jurisdiction than has ever before been presented, or will in all probability ever be presented again. "Improve well the opportunity you have," says the maxim. Let us heed it.

The Order in Illinois now has a chance to show its practical belief in Charity and Protection, by a call for relief in behalf of Bro. O. J. Noble, now 76 years of age, in feeble health, and residing in Chicago. He instituted the first Grand Lodges in Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and was the organizer of the Order in Iowa, and first Grand Master Workman of that State.

Neither Michigan or Kansas has any assessments for August.

A Queer Construction.

Replying to our Grand Recorder, the Michigan Herald says:

The Grand Recorder of California seems to think that the Herald is promulgating a new doctrine, when it asserts that a member cannot be suspended for dues when under suspension for non-payment of assessments. Perhaps we can make our point a little plainer if we say that in common law the principle, we believe, is clearly laid down that a man cannot be punished for two offenses at one and the same time. The Beneficiary Law stands pre-eminent and supersedes all other laws, for it is the very foundation stone of the Order; therefore we assert, without fear of contradiction, that once suspended for non-payment of assessments, the provisions of said law relative to reinstatement cannot summarily be set aside by a by-law that was simply intended to assist a Lodge in the collection of its dues, and was not enacted for the purpose of rendering void and of no effect the reinstatement provisions of the Beneficiary Law. This, in every instance, would be the result of such a construction, for it rarely happens that a member suspended for non-payment of assessments has met the claims made upon him for expenses, which are of secondary importance. If a member can be suspended from the Order when in arrears for one assessment, then we ask, for what purpose are the Beneficiary Laws of reinstatement?

The Herald seems to be a little off in matters of law. We cannot for the life of us see any difference in the binding force of one valid law more than another. The Beneficiary Law is general in its nature, and just as binding upon the whole Order as any other general law, and no more. The Constitution and laws legally enacted by the Grand Lodge of California, and legally approved, have as high a standing to us as any law of the Order of whatever nature or kind, till legally set aside by judicial decision or otherwise. We provide that a member six months in arrears for dues may be suspended from the Order. The legality of such a law will not be questioned even by the Herald. Under it we suspend members from the Order when delinquent on one or more assessments. We even go further and suspend members when all their assessments are paid. If we cannot legally do these things, the law is of no avail whatever. The Herald astonishes us. It seems to have gone clean daft.

For in this matter alone does the Herald seem to have lost its head. Referring to the Pengelly case it has this to say:

On August 24th he was a member in Nevada; therefore by its own law California could not assess him. Pengelly's liability to Nevada ceased on August 25th, but it certainly did not cease before that date, and Pengelly is liable for all Nevada assessments made on deaths occurring before the date of his admission in California.

When Bro. Pengelly left the jurisdiction of Nevada, which was then under the beneficiary jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge, there were many deaths therein unassessed for and unpaid. Joining here, he at the same time became absolved from any liability on these deaths, the Herald to the contrary notwithstanding. When a person's membership ceases in any jurisdiction, his liability on any losses that have occurred therein ceases also at the same moment. They do not follow him into another jurisdiction where he may have been admitted. If the Herald does not know these facts, it should brush up in the law; and if the law is not what our good brother thinks it ought to be, will he be so kind as to suggest some way by which one jurisdiction may reach out and assess a member belonging to some other jurisdiction for deaths left behind, but unassessed for when he was transferred?

The contriving of such a law, one that would be practical, would furnish the contriver with abundant employment for all his leisure time for many months, we are sure. By the way, if the Pengelly case was decided by the Supreme Lodge, as the Herald avers, there was a strange omission in the daily published proceedings in that Lodge, which represented the case as laid over for consideration, but fail to show that it was again taken up. But decided or not, the position of the Herald is as certainly wrong as that facts are not fictions.

Again, the Herald figures out partial answers to the hypothetical questions we submitted, but as they are based on the remarkable doctrine set forth in the first extract submitted above, we see all the more how plainly defective is the new reinstatement law.

We beg pardon, but cannot resist the temptation to submit one more question:

In some jurisdictions it is provided that a member can be suspended from the Order for the non-payment of twelve months' dues, instead of six. How can a member so suspended be reinstated? Will the law stretch to meet such a case?

Importance of Correct Lodge Records.

A case has occurred in Indiana where the Order has had to pay $2,000 with costs and interest, which should not in justice have been paid, and would not have been paid had the Lodge officers kept their records properly. The main facts are as follows: B. B. Eaton, of Eagle Lodge, No. 10, Indianapolis, died May 5th, 1880, having been suspended for non-payment of assessments from August, 1879. After his death, attempts were made to draw the insurance by the Financier of his Lodge paying up his back assessments, which the Grand Recorder refused to receive, on the ground that Eaton was out of the Order over six months, and was not re-examined and reinstated as the law required. Suit was then brought against the Indiana Grand Lodge by Mrs. Eaton, and after several appeals, judgment was rendered for $2,000 with 6 per cent interest, making $2,360, which, with the attorney's fee, will make the lesson expensive enough certainly to be a warning that ought to be heeded.

Judge Wood, before whom the case was tried, held that Eaton's policy had never been forfeited, because it was not shown clearly that he ever had notice of the assessments. Forfeitures are not favored by the law, and are not declared to exist except upon clear proof that all the steps have been taken giving the party claiming a forfeiture the right to it. He held that the Lodge must make strict proof that Eaton was notified of the assessments and failed to pay within the time fixed by law, and that if the Lodge ever expected to claim a forfeiture for non-payment of assessments, Financiers and other officers must keep records so that they can swear positively that notice was given at the required time to each policy-holder, or at least that one was mailed to his address. He said he could not feel certain from the evidence that any notice had ever been sent to Eaton, much less determine when they were sent or that they were ever received by him. This was the point on which the Judge put his decision, and he did not go into the question of waiver of the forfeiture because he decided that there had never been a forfeiture and could have been none declared under the facts proven.

PROBABLY there is no Order paper in the United States that at all approaches the acknowledged standard of excellence of the WATCHMAN but what has received substantial financial aid from the Grand Lodge of its jurisdiction. We take pride in saying that beyond the complete indorsement of this paper by the Grand Lodge, we have never received one penny of financial aid from this source. A private enterprise like this, which furnishes not only a live and valiant conservator of the news and interests of the Order, but also a first-class family journal, with the best type, ink and paper procurable, certainly merits the appreciation it receives. For this we are thankful, but there are certainly many Lodges and members whose interest is yet lukewarm and flagging. Brethren, you who read this paper, can you not excite their interest and wake them up? The interest they take in their Order paper is generally a good criterion of the interest they take in the Order itself.

We visited a Lodge in Baltimore one day last week, and had a pleasant conversation with the M. W. He was the only attendant.—Protector.

WE are compelled to write letters and send notices to several of the Lodges each month in relation to their delinquencies in remitting the Beneficiary Fund. It has been a study with us for a long time to learn why other Lodges are so remiss in so important a matter, and conclude from a recent communication that we have discovered the secret; and that is in a misconception of the law. That inasmuch as the money is not all collected until the last of the month from the members it cannot be sent to the Grand Recorder before. The law is plain on this subject. It reads like this: "When the assessment notice is read in the Lodge it is the duty of the Receiver to immediately forward to the Grand Recorder, the beneficiary money he has on hand. The Financier notifies each Master Workman of his Lodge of the assessment, and by the 28th of the month the money is all in or should be. This remains in the Receiver's hands, subject to the next call from the Grand Recorder." We will illustrate how it should work by a new Lodge. Supposing that a new Lodge begins its work with twenty-five members. Each member deposit one dollar in the Beneficiary Fund. In due time the Grand Lodge calls for that money by an assessment. It should be sent at once, as you have it on hand for that purpose. Then a call is made upon each Master Workman by the Financier for one dollar, when there is but one assessment; and before another call comes from the Grand Lodge the money is again in the Receiver's hands ready for the next assessment. In this manner it continues each and every month. Now let us see what the result would be if every Lodge in California would follow the above. By the 10th of each month the money would all be in the Grand Receiver's hands and the death losses all paid, and each Lodge could proudly boast that no delay in payment of death losses could be laid to its door.

The circular sent out by the Grand Master Workman concerning the various amendments to A. O. U. W. laws, and published in the last WATCHMAN, should be carefully studied by all Lodge officers. Some who fail to understand now why a member cannot be suspended for non-payment of assessments before the 28th of the month, may there find reasons to satisfy them.

A Counter Opinion

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—I think you are in error when you charge (in your issue of Sept. 15th) "gross carelessness" on Lodge officers who "persist in putting" the Grand Medical Examiner's "accounts into the remittance reports sent to the Grand Recorder's office, notwithstanding the fact that bills of the Grand Medical Examiner have a notice at their head clearly explaining where and how moneys should be sent that are due him." Allow me to suggest that the said "notice" has no binding force whatever, for it is no part of the law governing the matter, and no one has authority to make rules and regulations that are not evident conclusions from a plain reading of the law. The office of Grand Medical Examiner was created by the Grand Lodge, under direction of the Supreme Lodge; his duties were prescribed and his fees regulated by the same authority; the Subordinate Lodges are virtually charged with the collection of said fees; the bills are made out against the Lodges, and come to them from the Grand Recorder's office; they must pass through the Lodge books. By what curious construction of the law are they made to have "no connection" with the Grand Recorder's office? The same reasoning that will justify the Grand Recorder in refusing to receive and account for these moneys will also justify Recorders of Subordinate Lodges in doing so. The only proper way to avoid "confusion" is for the Grand Recorder to open an account with the Grand Medical Examiner. The "annoyance" must be submitted to with such grace as can be mustered. I trust that you will publish this. H. W. TAYLOR, Recorder Stockton Lodge, No. 23. Stockton, Sept. 18, 1883.

[Our opinions on this subject remain the same as those previously expressed, for the following clear and sufficient reasons: The fee of the Grand Medical Examiner is an individual matter between him and Subordinate Lodges. It is not a part of Grand Lodge funds and cannot go onto the books of the Grand Recorder. The Finance Committee cannot legally audit remittance reports, embracing fees remitted to the Grand Medical Examiner. That officer is so poorly paid that he cannot well afford to do the clerical work in addition to his professional duties, and the Grand Recorder has undertaken it for him, simply as a matter of accommodation, but of course cannot mix the accounts of that officer with those belonging to the Grand Lodge any more than he could those of the WATCHMAN.—EDS. WATCHMAN.]

The Difference.

The following from the pen of P. G. M. W., Wm. H. Barnes, in the fraternal department of the Call will be read with interest. It is in response to a query from an Eastern fraternal organ, in regard to what it seems to consider a parallel organization to our Degree of Honor:

The Fraternal Censor, while noting the fact that the organizations assuming to use the A. O. U. W., and doing business under the title of "Select Knights," do not meet with favor in California, asks the question, "what relation the Degree of Honor bears to the A. O. U. W., or the A. O. U. W. to the Degree of Honor," thus inferring that the Degree of Honor is in the same category with the "Select Knights." The answer is very easy. The Degree of Honor was introduced in, adopted by, and disseminated from the Supreme Lodge, just as the Degree of Rebekah was by the Supreme Lodge of the Odd Fellows. Therefore it is a legal, authorized, endorsed institution. The "Select Knights" are an outside organization, which use the title of the A. O. U. W. and confer degrees which have been advertised as "advanced degrees of the A. O. U. W.," without the slightest authority from the Supreme Lodge, and against the protest of many of its members. The fact that a number of the Supreme Lodge members are members of the Knights or that it is a good institution and beneficial, does not change the legal aspect of the case. It stands to the A. O. U. W. just as the "Patriarchal Circle" did to the I. O. O. F. a year or so ago, viz.: a body doing business under a title without authority from the Supreme body, and as all know, Grand Sire Leech of the I. O. O. F. ordered it to disband, and all true Odd Fellows to withdraw from it. No exception would have been taken to the Select Knights had they not attached A. O. U. W. to their name. Any man or body of men have the right to form an association and to decline to admit any person to it except members of the A. O. U. W. or any other society that they may prefer, but they do not have the right to assume the title of any Order without the permission of its authorities. Even now measures are being taken to prevent the seceding membership in Iowa from using the A. O. U. W., and said measures are correct, but it is also true that said seceding members, from a legal point, are far more entitled to use the title than the "Select Knights." Drop the "A. O. U. W." and your organization and objects will be welcome in California, but this jurisdiction does not propose to violate well-known law, although it may stand alone in the position. The Degree of Honor has a relationship to the Supreme Lodge, because the Supreme Lodge introduced and promulgated it. The Select Knights have no relationship because their work and degrees are not a part and parcel of its ritual, and totally unauthorized.

The Iowa Workman, the organ of the seceders, continues to publish extracts from the A. O. U. W. papers, as though it was one of the number. It of course is right in printing good articles relating to the value of co-operative insurance, but it ought not to lay any claim to the A. O. U. W. name. We repeat our advice to the seceded Iowa Grand Lodge to act more honestly and cease to sail under false colors. It has no right to use our name.—St. Louis Overseer.

At Rest.

A great throng filled the Independent Church, Oakland, on the afternoon of the 22d ult. to pay a last sad tribute of respect to the memory of a dear friend who has passed away forever. The funeral service over all that is mortal of Mrs. A. W. Collins was most impressive, and brought tears of heartfelt sorrow. The following beautiful tribute to her memory is from the pen of Dr. W. W. McKaig, of the Oakland Tribune:

Time moves on but the past years do not live again. As in nature the flower and fruit life goes on but not the fruit; so mankind lives, but not men. The race continues, the individual dies. The cradle and the coffin and a few swift years between! Death is as common as birth, and yet we never become reconciled to its visits. We stand around the cradle with joy, but we follow the casket that contains the ashes of our dead with tears and sorrow. And yet there ought to be some solace in the reflection, however sad our bereavements, that death is no blunder, no accident, no judgment of wrath, no stupid fatality that strikes in the dark; but is a part of the same plan that made the sun and stars, and appointed unto the leaf and flower their season. It is God's hand softly gloved in the form of natural law that closes the eye and stills the beat of the heart. That infinite thirst of knowledge we possess; that power of thought which sweeps beyond the world of sense and time; that inexhaustible activity of imagination which creates new worlds; our desire for a fuller, richer life; our delight in reverencing something better than ourselves; our imperishable affections and the undying memory of love. What is all this but the silent prophecy and earnest of a grander life?

These desultory thoughts come to us as a tribute to the memory of Lydia M. Collins, wife of A. W. Collins, and daughter of the Hon. N. W. Spaulding of this city, who departed this life Sept. 20, 1883. Mrs. Collins was born in Clinton, Amador county, California, and died at the early age of 26 years, 7 months and 26 days. She leaves two children, a boy 8 years of age, a girl of 5, to whom the sweet name of mother during the long years to come will not only be a beautiful memory, but the visitation of a hope and incentive to a noble life coming from the unseen world. Mrs. Collins was the embodiment of those charming qualities of womanhood we all delight to honor; an amiable neighbor, fond of her home, a devoted wife, a mother whose love and tenderness were mingled with excellent judgment, and a daughter whose affection and developing character were the crowning glory of her parents. We extend to the bereaved our sincere sympathy, accompanied with the hope that her dear name and memory may be to them during the days and years to come as a voice out of the sky, saying, "Look up higher."

RETROSPECTIVE.—The Baltimore Pro- tector in referring to the Oakland reception given to Supreme Master Workman Fish, and the WATCHMAN's report of it, coincides in our opinion concerning the historical as well as oratorical value of the speeches delivered on that occasion. It says: "The various A. O. U. W. Lodges of Oakland, Cal., united to do honor to Supreme Master Workman, M. W. Fish, and gave him a grand reception. The PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN prints the proceedings at length, giving each address entire, or a synopsis. We recognize among the names of participants mentioned many men of eminence, all of them prominent in the A. O. U. W. and well-known and beloved by the entire brotherhood. We deeply regret that we have not space to print the speeches, all of them full of eloquence and instruction, abounding in graceful oratory, giving a concise and interesting history of the Order. Not the least noteworthy was that of the Supreme Master Workman. We hope in the future to make extracts from some of the addresses, which are brilliant gems, forming a beautiful casket of Occidental brilliancy—a valuable addition to A. O. U. W. literature."

There are in Canada 20,000 good and true men who should have a $2,000 beneficiary certificate in the A. O. U. W., the safest and cheapest system of insurance in the country. Brothers, go out and compel your worthy neighbors to come in and share the humane provision assured by our institution.—Canadian Workman.

Opinions of S. M. W. Fish on Ohio.

Supreme Master Workman Fish has addressed the following letter to Grand Master Workman Pickens of Ohio, as commenting upon a circular letter issued by the latter:

OFFICE SUPREME MASTER WORKMAN, }
OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 6, 1883. }

WALTER PICKENS, G. M. W., A. O. U. W.—Dear Brother: I have read with much interest and gratification your circular letter in the Ohio Journal for July. Like yourself, I anticipate "an unprecedented growth of our Order during the coming year" in your jurisdiction. I confidently believe you will find the separation from the Supreme Lodge in your Beneficiary Department a stimulus to more rapid growth. The great and prosperous State you represent, second to none in material prosperity, and having so many natural and acquired advantages, should very soon have a membership equal to any jurisdiction in our great brotherhood.

There can be no more favorable territory for the prosecution of our work than the State of Ohio, especially outside the large cities, and I earnestly hope, and confidentially expect that the anticipations of your circular may be fully and speedily realized. I am, very sincerely, yours in C. H. and P., M. W. FISH, S. M. W.

Supreme Recorder Sackett writes from Meadville, Pa.: "I have just received the WATCHMAN and am pleased to note the reception extended to Bro. Fish. I wish I could have been there. It takes California Workmen to bring out the beauties of the A. O. U. W. to fullest extent."

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

ANIMAL TRAP.—Wm. H. Reed, S. F. No. 284,759. Dated Sept. 11, 1883. This is an improvement on that class of animal traps known as the "gravitating platform trap." The invention consists in the peculiar weighted platform. The platform is arranged to oscillate, and suitable weights return it to its position. The animal in trying to reach the bait steps on the edge of the platform, which gives way and drops him into water or the box. The platform, relieved of the animal's weight, resumes its normal position again immediately.

FLOOR CLAMP.—Henry D. Margot, Mountain View, Santa Clara Co. No. 284,747. Dated Sept. 11, 1883. This is a machine for adjusting the matched stuff of floors and ceilings so that each board may be fitted and secured to its place with accuracy. The object of the invention is to force the boards to their place and hold them until secured, with the exercise of little power and without damage to the boards. It may be used for floors or ceilings.

THRILL COUPLING.—John McLaughlin, San Rafael, Cal. No. 284,750. Dated September 11, 1883. This improvement for connecting the shafts or poles, to vehicles, consists of plates projecting from slips upon the front axle, and having slots adapted to receive the cross bars of links which are rigidly fixed to the shafts.

VEHICLE SPRING.—Neil L. McAdam, S. F. No. 284,748. Dated Sept. 11, 1883. This consists of a combination of springs and a series of suspending rods producing an oscillating as well as an elastic movement of the body. It also consists of such combination and arrangement of the springs that they serve as braces to the rear axle, and their front ends are so mounted that no bolster is necessary.

HARROW, ROLLER AND SEEDER.—James R. Bane, Gilroy. No. 284,709. Dated Sept. 11, 1883. This is a combined harrow, roller and seeder of peculiar construction, an effective and easy working agricultural implement being provided. An intelligible description would be difficult without the aid of engravings.

A Short History of Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, A. O. U. W.

[By SAM BOOTH, P. M. W.]

The secession of the Grand Lodge of Iowa was brought to the notice of the Lodge by D. D. G. M. W. Mayhew on March 23d and the matter fully discussed, the unanimous feeling of the Lodge being one of loyalty to the Supreme Lodge and condemnation of the rebellious faction in Iowa.

The Grand Lodge of California met April 4, 1882, in Dashaway Hall, San Francisco, two of the representatives from Excelsior being honored by appointment on important committees, and one, Bro. F. S. Poland, subsequently receiving the appointment of District Deputy Grand Master for his district, succeeding Bro. H. H. Mayhew in the position. As there were many brethren from the country attending the session of the Grand Lodge, Excelsior, assisted by the ladies of Golden Dawn, D. of H., No. 10, made arrangements for

Another "Open Meeting"

Thursday evening, April 6th, extending the hospitalities of the Lodge to such of the visiting brethren as might find it convenient to attend. Tables extending the entire length of Mayberry's large hall were laid for some three hundred guests with everything that could please the eye or tempt the appetite, and deftly attended by the fair ladies of Golden Dawn. Nor was the "feast of reason and the flow of soul" less enjoyable than the more material banquet. A programme of a high order of merit, consisting of music, interspersed with recitations and short speeches in response to toasts and sentiments, was participated in by members of the Lodge, Bros. P. G. M. W. William H. Jordan, G. M. W. William H. Barnes, P. M. W. Reading of Fidelity, 136, and others; the whole entertainment being most happily conceived and admirably carried out, abundantly illustrating the happy effects of the two Orders working together in harmonious conjunction.

On the evening of June 15th Excelsior had again the honor of entertaining delegations from several of the "down town" Lodges, when, in addition to the regular programme furnished by members of the Lodge, complimentary speeches were made by the spokesmen of the various visiting brethren, viz.: Bros. Danforth and Jordan of Spartan, Reading of Fidelity, Payson of Franklin, Geisler of Memorial, Wilson of Burns, and Brown of Unity.

July 6th the following officers, having been regularly elected for the term ending Dec. 31, 1882, were duly installed by D. D. G. M., Frank S. Poland: M. W., Bro. J. F. Jenness; F., Geo. A. Bordwell; O., J. W. Howard; Recorder, A. T. Ruthrauff (re-elected); Financier, J. S. Rolls (re-elected); Receiver, J. Jacobs (re-elected); G., F. L. Southack; I. W., J. H. Humphreys; O. W., John L. Beck; Trustee, J. G. James; Librarian, S. A. White; Organist, F. C. Hahn; Physicians, Doctors A. L. Sobey and Chas. H. Steele. The Trustees at this time reported Under their control—library, piano, furniture, etc., to the value of about $950, together with U. S. Bonds worth $720, and the Receiver a cash balance on hand of $537.38, while 181 brethren were reported in good standing in the Lodge.

In the meantime, as the Lodge increased in membership and the library was continually enlarged by the donation and purchase of new books, increased conveniences and better accommodations were imperatively demanded, and finally on September 7, 1882, a committee reported that they had

Procured Masonic Hall,

Corner of Sixteenth and Valencia streets. It was considerably nearer the city and further from the center of where most of the members of the Lodge reside than a majority could have wished, but it seemed the best that could be done under the circumstances, and endurance of the old accommodations (or the lack of them) had long ceased to be a virtue. A dispensation to move was obtained and the Lodge took possession of its new quarters October 5th. On account of the lack of room in the old building and the trouble incidental to removal the annual open meeting had been postponed until the Lodge had got settled in its new hall. Invitations, however, were issued for the Lodge anniversary and a sort of house-warming at the same time, and on the evening of October 12th, a brilliant assemblage responded, filling the large hall to its utmost capacity. The usual excellent programme given by Excelsior on similar occasions was again performed (introduced by P. M. W. Sam Booth), among the numbers being an original song setting forth the trials and tribulations the Lodge had endured while

"Hunting a New Lodge Hall,"

And exulting in having at last found one. At the conclusion of the regular programme an incident not down on the bills but one conveying considerable pleasure and satisfaction to the participants was introduced. Bro. S. A. White took the floor, and calling up the manager of the entertainment, in a brief but most complimentary speech, presented him, in the name of a number of his friends in the Lodge, with a fine gold P. M. W. badge, as a token of their admiration and esteem. It was a genuine surprise to the recipient, who responded in such grateful terms as his gratification and astonishment would permit. The guests then adjourned to an adjoining hall, where a somewhat late but plentiful repast ended a most enjoyable evening.

Various Amendments

Had from time to time since the organization of the Lodge been introduced, and after more or less discussion disposed of either by indefinite postponement or lost for lack of the requisite majorities, but on Nov. 9th an amendment came up on its final passage appropriating twenty-five per cent of the general fund of the Lodge "for investment." This was amended to read, "for the accumulation of a fund, for the purchase of a building lot and the erection of a hall thereon for Lodge purposes, and such other uses as may be advantageous to the Lodge." In this shape the amendment passed and became the law of the Lodge, thus laying the foundation of a scheme which had been the hope and ambition of some of the most energetic members of the Lodge, to wit: the building and owning a hall of its own.

About this time a series of meetings of the various Lodges comprising the Metropolitan districts had been suggested by D. D. G. M. W. Frank S. Poland in a meeting of the Deputies and acted upon with admirable results. During the closing months of 1882

Mass Meetings of the Lodges

Composing the several districts were held in the various Lodge rooms in town, presided over by the Deputy of the district. The idea was most admirably conceived as calculated to promote good fellowship among the Lodges and the membership, and as bringing together the best minds in the Order for the suggestion and discussion of practical subjects for the good of all, or for opportunities of social enjoyment.

On the evening of Dec. 14th, the Lodges of the district of which Excelsior forms a part, met in Excelsior's hall. In addition to numerous Lodge delegations the Lodge was honored by the presence of G. M. W. William H. Barnes, G. R. H. G. Pratt, District Deputies, D. G. M. W., Loud, Danforth, McKay and Thompson and others. After the visitors had been entertained by a programme of music and literary exercises participated in by members of the Lodge, remarks were made by the Grand officers, Deputies and visiting brethren, and a useful, and pleasant meeting enjoyed.

The regular semi-annual election of officers took place Dec. 28th, the Recorder casting the ballot of the Lodge for the following: M. W., Geo. A. Bordwell; F., John W. Howard; O., F. L. Southack; Recorder, A. T. Ruthrauff, re-elected fifth time; Financier, J. S. Rolls, re-elected fourth time; Receiver, Jos. Jacobs, re-elected second time; G., T. H. Humphrey; I. W., Richard Herring; O. W., John L. Beck; Trustees, R. Grey (who failing to qualify was succeeded by William White), who were all duly installed by D. D. G. M. Frank S. Poland. For Physicians, Drs. Sobey and Steele were re-elected, and for Delegates to the Grand Lodge, P. M. W. S. Booth, F. S. Poland and C. J. Maurer.

Early in the new session a feeling akin to dismay was created among the members of the Lodge, by a report that the lessees of the hall desired them to vacate the premises, and no wonder, when all their former experience in trying to find a suitable meeting place was thought of. But as it takes uncommon emergencies to raise people to endeavor to attain more than ordinary achievements, so it seemed as if it needed some such crisis as this to rouse the Lodge to the determination to go to work in downright earnest to get

A Hall of Their Own.

The project was again revived and discussed in their Lodge meetings, and those who had been strongest in opposition to the plan heretofore, were either silenced or came over in favor of it. A committee was appointed to look out a suitable location, and on reporting favorably of one, the three Trustees with two additional members of the Lodge were appointed a building committee and authorized to complete the purchase of the lot, and recommend ways and means for raising the money to pay for it. The Trustees subsequently reported that they had realized on the U. S. Bonds owned by the Lodge, bought the lot, and recommended that the members of the Lodge incorporate as a joint stock company and subscribe for such amount of stock as they were individually able and willing to take, the Trustees to invest the money belonging to the Lodge and retain in its behalf a par amount interest in the incorporation, and to buy in for its benefit the stock held by individuals at such time and manner as might be for the advantage of the Lodge.

The ten per cent heretofore appropriated to the library was temporarily withdrawn and such other legislation was effected as tended to economize in Lodge expenses and turn money into the building fund. Such in brief is an outline of the plan for erecting and owning a new Lodge hall. At the present writing the Trustees report enough of the stock subscribed to warrant them in going ahead with the enterprise. The committee on building site, at the time they gave in their report on that matter, reported also that Blair's lower hall could be rented for the use of the Lodge, and they were authorized to engage it, and there the Lodge moved back to its old starting point where it was first organized, May 1, 1883.

Such is the brief chronicle of Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, and while it lays no claim to be considered a model Lodge—for being human it has made mistakes—yet its history and status on the whole is such as to afford reasonable satisfaction and pride to its members. Its personnel is respectable, and much above the average both in respect to social standing and intellectual caliber, for it has been its aim to secure quality rather than quantity in its membership. Its physical and moral status may be best inferred from the fact that during its nearly four years of existence it has never been called upon but once to attend the funeral of any of its members, it has never been called upon to expel a member for any cause except non-payment of dues, and, of

Over Two Hundred

Members who have signed its rolls, there are probably not more than half a dozen who are not now in good standing on its books. All of its public entertainments have been of a high order, and its Lodge programmes of more than ordinary merit. Its officers have invariably been men of more than average ability, for it has become the unwritten law of the Lodge that none other shall be nominated for even the lower offices, and having served faithfully in these, they earn the right to promotion and become better qualified to fill the higher ones. Mediocrity has never been tolerated in anything by the Lodge. To this system is due the fact that the work of the Lodge is always well done, its business transacted in a dignified and proper manner, its discussions kept free from wrangling and personality, and to this may also be attributed much of the success which has attended it.

With all these advantages in the past, secure in present success, with two hundred good men in good standing, an excellent and continually growing library of its own, the certain prospect of soon being able to meet in its own hall, Excelsior may reasonably look forward to a career of increased prosperity and success in the future.

Excelsior Hall.

Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, is going ahead with its new hall enterprise, and the doubts of those who were skeptical about its ultimate erection are being dissolved by the inexorable logic of accomplished facts. The articles of incorporation were signed and recorded some weeks ago, and at a meeting of the stockholders the following were elected trustees of the incorporation: J. G. James, Chairman; L. A. Boynton, Treasurer; Wm. White, Chas. Nelson, I. T. Milliken, Thos. V. O'Brien and F. S. Poland, with J. R. Helen for Secretary. Of the $10,000 nominal capital of the association, considerably more than one-half has been already subscribed by individual members of the Lodge, and subscriptions for the remainder, including what the Lodge can handle, are assured beyond a doubt. The first installment of 20 per cent has been paid in. Plans for the building, including an elegant hall for society purposes, a smaller hall for the library and committee meetings, together with the necessary ante-rooms, cloak rooms, closets, etc., on the second floor; a store on the ground floor, and rooms which can be utilized for a dining hall and living rooms for janitor, over the main hall and library, have been drawn up by the architect, Mr. Geo. A. Bordwell, and accepted by the trustees. The front elevation will be of three stories, surmounted by a square tower and flagstaff, with a large projecting window in the second story. The style of architecture will be the Eastlake, so much in vogue at present, and the general appearance of the structure will be elegant, and an ornament to the block in which it is built. The lot (situate on the east side of Mission street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth), has been already graded, and the contract for the building awarded, so that in a few months Excelsior will be able to greet its friends "beneath its own vine and fig tree," so to speak, "with none to molest or make afraid." As this is the first instance in this jurisdiction of a Lodge building and owning its own hall, a committee was appointed some weeks ago to take into consideration the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone of the new building. Considering the importance of the enterprise and the struggles through which the Lodge has passed to its present condition, it was thought some recognition ought to be taken of the event. The following were appointed for this purpose: Sam Booth, H. H. Mayhew, W. G. Jobson, W. S. Pierce, A. R. Gunnison, F. S. Poland, and the presiding Master of the Lodge, J. W. Howard, and doubtless in due time a programme will be arranged worthy of the Lodge and the occasion.

A Noble Charity.

The following circular has been issued by the Directors of the California Association for the Care and Training of Feeble-minded Children, and already it is being nobly responded to:

It is believed that the time has now come for the establishment of an institution in California for the care and training of feeble-minded children, similar to those in operation in Europe and most of the Eastern States. Several meetings have been held with reference to this work, and a Board of Directors has been elected and incorporated under the laws of the State.

It has been ascertained that the services of a most efficient superintendent, teacher, and attendant can be obtained from the oldest institution of the United States, provided sufficient funds can be secured for the support of the enterprise.

The undersigned, Directors of the proposed institution, asks all of those who are charitably disposed to aid in this necessary and most noble work. The plan of the institution, from its nature, must be beyond the scope of individual enterprise. It is not designed for the wealthy alone, who will render ample compensation, but for those poor and needy cases from all parts of the State for whom there is no place in any other educational institution, and who would otherwise be left to suffer and sink into fatuity, to which their condition inevitably tends. The desire of those interested in behalf of this class of unfortunates—of which, from our last census returns, there are 500 in this State—is simply that they may be provided with accommodations adapted to their comfort, and supplied with an education of the most practical character, promoting their usefulness, their happiness, and the public good. All doubts as to the practicability of educating feeble-minded children have now been removed, and it has ceased to be regarded as an experiment. The necessity and utility of institutions for this unhappy class are everywhere acknowledged; and all demands for their benefit are cheerfully met by the people of the State in which they are located. It is a fact certified by all leaders in this work that 80 per cent. of this class in such institutions are rendered self-supporting. One-half of this number are returned to their homes cured; and in the case of children, even a greater percentage. The educational processes which produce such happy results have now for a long time been reduced to an exact system; and the beneficent influence of institutions founded for this purpose is attested by official reports from every State where they exist. We have in California no provision whatever for this afflicted class. Can there be a worthier charity, or one which more deeply appeals to our humanity and our sense of justice? Will not every reader of this circular take an active part in this great work, and those who can by contributions, and all by personal effort and influence, aid in its successful foundation?

We invoke upon our enterprise the blessing of Him who through His inspired apostle enjoined upon us to "comfort the feeble-minded." ### It Brought Them.

We have heard of Lodges whose members failed to attend meetings. There are none in this city that have any reason to complain of their attendance, but the following unique invitation, sent out by the Recorder of Reliance Lodge, might be of good service in other cases and is worth trying:

Brothers: The usual meeting of the Lodge will be held next Tuesday evening, 15th inst., at the usual place and usual time (8 o'clock), and doubtless by the usual corporal's guard of ten or twelve "regulars." The other hundred and odd members will probably, as usual, donate this notice to the overcrowded cause of waste paper, and, as usual, stay at home. Sometime soon we hope to see an unusual meeting—an old-fashioned live one, with forty or fifty present. It would be very encouraging. We need encouragement now-a-days, we're so lonely. Maybe, if you ain't too tired, you'll conclude to come around next Tuesday evening and cheer us up a little. It is a good time of year to come. The circus has gone and the ice cream crop is not quite ripe enough yet to pull. Besides, we are just aching to see if we can recognize you without an introduction. In C., H. and P.,

M. S. CLARK, Recorder.

The result was an unusual meeting, one-half of the Lodge being present.—Baltimore Protector.

A DISPATCH from Vienna states that Russia is making extensive military preparations along the Austrian and German frontier. Enormous provision depots have been established on the frontier, and an army corps has been distributed between the Vistula and the big rivers.

Russian Meat for England.

As we have stated from time to time, the refrigerator industry in animal products is continually extending. The success which has attended the shipment of frozen meat from the United States, South America and Australia to Great Britain has induced other producing districts to endeavor to get a share of the profitable trade. The latest to enter the lists, according to our last London exchanges, is Russia. We read as follows:

On Thursday 1,600 quarters of beef from Russia was landed in the St. Katherine's dock by the Russian Produce Company, who have now received their seventh cargo of beef, realizing thereon a profit, after paying all expenses, of 1d. a pound on the consignments, which have yielded an average in the Metropolitan market of 5½d. wholesale. The idea of the company is to utilize the port of Liban in the Baltic, which is the terminus of a trunk line of railway traversing the whole extent from north to south of Russia. At present they are confining their attention to fresh beef, but they profess to see their way to bringing mutton, butter, eggs, and indeed anything that will bear a three or four days' passage. They have a steamer chartered for their commencing business, called the Nep-tuno, which has just made the run of 1,000 miles in four days, bringing to market a cargo in capital condition. The cattle which have hitherto been brought to this country in the shape of beef by the company have come from the neighborhood of Romni, near Pultuva, in the south of Russia, where, it is said, there is a large supply.

The English are quite pleased with the success which is attending the dead meat importation. The constant dread of the country is the introduction of animal diseases from the United States and the continent of Europe. They dread the coming of infection to their island herds quite as earnestly as we do the leprosy or yellow fever, and their laws against the importation of sick animals are as long as the traditional moral law. If they could escape all this by having all the meat reach the country drawn and quartered, a great sense of relief would pervade the country.

The Thirsty Eucalyptus.

Where there is surplus moisture to dispose of, as, for example, a cesspool to keep dry, a large eucalyptus will accomplish not a little and a group of them will dispose of a vast amount of house sewage. But if you have water which you do not wish to exhaust, as in a good well, it would be wise to put the eucalyptus very far away. Mr. Daniel Swett, of Bay Island farm, Alameda county, recently found a curious root formation of the eucalyptus in the bottom of his well, about sixteen feet below the surface. The tree to which the roots belonged stands fifty feet from the well. Two shoots pierced through the brick wall of the well, and sending out millions of fibres, formed a dense mat that completely covered the bottom of the well. Most of these fibres are no larger than thread, and are so woven and intertwined as to form a mat, as impenetrable and strong as though regularly woven in a loom. The mat when first taken out of the well was water-soaked and covered with mud, and nearly all a man could lift, but when dry it was almost as soft to touch as wool, and weighed only a few ounces. This is a good illustration of how the eucalyptus absorbs moisture, its roots going so far to find water, pushing themselves through a brick wall, and then developing enormously after the water is reached. Mr. Swett thinks one of the causes of the drying up of wells is the insatiable thirst of these vegetable monsters.

"I HAVE been married for several weeks, and my husband and I cannot decide whether we should retain our old love letters or burn them. What would you advise? Mrs. C." Put them in a pasteboard box in the servant girl's room. A supply of old love letters has been known to keep a girl contented in one place for three months at a time.—Ex.

WOODWORTH, SCHELL & Co. (of which firm Bro. J. B. Curtis, P. M. W. of Fidelity, is business manager), have moved to No. 101 Stockton St., corner of O'Farrell. As heretofore they will keep for sale a large and fine stock of pianos and organs, among the former being the Henry F. Miller and Hemme & Long pianos. They will also rent or sell on installments.

THE exhibition of Bro. John N. Sievers, from the Metropolitan Nurseries, in the Mechanics' Pavilion, is one of the best made in the history of our State. At his depot, No. 25 Post St., parties wishing decorations of private rooms, churches, public halls, floral works for funerals or weddings, can find the choicest in quality and arranged in the best taste and style.

Death of an Engineer.

S. S. Montague, widely known on this coast as Chief Engineer of the Central Pacific railroad, died this week at the end of the track of the California and Oregon railroad beyond Redding. Deceased was about fifty years of age, and leaves a wife and family of children living in Oakland. He entered the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Co. early in its history as assistant to Chief Engineer Judah, who died shortly after the commencement of the company's great work, and surveyed the route across the Sierra. In making this route he accomplished feats then without a parallel in railroad engineering, gaining an elevation of seven thousand feet in seventy or eighty miles and dropping down three thousand feet in twenty-five miles into the Truckee basin. He was Chief Engineer of the San Joaquin valley railroad as far as Goshen, and the California and Oregon roads, his death occurring while at work extending the latter road north into Oregon. He selected all the routes, ran all the lines and made all the grades of these roads.

The Central Pacific is an enduring monument of his engineering genius. English surveyors had come over here, and after seeing the obstacles to be overcome, and the nature of the country the road was to traverse, announced its accomplishment an impossibility; yet to-day the cars round "Cape Horn" and skirt Blue canyon at dizzy heights with perfect safety. He conquered the rugged ridges and the winter snow avalanches with sixteen or seventeen tunnels, and about thirty or forty miles of snowshed. Chief Engineer Judah died March 11, 1863, just after the first ground had been turned for the construction of the Central Pacific railroad. The work of construction began January 1, 1863, so that Mr. Judah had little more than two months' superintendence of the actual work. He had, however, surveyed the line some distance east, in which work Mr. Montague had assisted. After his death Mr. Montague had full charge of the work, although he was not regularly elected Chief Engineer until March 31, 1868. He had the peculiarity of not being wedded to theories or traditions, but struck out boldly, and carried out many things which to older engineers seemed impossible. Messrs. Stanford and Crocker, the managers, would often state that they would like the road to run to such and such a place, and through a given country. Although the authorities would say that this could not be done, and notwithstanding that older men would resign rather than oppose such authorities, Mr. Montague would at once set about the work of discovering how the work could be performed, and usually succeeded in carrying out the directors' wishes.

COMPLIMENTARY SAMPLES OF THIS PAPER are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give their own patronage, and, as far as practicable, aid in circulating the journal, and making its value more widely known to others, and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $3 a year. Extra copies mailed for 10 cents, if ordered soon enough. Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times), by turning a leaf.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time they intend to pay for it, let them not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some responsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Easy Binder.

Dewey's patent elastic binder, for periodicals, music and other printed sheets, is the handiest, best and cheapest of all economical and practical file binders. Newspapers are quickly placed in it and held neatly, as in a cloth-bound book. It is durable and so simple a child can use it. Price, size of Mining and Scientific Press, Rural Press, Watchman, Fraternal Record, Home Journal, Harper's Weekly, and Scientific American, 75 cents; postage, 10 cents. Postpaid to subscribers of this paper, 10 cents. Send for illustrated circular. Agents wanted.

Successful Patent Solicitors.

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific Coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is new and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That this is understood and appreciated, is evidenced by the number of patents issued through the SCIENTIFIC PRESS Patent Agency (S. F.) from week to week and year to year.

CARELESS HANDLING OF MACHINERY.—The ignorance displayed by many persons in charge of machinery is amazing. A gentleman who has spent the greater portion of his years in operating, selling and setting up wood-working machinery, ventures the remark that the majority of machine operators are incompetent to fill their positions. To substantiate this he relates numerous incidents coming under his notice, in which either lamentable ignorance or gross carelessness is displayed, and which seem to corroborate his statement. This gentleman finds that in far the greater number of instances, machinery does not work well because it is not kept in good working order. It may be carefully set up in the first place, but a few months' wear, unless under the care of a competent attendant, tends to bring about a very different state of affairs. Machinery that is run at such high speeds as most wood-cutting tools, will not remain in good shape very long if it is not closely watched. A good attendant will not only know when a machine is doing poor work, but will also know why it does so, and will at once proceed to correct the fault.—Wood-worker.

THE aggregate production of coal in Belgium in the first half of this year is officially returned at 9,006,643 tons. Of this production 6,657,896 tons were raised in the Mons district, and 2,348,547 tons in the Liege district. The number of collieries in activity in the Mons district was 82, and in the Liege basin 69, making an aggregate of 151. The production of pig iron in Belgium in the first half of this year is officially returned at 368,503 tons, viz: casting pig, 33,219 tons; refining pig, 270,853 tons, and pig for steel, 64,431 tons. The production of iron in the same period is returned at 228,761 tons, viz: rails and plates, 59,434 tons, and other descriptions, 169,327 tons. The production of steel was 177,707 tons, of which 95,786 tons were cast steel, ingots, etc., and the balance rails, plates, etc.

A NEW AND WONDERFUL GUN.—At a lecture lately delivered at the Civil Service Institute in London, Colonel Fosbery created a sensation by suddenly drawing from its place of hiding, under the table, a wonderful new gun, which he had just brought from Liege. He called it a "baby electric gun." It looked like a pretty carbine, but it had no mechanism, and could not possibly go off until connected up to the source of electric force. This done, it could be fired with amazing rapidity, 104 rounds having a few days before been fired from it by its inventor, M. Pieper, of Liege, in two minutes. Col. Fosbery fired two rounds with infinitesimal powder charges. He had prepared himself by secreting under his vest a small circuit of wire and putting on a banderole, supporting what looked like a two-ounce vial, but was, in fact, an electric accumulator, with sufficient stored-up energy to discharge 2,000 rounds. The cartridges were innocent looking mites, and contained no detonating substances—nothing, in fact, but simple powder and a wad.

EVIDENTLY inventors think we stand in need of a substitute for the time-honored cast iron pulley. We now have the wrought iron pulley with cast hub and spokes, the wood pulley with cast hub, the paper pulley with cast hub, the wood rim pulley with cast spokes and hub, and several yet to hear from. It looks as if either the inventors of these had made a mistake, or the cast iron pulley must go.—Wood-worker.

A NEW YORK lumber dealer recently imported from the Pyrenees a walnut log which is twelve feet long and nine feet in diameter, and weighs 22,000 pounds. It is estimated to be worth $2,000 as it lies, and when it is sawed into veneering it will yield 66,000 feet, which will be worth $5,000.

THE HARMON SEMINARY,

BERKELEY, CAL.

A First-Class Boarding School for Young Ladies.

THE NEXT TERM WILL BEGIN THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1883.

WHAT IS SAID OF THE INSTITUTION:

It is not second to any school for young ladies in the State. The building is new and perfect in its arrangements for health and comfort. The situation is admirable, and commands a view of sea and mountain that I have not found surpassed on the continent.—Rev. R. L. Breck, D. D., in The Occident.

It is a well-ordered and popular institution in a favorite location.—The Pacific.
I have known Mr. and Mrs. Harmon for many years. They are successful educators, and know what a seminary for young ladies should be.—Extract from address of Prof. Martin Kellogg, University of California.

Mrs. F. W. Harmon is emphatically an educator in every sense of the word. Her name is almost a household word throughout the length and breadth of this coast.—Advocate.

In all courses there is a disposition to place the institution abreast of all true progress in the art of instruction and choice of studies for the curriculum.—Oakland Times.

The school is a good place to give girls and young ladies the best there is in boarding-school life and studies.—

garding the validity of Patents and Assignments; Every legitimate branch of Patent Soliciting promptly and thoroughly conducted.

Our intimate knowledge of the various inventions of this coast, and long practice in patent business, enable us to abundantly satisfy our patrons; and our success and business are constantly increasing.

The shrewdest and most experienced Inventors are found among our most steadfast friends and patrons, who fully appreciate our advantages in bringing valuable inventions to the notice of the public through the columns of our widely circulated, first-class journals—thereby facilitating their introduction, sale and popularity.

Foreign Patents.

In addition to American Patents, we secure, with the assistance of co-operative agents, claims in all foreign countries which grant Patents, including Great Britain, France, Belgium, Prussia, Austria, Baden, Peru, Russia, Spain, British India, Saxony, British Columbia, Canada, Norway, Sweden, Mexico, Victoria, Brazil, Bavaria, Holland, Denmark,
Italy, Portugal, Cuba, Roman States,
Wurtemberg, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Brazil, New Granada, Chile, Argentine Republic, AND EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD where Patents are obtainable.

No models are required in European countries, but the drawings and specifications should be prepared with thoroughness, by able persons who are familiar with the requirements and changes of foreign patent laws—agents who are reliable and thoroughly established.

Our schedule price for obtaining foreign patents, in all cases, will always be as low, and in some instances lower, than those of any other responsible agency.

We can and do get foreign patents for inventors in the Pacific States from two to six months (according to the location of the country)
SOONER than other agents.

The principal portion of the patent business of this coast has been done, and is still being done, through our agency. We are familiar with, and have full records, of all former cases, and can more correctly judge of the value and patentability of most inventions discovered here than any other agents.

Situated so remote from the seat of Government, delays are even more dangerous to the inventors of the Pacific Coast than to applicants in the Eastern States. Valuable patents may be lost by extra time consumed in transmitting specifications from Eastern agencies back to this coast for the signature of the inventor.

Confidential.

We take great pains to preserve secrecy in all confidential matters, and applicants for patents can rest assured that their communications and business transactions will be held strictly confidential by us. Circulars of information to inventors, free.

Home Counsel.

Our long experience in obtaining patents for inventors on this Coast has familiarized us with the character of most of the inventions already patented; hence we are frequently able to save our patrons the cost of a fruitless application by pointing to them the same thing already covered by a patent. We are always free to advise applicants of any knowledge we have of previous applicants which will interfere with their obtaining a patent.

We invite the acquaintance of all parties connected with inventions and patent right business, believing that the mutual conference of legitimate business and professional men is mutual gain. Parties in doubt in regard to their rights as assignees of patents or purchasers of patented articles, can often receive advice of importance to them from a short call at our office.

Remittances of money, made by individual inventors to the Government, sometimes miscarry, and it has repeatedly happened that applicants have not only lost their money, but their inventions also, from this cause and consequent delay. We hold ourselves responsible for all fees intrusted to our agency.

Engravings.

We have superior artists in our employ, and all facilities for producing fine and satisfactory illustrations of inventions and machinery, for newspaper, book, circular and other printed illustrations, and are always ready to assist patrons in bringing their valuable discoveries into practical and profitable use.

A Voice from England.

The following interesting letter from London, England, will give our readers an idea of how pictures of California scenery and products of California enterprise are regarded in the metropolis of the Old World, and also a little insight into the general condition of the middle classes:

EDITORS PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN:—I have been favored by reading a very in-see such a love of unity and combination as you can show. Looking at the number of Lodges and the number of members in each district, the result is truly wonderful and equally gratifying. We English are not slow to perceive the indomitable perseverance and pluck shown in the "States" by our American cousins, in the arts, manufactures and leading novelties of the day. They are far beyond us in skill, quality and finish of workmanship, and this must be highly gratifying to all United Workmen.

best wishes, and truest feelings of respect and esteem, for all your numerous friends and residents at San Francisco. I hope you will excuse the length of this letter, but I felt that I ought not to allow such a good opportunity to pass of testifying to the worth and importance of the WATCHMAN. It is a splendid paper, and I truly wish it a splendid circulation, which no doubt it has. I am a man of family, at present unemployed, and cannot obtain employment in this vast city of London. I would gladly emigrate, and so would thousands more poor men if they teresting number of your very valuable and entertaining journal, the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, of Aug. 1st. This number had found its way over to London offices. We were astonished at the truly colossal and magnificent specimen big tree "Wawona," Mariposa grove, so cleverly drawn and illustrated on the front page. There are hundreds and thousands of our fellow countrymen and women who would never dream of such magnificent trees, lovely country, prosperous trade and energetic people existing, as we can learn by the perusal of your valuable little newspaper or periodical. And while we are now eulogizing the merits and value of this exemplary medium and organ of such a large and prosperous Order as the A. O. U. W., we will not omit to say a few words on the great advantages of such a valuable "friendly society." In England we rarely without recording with mute astonishment and wonder the enormous growth and improvements in San Francisco. Twenty years ago and upwards we were informed by some Cornish miners in the west of England about the condition of San Francisco at that time. The town was said to be beset by the most lawless class—men of all nations having been attracted by the gold diggings. Murders and robberies were said to be of common daily occurrence. Now we read of a magnificent city of colossal proportions, supplied by railways throughout the Pacific States. But we are certain it is not by reading alone that we can form any adequate opinion. We must see and witness for ourselves these advantages. While we reflect at home upon your commercial greatness and prosperity, we must in all cases assure you of our hearty and

The Fireside.

Unanswered.

He dwelt on the mountains, and day by day
The sweet music followed with staff and gun
But the sadder grew as the shadows gray
Possessed the pines, and the day was done.
Then he saw not the moon or the evening star,
But ever sought out with his longing gaze
A twinkling light in the valley afar,
Where a cottage crouched in a garden's maze.
And oft in the silence he made his moan:
"What valley maiden lives there alone?"

One day his passion-stricken heart he wrote
In burning words on a bit of bark,
Which, dressed with heather, he set afloat
On the torrent's bosom—a fairy ark—
That still might bear to the valley maid
If maid there was, that he watched of nights.
The tale of one who had grown afraid
Of solitude on the airy heights.
"It may be," he thought, "that she never knows
Of the rocks and rills where the heather blows."

She lived in the valley, and all day long
Her garden tended with beaming eyes,
But ever at eve, when the night-bird's song
Rang sharp, she turned to her cot with sighs.
Nor marked the moon or the evening star,
But suffered her lingering gaze to rest
On a light that glanced from the crags afar,
Where a cabin clung like an eagle's nest.
And of all low to her heart she said:
"What mountain hunter there rests his head?"

One day the tale of her longing sweet,
With a wreath of roses, she tied with care
To a captive falcon that long had beat
His gilded bars for the mountain air,
And opened the cage, that unto the youth
(If youth indeed on the rocks abode)
Might be borne the story of one whose truth
And beauty alone in the valley glowed.
"It may be," she thought, "that he cannot know,
Of the meadows and streams where roses blow."

The boat of bark, by the wave down led,
Comes sailing at last the maid to greet,
And the soaring hawk, by a bullet sped,
Flutters at last to the hunter's feet;
But he, not reading the tale she tells,
But views in wonder the roses' wreath;
And she but snatches the heather-bells,
Nor marks the message hid underneath.
"O peaks," she sighs, "where the heather blows!"
"O vale," he murmurs, "where blooms the rose!"

Boogar Hill.

"Why, Julia Crayton, you surely are not in earnest. You in love with such a simpleton?"

"Simpleton he is not, Ada Miller. Jonas Hargate is not as dashing a young gentleman as some, but he knows a great deal more than most of them."

"Yes, I admit he is a scholar and a gentleman, and all that; but what does a man amount to if he can't make some kind of show in the world. I want a man of some go ahead—dash if you please; even if he don't know quite so much. Such a man will amount to something in the world."

"In one sense he may."

"Yes, such a man is always successful. He will look out for himself and all belonging to him. His wife won't have to take a back seat at life's show. She'll be down front where she can see and where she can be seen, which is just as important."

"You and I, Ada, look upon life from different standpoints. You seem to consider life as a great show, where every one is striving to see and be seen. I think the most desirable life a quiet home of loving hearts where most of life's work is to be done in blessing others, especially those we love, and that should be, to some extent, everybody we know."

"All nonsense, Julia dear; that would be a very humdrum life to me. No Jonas Hargates for me. I am going to have no man that is content with country life. The city is the home for me; I spent a week with Sue Kelly in the city, and since then I just hate the dull, stupid country."

"I think, Ada, I shall begin to believe there is something in the story some one whispered to me the other day of your partiality for Frank Peters, for though we used to laugh at his conceit and ignorance in the academy, he has dash enough for any city fellow."

"Frank Peters is bound to make his mark in the world, and you may be as much surprised to see me Mrs. Peters as I shall to see you Mrs. Hargate; but nobody knows what may happen."

"Why, Ada Miller! You do surprise me, I must confess. Well, sure enough, who knows what queer things may happen in the world?"

"There is one thing about Frank; I shan't have to do all the love-making. If he wants me he'll be sure to tell me so. If I were the king's daughter, he would have no idea I was any too good for him."

"And it wouldn't put him down any to be refused."

"Not a bit. He'd think it was because I didn't know enough to appreciate him. That's the kind of a fellow I like. He'll stand up for himself, no matter what becomes of the next fellow. You needn't laugh, Julia, that trait's what'll succeed in the world."

"True enough; but that kind of succeeding, in my opinion, is not what gains the true success of life, according to my idea."

"La, Julia! you are one of those early piety girls, I fear, who either die young or live to be an old maid, or late in life become Mrs. Deacon So-and-So, number two."

"Don't distress yourself about that, Ada."

"I don't, Julia dear, for I know so sweet a flower some sensible man will have the sense to pluck, and I hope it will be some man who will be able to set you in a conspicuous place in life, too."

"You are too ambitious for me, Ada. Do you know if I had the choice of my future position in life, it would be that of a farmer's wife."

"Why, Julia Crayton, how shocking you talk! You, a Senator's daughter, the wife of a farmer! I don't know but you will take Jonas after all, for I have heard he thinks of taking his grandfather's old farm and being a farmer, with all his scholarship and learning. The idea, Julia! I'd as soon be buried alive as to be the wife of a farmer, and a Boogar Hill farmer of all other places on the face of the earth!"

"Why, I think it is a splendid place! Don't you know when we went to May ride two years ago, we rode round that way? I never was on that road before."

"Yes, and I remember that Jonas was your Sir Knight on that ride too; and I never could guess how that happened, when I knew there were those who were much smarter in my estimation than Jonas' ambitious of that honor!"

"Do you remember what a beautiful ride it was to get there, and what a lovely view there is from that quaint old farm-house? I am sure I never saw so lovely a place in my life. The grand old cavernous rocks that give the name to Boogar Hill, that rises up and overlooks the place. That beautiful brook that runs across the garden; that long rambling barn with the swallows chattering and laughing and whirling in graceful circles amid the branches of those magnificent elms by the roadside, and the multitude of other birds that seemed to gather there as if a favorite place, altogether made a picture to my mind that can never be forgotten."

"I do believe you fell in love with Jonas and the old grandfather's place at the same time!"

"You need not laugh, Ada, for you are nearer the truth than you may think for."

"And that was two years ago, and nobody suspects you are in love with anybody! Certainly, Jonas will never dare to suspect such a thing."

The light in Julia's eye, had Ada just then noticed it, would have shown that possibly she might have been mistaken. The pollen-laden bee is very sure to find the flower whose life and fruitfulness depend upon its coming, and by some mystical influence hearts that sigh for each other, though separated by continents or oceans, are brought together.

Before two years passed Julia Crayton became Mrs. Hargate, and the mistress of the old farm on Boogar Hill, which she so much admired, and Ada Miller became Mrs. Peters, and the mistress of a city home.

Jonas Hargate was the last person one would have suspected of having agricultural proclivities. Though of medium height, he was slender of form, even to delicacy, and one would have taken him for a doctor, lawyer, minister, or professor, rather than a farmer. He was of a quiet, thoughtful turn, and, like Julia, a great lover of nature, and though apparently lacking in physical strength, capable of great endurance and fond of farmwork, which he did himself as well as hire others to work for him. His father had left him a small capital, and his grandfather had given him the farm on Boogar Hill. In some respects it was a hard farm, and many thought Jonas had an elephant on his hands when he undertook its management. But with the deliberation of a well trained and comprehensive intellect, he looked it over and studied its capacity and adaptability, and directed his efforts accordingly. Many of his old foggy neighbors laughed at first at his odd way of farming, but they soon found that brains and a cultivated mind were more than a match for ignorance and a cast-iron routine in the management of a farm. Old fields were turned into sheep pastures, and old worn-out pastures into cornfields. Swales and swamps, considered heretofore as only serviceable in holding the rest of the farm together, were turned into the most valuable mowing lands.

At first Julia was delighted with the care of the poultry yard, and chickens, ducks and turkeys increased under her admiring administration like magic. She made pets of everything, even the calves and pigs; but especially the lambs, whose innocent gambols she would watch by the hour as she accompanied Jonas to the field, taking with her some light needlework with which to employ herself as she sat in the shade of tree or shrub. This she could do some part of every pleasant day, for under Jonas' management the burdens of the farm-work did not fall heavily on the wife of the household as in former times. The milk was sold at the door. The pails and cans were cleansed carefully by the men in the boiler room of the addition to the barn, where the food for the pigs, poultry and cows was cooked. The help on the farm was boarded in the tenant house on another part of the farm, thus leaving Jonas and Julia by themselves.

But Julia's attention was in time diverted from her outdoor pets to far dearer ones indoors, making her life dear and sweeter even than ever before, and Jonas found a new charm added to his life in the blessings of his children.

Though Julia was now confined mostly to her household, it was a sweet and joyous life to her. The farm on Boogar Hill was all the world to her. She had not lost one jot of her love for the trees, the brooks, the rugged hillside, the songs of the birds, the sweet sounds of rural life and the gambols of the lambs frisking and skipping in the pasture. She never tired of her home. Her love for husband and children filled her heart and made life ever fresh and new to her.

Nor were she and Ada long at a time strangers to each other. It was but at long intervals that she went to the city, but Ada was often in the country. City life for a few years seemed to satisfy her ambition, but its artificial and hollow and selfish character at length became fully revealed to her. Even her love of excitement and entertainment began to flag. Frank was proud of his means to place his wife in the front rank of fashion. Wealth was his ambition, not his love of home. Heart he had, but only for self-gratification, and he was perplexed and surprised that Ada's life was not a happy one. She had a stylish city home and all the money she wanted, and could go and come as she pleased, and on all great occasions was announced as one among the leading ladies of fashion and importance in the city. What more could she want?

Once this was the height of her ambition. She possessed it only to find how hollow and unsatisfying it was. Instead of being happy, she was wretched. No sweet young voices ever called her mother. She was often at Boogar Hill where she beheld a happiness no city life could ever equal.—Mass. Plowman.

Purify the Mail Bags.

It is a lamentable fact that the U. S. mail is used for the dissemination of tons of vile and lewd publications which must be working great evil from end to end of the country. The Oakland Tribune has the following plain language on the subject:

Postmaster-General Gresham has issued an order prohibiting the delivery of mail matter to the New Orleans National Bank, for the reason that it is acting as agent of the Louisiana lottery. While the Postmaster-General is about the business of protecting the morals of the people of the country, he should turn his attention to the use made of the mails for transporting those villainous and obscene publications of New York city, which are doing more to corrupt the morals of the people than would a thousand and one lotteries. While lotteries are patronized almost wholly by adults, who are of sufficient age not to be demoralized to any great extent, the obscene prints of New York go into the hands of the young, are displayed upon bulletin boards to the gaze of men, women and children, and are debauching the morals and cultivating a taste for the obscene, which is ruinous and demoralizing to the rising generation.

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

Familiarity with these obscene prints sent out by the thousands and tens of thousands through the United States mails to every nook and corner of the land, serves to blunt the modesty of old and young, and to cultivate a vicious taste for moral depravity and licentiousness. They are educating the young in a school of profligacy and lewdness which will bear terrible fruits if suffered to continue. What would have caused the blush of shame to mantle the cheeks of every decent man and woman in the land a few years ago, are now gazed upon with perfect nonchalance, or, what is worse, with feelings of unhallowed lewdness. It confirms the idea advanced by the poet—the vice which was at first abhorred is being embraced with impunity. Here is presented a field for good and effective work if the Postmaster-General desires to prevent the United States mails from being used as a vehicle for the dissemination of that which is demoralizing to the people; and we recommend that he include these lecherous publications in his prohibitory order.

Nobility of Agriculture.

Our immortal Washig-ton pronounced agriculture "the most healthy, the most useful, and the most noble employment of man." When the war of independence closed, he was glad to exchange the sword for the sickle; when the services of the statesman were ended, he left the presidential mansion for the rural cottage. Cincinnatus, of early republican Rome, left the plow to assume the reins of government, to save the Roman army and republic. When his mission as dictator was finished, he returned to his little farm.

Such names as these are pilgrim shrines Shrines to no code or creed confined—
The Delphian vales, the Palestines,
The Meccas of the mind.

The government and public sentiment of China subordinates agriculture to literature alone, but exalts it over other human enterprise. If an absolute government thus honors husbandry, much more should our republican principles create a healthy sentiment to encourage and ennoble that great pursuit of the great majority of our fellow-citizens. In the nature of things, all men are called to earn their bread by the sweat of their brow—on the farm and ranch, unless circumstances or special talent direct them to engage in other pursuits. The farm and ranch foster the other industries, furnish manufacturers with materials, and commerce with its cargoes, and opens to nations the deepest and most permanent channels of wealth. Agriculture generates in the hearts of the people the loftiest sentiments of patriotism. The patriotic struggle for American independence, and the heroic achievements for the Texan revolution, were essentially trophies of agricultural peoples. The noblest pages of Grecian and Roman history are the recorded deeds of their yeomanry before their great cities had allured them from their farms and committed the farm and ranch to slaves. Agriculture forms the strongest ties of well regulated society, and the surest basis of internal peace. Nor are there any limits set to its improvements or profitable returns to intelligent husbandry.

Pliny tells us that 400 stocks, ripened into ears and grown from one seed, were brought to the Emperor Augustus, and in another place he says a farmer brought the Emperor Nero 340 ripened ears of wheat which branched forth from a single kernel. With the importance and possibilities which belong to the industry of agriculture, the leading question before intelligent individuals, communities and governments all over the agricultural world, should be: "How can agriculture be improved, its farm and ranch, so as to produce another blade of grass or ear of corn on every square foot of tillable land, and how can their quality be improved?" This question should especially be put before the American people, who are, by soil and circumstances, chosen to be in the main an agricultural people. If the political creed which sounds as sweet, "We believe in the protection of American labor," is to be carried out by government aid, let this fostering particularly be shown in behalf of the largest class of our laborers and the most important of our industries.—J. J. Anderson, in Texas Farm and Ranch.

Glass Clothing.

The ingenuity that led to the manufacture of articles of clothing from paper has been eclipsed, as similar articles are now made from glass. An up-town dry-goods store has on exhibition a glass tablecloth several feet square, of variegated colors, with ornamental border and fringed edges. The fabric is flexible and only a little heavier than those woven of flax, while it is claimed that it can be washed and ironed like an ordinary tablecloth. Glass has been spun and woven in Austria for some years, but it is a new undertaking in this country. A prominent glass manufacturing firm of Pittsburg, Pa., recently engaged in the manufacture of this brittle substance into fabrics, which they claim are as perfect, delicate and durable as the finest silk. A representative of this firm said yesterday that they can spin two hundred and fifty nine threads, each ten miles long, in one minute. The weaving is done with an ordinary loom, but the process is more difficult and much more interesting than the spinning of cotton or other threads. "We can duplicate in glass any costume," said this gentleman, "and can make it just as brilliant in color, elaborate in finish, perfect in fit, and equal in its smallest details even to the button on the original. The fabric is very strong, cannot be ripped or torn, and can be sold at a less price than linen, cotton or silk, or other fabric imitated. It is also very warm, easy-fitting and comfortable, whether worn as dress, shawl or other garment in ordinary clothing." Among the articles already manufactured of glass are beautiful featherers, which resemble those of the ostrich: towels, napkins and tablecloths.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Oil Upon the Waters.

The efficacy of oil to assuage the violence of the waves at sea appears to be now very generally known, and to be becoming appreciated at its real value by mariners. Lately, we are informed by Chambers' Journal, the ship Glamorganshire was saved in a tempest in the North Sea by the timely use of oil, while a powerful steamer, the Navarre, in the same tempest, was overwhelmed by the waves and foundered, on the 6th of March, with all on board. The journal above named is so fully impressed with the importance of this subject, that it remarks that "ships that leave port unfurnished with oil, in case of emergency, are defrauded of one of their chief elements of safety."

The efficacy of this simple agency in stilling the waves of a turbulent sea has been so often spoken of by various writers, that to "pour oil on troubled waters" is a saying that has passed into a proverb. It is not a little curious, however, to notice how seldom its use is resorted to by vessels in distress, although a number of well authenticated cases are recorded which demonstrate beyond the shadow of a doubt that its effect in preventing the waves from breaking about a ship is simply marvelous. The remedy of employing canvas bags filled with oil and suspended in the water over the sides of the vessel is so simple a recourse in case of danger from the violence of the sea, that the mariner who fails to resort to it should be deserving of being called criminally ignorant.

Bert's Picnic.

Little Bert lay on the grass under the maple tree and cried as if his heart would break. Bert was a brave little fellow, and would not cry even if he had a big bruise on his fat little knee, but this morning his cup of grief was full and overflowing—at least he thought so. Sister Kitty and brother Dick were going to a picnic, and Bert was not invited. Just what a picnic was Bert did not know, but he had heard Kitty talking about the woods, ice cream, cake, and white dresses, all in a jumble. If a picnic meant all these, Bert thought it must be the nicest thing in the world, so he lay out there on the grass and cried.

It was mamma who came and found him there, and she took poor Bertie up in her arms and soon found what the matter was. She tried to comfort him, but he was not very well, and fretted about the picnic till she told him he might go to the store for her. Bert liked to go to the store almost better than anything else, and he ran for his straw hat at once, forgetting all about the picnic, while mamma wrote what she wanted on a slip of paper. He brought the packages safely home, not once looking inside them, for Bert could be trusted, if he was only four years old. When he reached home Kitty and Dick were already gone, so that he had to wink very fast to keep from crying again.

But after dinner mamma said to him: "Now, Bert, you and I will have a picnic, and whom shall we ask?" "Oh, ask Pussy Meow and Rover," cried Bert, who could not bear to leave out his daily playmates, the gray cat and the large black dog. Mamma laughed, but as soon as the dishes were washed and put away she tied on her bonnet and Bert's hat, put some cakes, crackers and raisins in a small basket, and all four went down a shady lane back of the house, which led to a small green meadow. Here mamma sat down under a tree to rest, while Bert ran around "sploring," as he called it. His "sploring" ended in the discovery of a tiny stream, which murmured and rippled over the stones. Of course he wanted to wade, so off came his shoes and stockings, and his bare, rosy feet splashed merrily about in the water. Rover enjoyed the fun, too, and ran about shaking the water in a shower from his shaggy coat, while pussy looked placidly on from the bank. Then mamma called him, and he came running to find the "picnic" spread out on the shawl, while Rover and puss munched cracker contentedly near by. After that Bert found some flowers, and mamma wove a wreath. He crowned pussy queen, but she did not seem to like it, for she twitched the crown right into the water. When at last, tired and sleepy, but very happy, Bert reached home, he told Kitty and Dick that he was sure "his was the beautifullest picnic in the whole world." Puss and Rover did not say anything, but they looked very happy as they went to their mat to sleep. Tribune.

The Tree of Dissipation.

The sin of drunkenness expels reason, drowns memory, diminishes strength, distempers the body, defaces beauty, corrupts the blood, inflames the liver, weakens the brain, turns men into walking hospitals, causes internal, external and incurable wounds, is a witch to the senses, a devil to the soul, a thief to the pocket, the beggar's companion, wife's woe, and children's sorrow, makes man become a beast and self-murderer, and drinks to others' good health, and robs himself of his own. The root of all evil is Drunkenness.

JOHN PERCIVAL.

A California Boy's Letter.

Edward Smith, a little ten-year-old boy living at the Tule River Indian Reservation in California, writes the following interesting little letter to an Eastern journal:

The Agency where we live is right in the heart of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Our house is on the bank of the Tule river. It flows into Tulare lake. It is about 70 miles west from here to the lake. A few rods from our house are two big Soda springs and many little ones. I go to school with lots of Indians. A Painted Rock is about one mile from here. It has Pictures of men, Women, lizards, centipedes and many other things on it. I have a bow and arrows most all of the Indian boys have them. There are some very big mountains around here. There are two Tribes of Indians on the Reservation the Tules and Fajans. There are many rattle snakes around here. There are many large granite rocks here. Porterville is eighteen miles from here it is our Post Office. It gets very hot here in the summer time. We have lots of fun here in the spring drowning out Squirrels, the Indians here say for dog Boos, for man uohnoh, for woman Kiena, for baby witchan, for head otro, for eye sussa, for nose chinick, for mouth summah and for ear Tuk. If I write again I will tell you how to count in the Indian language.

THE TUNNEL BETWEEN FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—Sir John Hawkshaw, civil engineer, recently stated that there were no engineering difficulties in the way of formation of the tunnel between France and England, and that its maintenance would be cheap. He estimated the cost of the tunnel at £8,000,000 and said the work would occupy in construction eight years. He had no doubt as to the financial success of the undertaking. It was reasonable to reckon upon 2,000,000 passengers being carried through the tunnel annually at 6s. per head, and 1,200,000 tons of goods at 5s. per ton. That would produce a revenue of £900,000. Allowing 40 per cent for working expenses, 6½ per cent could then be paid upon the capital of £8,000,000. As one means of defense, it had been suggested that steps should be taken by which the tunnel could be flooded. He, however, was of opinion that arrangements could be made to throw up a mass of shingle inside the tunnel, and thus prevent its use. If necessary, the tunnel could be blown up. Should more than one tunnel be constructed, the question whether or not they should all be defended by forts was a question for a military man. If there were several tunnels they could be easily defended by the same fortifications on the English side. The tunnel would be 180 feet below the bed of the channel.

WHAT IT COSTS.—M. M. Pomeroy, otherwise known as "Brick" for short, tells the following story: "Some years ago we had in our employ a man who several times a day ran out of the office to buy a drink of whisky. Every time he went out the cashier was instructed to drop ten cents in the draw to our credit. At the end of seventeen months the man who had gone out so often drank himself out of a good situation, and the draw was opened and found to contain $409, which we loaned to a young mechanic at seven per cent interest. He used it to purchase a set of tinner's tools. On the 15th of February, 1876, he returned it to us with interest, saying that he had a wife, two children, and property worth $500. The other poor fellow is a bum, hunting for food." No more powerful temperance lecture could be made than is contained in this short anecdote. It also demonstrates the correctness of the old adage, "take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves."

A LADY traveler remarks that the cleanliness and order on board ship, where all the work is done by men, including that of the kitchen and the care of the cabins, almost convinces her that woman has mistaken her vocation in attempting to grapple with housework.

Health Column.

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is sickness at stomach, a tendency to vomit, combined with pain in some part of the head, generally the left side. It is caused by there being too much bile in the system, from the fact that this bile is manufactured too rapidly, or is not worked out of the system fast enough by steady, active exercise. Hence, sedentary persons—those who do not walk about a great deal, but are seated in the house nearly all the time—are almost exclusively the victims of this distressing malady. It usually begins soon after waking in the morning, and lasts a day or two or more. There are many causes: the most frequent is derangement of the stomach by late and hearty suppers; by eating too soon after a regular meal (five hours should, at least, intervene); eating without an appetite; forcing food; eating after one is conscious of having had enough; eating too much of any favorite dish; eating something which the stomach cannot digest, or sour stomach. Any of these things may induce sick headache; all of them can be avoided.

Over-fatigue, or great mental emotion of any kind, a severe mental application, have brought on sick headache of the most distressing character in an hour. It is caused by indulgence in spirituous liquors. Decayed teeth are a frequent cause of the severest form of sick headache, through irritation of the nerves, and blood poisoning from the ulcerated teeth.

When a person has sick headache, there is no appetite; the very sight of food is hateful; the tongue is furred; the feet and hands are cold; and there is a feeling of general discomfort, with an utter indisposition to do any thing whatever.

A glass of warm water, into which has been rapidly stirred a heaping teaspoonful each of salt and mustard, by causing instantaneous vomiting, empties the stomach of the bile or indigested sour food, and a grateful relief is often experienced at once; and rest, with a few hours of sound, refreshing sleep, completes the cure, especially if the principal part of the next day or two is spent in mental diversion and out-door activities, not eating an atom of food—but drinking freely of cold water or hot teas—until you feel as if a piece of plain, cold bread and butter would "taste really good." Nine times in ten the cause of sick headache is in the fact that the stomach was not able to digest the food last introduced into it, either from its having been unsuitable, or excessive in quantity.

When the stomach is weak, a spoonful of the mildest, blandest food would cause an attack of sick headache, when ten times the amount might be taken in health, not only with impunity, but with positive advantage.

Those who are subject to "sick headache" eat too much and exercise too little, and have cold feet and constipation. There is also, in a majority of cases, neuralgia of the face caused by decayed teeth, or ulceration at the roots of teeth that appear to be sound. When this is the case there will be no permanent relief, while life lasts, without the assistance of a competent dentist. But where the teeth are not at fault, a diet of cold bread and butter, and ripe fruit or berries, with moderate continuous exercise in the open air sufficient to keep up a very gentle perspiration, would of themselves cure almost any case within thirty-six hours. Two teaspoonfuls of pulverized charcoal, stirred in half a glass of water and drank, generally gives prompt relief.—Journal of Health.

Dangers from Impure Water.

Too much reliance is placed on the senses of taste, sight, and smell in determining the character of drinking water. It is a fact which has been repeatedly illustrated that water may be odorless, tasteless, and colorless, and yet be full of danger to those who use it. The recent outbreak of typhoid fever in Newburg, N. Y., is an example, having been caused by water which was clear and without taste or smell. It is also a fact that even a chemical analysis sometimes will fail to show a dangerous contamination of the water, and will always fail to detect the specific poison if the water is infected with discharges of an infectious nature. It is therefore urged that the source of the water supply should be kept free from all possible means of contamination by sewage. It is only in the knowledge of perfect cleanliness that safety is guaranteed.

The local European volunteer health commission in Alexandria, where the cholera has been raging along back, is unearthing, according to the Sanitary News, some very unsanitary conditions in that city. They have found a large native cemetery, underneath which runs a canal with which communicates a well, the water of which is used to wash dead bodies.

A drinking fountain adjoins this well, and the canal is the water supply of a crowded portion of the town. In the mosques are stagnant pools of water used for ablutions prescribed by religious belief, the water in which, being unchanged, gets indescribably foul. Such nuisances are difficult to abate, because of religious prejudices. Is it any wonder, adds the News, that pestilential disease attacks such a locality?

Household Hints.

TOMATO SOUP.—A delicious tomato soup is made by frying some bits of beef and ham in a saucepan with a lump of butter and a small onion sliced. Take a quart can of tomatoes, or a dozen fresh ones (medium or small sized), add a coffee cup of stock, and then put the meat in with it and boil; season with pepper and salt. This may be strained or not; of course it is in better taste to strain it; if the soup seems too thin after it is strained, put it back on the stove, add a tablespoonful of flour rubbed smooth in cold water, and let the soup simmer gently for half an hour.

BUTTERMILK TEACAKES.—Two pounds of flour, one and a half teaspoonful of baking powder, one-eighth ounce bicarbonate of soda, and a pinch of salt; mix into a firm dough with buttermilk, which should be sour, although not rancid. A few currants and a little white sugar can be added if sweet teacakes are wanted. Or, take half a pound of flour, as much carbonate of soda as will lie on a quarter of a dollar, double that quantity of cream of tartar, and a pinch of salt; make a stiff dough with buttermilk, knead lightly, and roll about half an inch thick; bake in round cakes.

OKRA AND TOMATOES.—Cut the okra in thin slices, and pare and slice the tomatoes. Have one pint of tomatoes to two of okra. Put them in a stew-pan with a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Stew fifteen minutes, then turn into a deep dish, add a tablespoonful of butter. Cover with bread or cracker crumbs, dot with butter and bake half an hour. These two recipes are from Miss Parloa's New Cook Book, and are given at the request of H. M.

HACK.—A pretty and very economical dish may be made by finely mincing the remains of any cold meat, adding to it bread crumbs to half its weight, and flavored by herbs and a wineglassful of strong Liebig's essence, or good stock. Place these ingredients in a small basin, and pour over it sufficient gelatine to nearly cover it. Steam for an hour, stand it to cool, and then turn out. Garnish with slightly colored aspic jelly, beaten fine with a fork.

GINGER BISCUITS.—One pound of flour, half a pound of crushed loaf sugar, a teaspoonful of carbonate of soda, and a good tablespoonful of ground ginger. Mix all the dry ingredients together first, and then rub in half a pound of butter. Beat two eggs well, and make a stiff paste; roll out on a floured board, and cut the paste into small cakes. Bake for half an hour in rather a quick oven.

LEMON-CREAM PIE.—A lemon-cream pie may be baked with two crusts. To one glass or cup of milk allow one tablespoonful of cornstarch, the yolks of three eggs, one cup of sugar, the juice and grated rind of a lemon, or after grating the lemon peel, chop the rest of the lemon quite fine; the whites of the eggs should be beaten stiff and added to the rest just before putting it in the oven.

CORNSTARCH PUDDING.—A light and very delicate pudding is made by beating six tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with six eggs, a half a teaspoonful of salt, a quart and a pint of sweet milk, sugaring and flavoring to suit your taste. Heat the milk and then stir in the cornstarch, etc., gradually. It is quickly made, and if served with vanilla flavored cream is delicious.

SQUASH.—Squash is much nicer if a little flour be added to it while cooking. Cut it into small pieces, boil until tender and rub through a colander; add a piece of butter, little cream some flour which has been mixed smooth in milk and thoroughly cooked, and boil again, and just before taking from the fire stir in the well beaten yolks of two eggs.

WHITE SOUP.—Boil in salted water four large or six small potatoes till soft enough to mash fine, add one well beaten egg, a pinch of celery salt, a pint of boiling hot milk and a teaspoonful of boiling hot water with a piece of butter as large as a small egg. Stir the soup until perfectly smooth, strain through a sieve, add a little pinch of white pepper and serve at once.

POTATO CROQUETTES.—The proportion of butter or beef dripping in potato croquettes is an ounce to a half pound; add a very little flour and an egg and make up into balls. If one choose to take the trouble, the potato may be rolled out, cut into cakes and baked, but a very quick oven is required, and the fried cakes are more likely to be good.

PEACH CAKES.—Peach shortcake is as good as strawberry, if you only think so, as the dry-goods salesman said when he offered blue cashmere to the woman who asked for green; and sliced peaches between layers of cake are very nice, especially if eaten with whipped cream.

SALMON PATTIES.—Cut cold cooked salmon into dice. Heat about a pint of the dice in half a pint of cream or Dutch sauce. Season to taste with cayenne pepper and salt. Fill the shells and serve. Cold cooked fish of any kind may be made into patties in this way.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

San Francisco, No. 4.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—At a meeting held by the above named Lodge on Oct. 3, 1883, at B. B. Hall, Bro. P. M. W., P. English, was presented by members of his Lodge with a solid gold Past Master's badge, in consideration of his gratuitous services as organist for two years. An appropriate speech was made by the M. W., Thomas Murray, and was responded to by Bro. English. Yours in C., H. and P.,

JULIUS BLUMENTHAL, Fin.

Harmony, No. 9.

DEAR WATCHMAN:—This old pioneer is one of the leading Lodges in the city. Our meetings are always well attended in the elegant hall in the Washington building. On the evening of Aug. 18th five applications were received, one being by card, and six candidates received the J. W. Degree. On the evening of Sept. 15th seven received the M. W. Degree, and five applications are again on the desk of the Recorder. We now number 300 members, and no doubt before the close of the term will increase still more. This Lodge pays sick benefits and our members take a great interest in the good and welfare of the Order. Our sixth anniversary takes place on Saturday, Oct. 6, 1883, at Washington Hall, 35 Eddy street. Fraternally in C., H. and P.,

L. JOHNSON, Recorder.

Bernal, No. 19.

Last Wednesday night this Lodge celebrated its sixth anniversary at Blair's Hall, on Mission street. A very large gathering was in attendance, and were entertained in good style by music, recitations, addresses, etc. Among the latter may be mentioned the speeches of Past Grand Masters Jordan and Barnes, which, as usual, were to the point and well received. After the entertainment—literary and musical—was over, the fun Terpsichorean began, and merry feet tripped the light fantastic to the full bent of their inclination. Much of the credit of the success of the affair is due to District Deputy G. W. Lemont, who acted as master of ceremonies.

Valley, No. 30.

So much has been said in our columns of late concerning this young giant, that brief mention will probably suffice for the visit paid them by us last Wednesday night. With its efficient corps of officers and general good feeling, it is hardly to be expected that the business should be dispatched in anything less than first class style, and such was the case. The percentage of attendance upon the entire membership would not lead any one to think, however, that Valley possesses the immense membership that she does. Probably each absentee reasons that there are so many members that one would not be missed, and so acting upon this plan, the attendance reminds one of the proverb, "What is everybody's business, etc." Under the head of "Good of the Order" District Deputy Woodbury, of Del Norte county, made some interesting remarks. He visited this city to bring a disabled Brother Workman to St. Mary's Hospital.

Unity, No. 27.

Continuing their line of official visits, District Deputies Carroll and Danforth, accompanied by Past Master Wilson and P. G. D., Bro. Loud, visited Unity, No. 27, on the evening of the 25th ult. About 10:30 o'clock delegations from Olympic and Hercules came in and added to the sociability of the occasion. Under "Good of the Order" remarks were made by Bros. Loud, Wilson, Carroll, Danforth, Condon, Adams, Dixon and others. The Lodge work was pronounced No. 1. A pleasant and sociable evening was spent. On Friday evening they visited

Hercules, No. 53.

Here their visiting ranks were increased by the presence of District Deputies McKay and Poland, brethren from Unity, Olympic and other Lodges. A very pleasant gathering is reported. Wednesday evening, the 3d inst., they visited

Fidelity, No. 186.

At this Lodge both J. W. and M. W. Degrees were conferred in a very able manner. The visits of these officers have an inspiring effect upon the officers and members of the Lodges visited; especially is this noticed in the improvement in ritualistic work.

Magnolia, No. 41.

Monday evening, the 8th inst., this Lodge was visited by District Deputies Danforth and Carroll. They report the conferring of degrees and the spending of a very pleasant evening in a Lodge that is doing good work. Tuesday evening, the 9th inst.,

Olympic, No. 127.

Received a visit from the same brothers, with their forces augmented by the presence of Bros. P. G. M. W., W. H. Jordan, Secretary Reading of the Guarantee Fund Association, P. M. W., P. Veasy, of Hercules, No. 53, and Bros. Congdon, M. W., and McCarthy, Financier of the same Lodge, Trustee Broderick, of Valley, No. 30, and others. The addresses made were good and to the point. The visiting officers also report good work in this Lodge, the conferring of both degrees being done in creditable style.

Memorial, No. 174.

A call upon this Lodge last Monday night, at the pleasant headquarters at No. 32 O'Farrell street, found them in good shape and working well. Although not an old Lodge, Memorial has a good membership and compares favorably with its neighbors. Bro. Wallace, the Master Workman, makes up in executive ability what he lacks in size, and Bro. Schaffner, the urbane Recorder, seems to be the right man in the right place.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

California, No. 1.

We are glad to be able to state that the recent entertainment of California Lodge, No. 1, for the benefit of an unfortunate paralyzed member, was not only a fraternal and social success, but a financial one, netting over $140. Those who attended not only enjoyed themselves, but have the satisfaction of knowing that the entire proceeds were devoted to a worthy purpose. A very handsomely printed card of thanks was sent to each participant in the programme.

Occidental, No. 6.

This prosperous Lodge is increasing its membership very rapidly, and the present officers, who enjoy the respect and good will of all the members, are the very type of true gentlemen and Workmen. We are also pleased to state that this Lodge is going to give a grand entertainment and ball on October 24th, at Hansen Hall. Tickets may be had from all members. It is the intention of the committee to make this the best entertainment of the kind ever given in Oakland, and their many friends are anxiously looking forward to that evening. Those who wish to enjoy a genuine treat should not fail to attend. District Deputy J. J. Schutz is managing the affair, and all may rest assured that he will make it a success.

San Leandro, No. 12.

Friday evening, the 28th ult., we met with this Lodge. The number in attendance was quite limited, and the impression was received, that while the Lodge was not actually suffering for lack of energy, yet a small revival in their midst would do them good. If the officers and members throughout were imbued with the spirit of some whom we met, there would be more life and animation. San Leandro, as may be seen by its number, is one of the oldest Lodges in the State, and should be well along in all other respects also. The following are the officers: G. R.

Morgan, P. M. W.; Jno. Gorman, M. W.; Jos. Halford, F.; Henry Vorman, O.; S. W. Johnson, Rdr.; H. F. Eber, Rvr.; D. Ury, Fin.; Jos. Martin, G.; Jno. Raircks, I. W.; Geo. Brom, O. W.:

Mission, No. 56.

On Thursday evening, the 27th ult., Mission Lodge celebrated its fifth anniversary by a ball. This Lodge is located at the old Mission, San Jose, and has a thrifty membership. The entertainment was given also as a celebration in honor of the completion of their new hall, which cost $1,855.

Vesper, No. 62.

This Lodge, located in the pleasant town of Livermore, is making arrangements to celebrate its fifth anniversary on the 19th inst. The Valley Review says: "The committee are confident that they will get up one of the most pleasing entertainments yet given by the Vespers in Livermore." This Lodge is in some respects a most fortunate one. Possessing a membership of over 100 and an age of five years, it has never yet lost a member by death.

Ashler, No. 165.

Curious to meet the membership of this Lodge at an ordinary business meeting, and not, as it were, in their "store clothes" and on guard for a "high jinks," we paid them a visit last Tuesday night, and are glad to note that they do not reserve their best meetings for company. The business was well conducted, although without the inflexible cast iron system found in some Lodges. The Good-of-the-Order conversation being directed in the WATCHMAN channel, several glowing tributes were paid to this journal by different members. Ashler has a first class membership and evidently believes in keeping up that standard.

NEVADA COUNTY.

Nevada City, No. 52.

The Nevada City Transcript has been furnishing interesting reading to its subscribers recently by summarizing in occasional articles, the aims and objects of the various Orders represented in its vicinity, with historical sketches of the local societies. From its issue of the 4th inst. we take the following extract relative to the Workmen of that place:

"The district which comprises Nevada county has six Lodges, with a membership of 350 and a Degree of Honor numbering over 150. J. E. Isaac, of Nevada City, is D. D. G. M. W. of the district. Nevada City Lodge, No. 52, was instituted Sept. 17, 1878, with 23 charter members and the following officers: C. W. Cross, P. M. W.; E. H. Gaylord, M. W.; J. D. White, F.; C. E. Mulloy, O.; Geo. E. Robinson, Rdr.; Geo. C. Gaylord, Fin.; R. D. Carter, Rvr.; W. H. Crawford, G.; W. H. Smith, I. W.; H. Grover, O. W. The Lodge now has 69 members, the officers being: S. Andrews, M. W.; D. Hutchinson, F.; J. C. Donnelly, O.; R. D. Carter, Rvr.; J. Hook, Fin.; G. A. Gray, Rdr.; W. C. Groves, Guide; A. J. Stiles, I. W.; Edwin Parrish, O. W. Nevada City Lodge has lost two members by death. Meetings are held at Odd Fellows' Hall every Wednesday evening. The initiation fee is $15, and the dues 50 cents a month. There is talk of organizing here as soon as practicable a Degree of Honor, to which the lady relatives of Workmen may also belong. There is a beneficiary of $500 attached to it. Unity Lodge, No. 17, Degree of Honor, at Grass Valley, has over 150 members, although organized only last January. It meets the first and third Saturdays of each month and is growing rapidly."

SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

Enterprise, No. 17.

As one of our old pioneers, Enterprise No. 17, has always stood in the front ranks of our Order. Her growth has been steady and regular. The membership is now 270, and with her sister Lodge, Mt. Hamilton, she has enlisted the best citizens of San Jose and vicinity. It is confidently expected that each Lodge will pass the 300 mark this term.

Mt. Hamilton, No. 43.

We attended a large and highly enjoyable meeting of Mt. Hamilton Lodge, on Wednesday evening, the 3d inst. The usual business of the Lodge was attended to with careful consideration and in detail. Their work was quite extensive. The J. W. Degree was conferred on three candidates. The degree was given in a very creditable and impressive manner. This thrifty Lodge has now a membership of 262, made up of carefully selected and representative citizens of San Jose and vicinity, a majority of whom are young men. A feature of this Lodge is a cordial social and fraternal manner of treating each other, and especially visitors. Considering that this was fair week, there was a very creditable attendance.

SOLANO COUNTY.

Benicia, No. 94.

During the Masonic Grand Lodge we met Dr. V. Newmark, Past Master of Benicia Lodge. He reports a membership of about 50, and hints that a revival of interest there would benefit the Lodge. Benicia recently gave an entertainment and sociable, which was a step in the right direction.

SONOMA COUNTY.

Healdsburg, No. 31.

This Lodge has done a laudable thing in engaging Mayor Henry C. Dane for October 25th, to deliver his celebrated lecture on "Sights and Sounds in London." When a Lodge acting in this way becomes the educator of a community, it is evident that its condition is not only good financially, but that its membership also is possessed of enthusiasm, intelligence and refinement.

YUBA COUNTY.

Sharon, No. 143.

At the session of the Masonic Grand Lodge we met Bro. A. J. Hawkins, Past Master of this Lodge, who reports the Lodge flourishing. The membership numbers twenty-five, ten of whom are subscribers for the WATCHMAN. They expect an increase of from ten to fifteen new members before the close of the present term.

ARIZONA.

Arizona, No. 1.

While in Pacific Lodge, No. 7, of Oakland, on the evening of the 4th inst., we met several visitors, who, under the head of "Good of the Order," made remarks of considerable interest. Among these were Deputy Grand Recorder Watson and Bros. L. M. Prince, P. M. W. of Tombstone Lodge, No. 3, and W. J. Osborne, P. M. W. of Arizona Lodge, No. 1, of Tucson. The two latter named brethren were visiting this city as delegates to the Grand Lodge of Good Templars then in session. These brethren favored our sanctum with a visit next morning. Both are now members of Arizona Lodge, No. 1. They report the Order progressing in their Territory, although not strong as yet in number. The Grand Lodge is made up from Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico, and is yet under the jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge. The four assessments last month caused the Arizona membership to groan considerably, but they take comfort in the thought that the maximum is nearly reached, and if many more deaths occur, they will be made up from relief assessments. Arizona has three Lodges with a membership of about fifty each. They are Arizona, No. 1, of Tucson; Silver Reef, No. 2, of Globe, and Tombstone, No. 3, of Tombstone. A fourth one is about to be established at Phoenix. Arizona, No. 1, has a side issue in the shape of Commandery of the Select Knights, which our informants tell us does not take very well, owing to the appearance about it of aristocracy, fuss and feathers. Bro. Prince was formerly a member of Pacific, No. 7.

A. O. U. W. Chitchat.

Bro. J. C. Calhoun, P. M. W., has been elected and installed as Recorder of Franklin Lodge, No. 44, this city, vice Bro. Julius L. Franklin, resigned.

A large delegation from Valley Lodge, No. 30, were expecting to have gone to Monterey on an excursion, Saturday, the 13th inst. We go to press too early to get any report.

A District meeting will be held under the auspices of Yerba Buena Lodge, No. 14, on Friday, the 26th inst. District Deputy G. W. Lemont intends to make this gathering of the Lodges comprising this district one of the events of the season.

Bro. Chas. M. Shortridge, of Mt. Hamilton Lodge, No. 43, at San Jose, has purchased the Daily Times, and is now editor and proprietor. Under the inspiration and push of our talented brother it has taken front rank among the leading and most spicy papers in San Jose. A new office and composing room has been fitted up especially for the Times. We wish our young and talented brother success.

We had the pleasure of meeting at the Masonic Grand Lodge, Leslie A. Jordan, P. M. W. of Healdsburg, No. 31, and editor of the Russian River Flag. He reports a gratifying state of prosperity in his Lodge, and a steady, solid, although not rapid, growth. He says that besides the lecture noticed elsewhere in the Lodge locals concerning Healdsburg, they have had several other lectures this year, with excellent results. In fact, the Lodge is rather looked upon as the lecture bureau of the town.

The telegram which appeared in the dailies of the 10th inst., stating that the Supreme Lodge of the A. O. U. W. was in session in Buffalo, New York, was of course erroneous. There was a convention in session there of so-called "Select Knights," who are attempting to masquerade under the A. O. U. W. title, and thereby gain what prestige they can.

"An excellent history of that enterprising Lodge, Excelsior, No. 126, is commenced in the last number of the WATCHMAN by Sam Booth, P. M. W. Its example can be followed by other subordinates, and the question of 'how to make an interesting Lodge,' answered by reading its contents."—Call, Sept. 30th.

GOLDEN GATE LODGE, No. 8, A. O. U. W. The members of this Lodge have awakened up from a spell of inactivity, and are now initiating members at every regular meeting. Visiting brothers are always repaid for a call on old Golden Gate. After the work is concluded—and the manner in which it is done is in itself a treat—a very pleasant hour is always spent under the lead of "Good of the Order." Bro. Harry J. Lash as pianist, and the Golden Gate Quartet—Bros. Haseltine, Gardner, Wilson and Simpson—contribute largely to the pleasures of the evening. The District Deputy Grand Masters have been invited to visit the Lodge on the evening of Thursday, the 25th inst., to witness the M. W. Degree conferred upon three candidates.

Other Jurisdictions.

During last year 43 new Lodges of the A. O. U. W. were instituted in Massachusetts, of which number Bro. Geo. R. Pennington instituted 31.

Two Lodges of the A. O. U. W. in St. Louis lately indulged in a game of base ball and made the magnificent score of 48 to 22. They must be champion players, for hereabouts the clubs are only able to score from 2 to 5 runs in a whole game.—Protector.

We agree with the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN that the clause in our laws exempting new members from assessment until one is placed on a death that occurs subsequent to the date they joined the Order. It is apparently fair, the idea being to avoid payment for losses occurring before they joined. But it is, in many instances, inoperative, because of long delays in proving up death losses, and creates confusion and trouble.—Kansas Workman.

A Grand Opportunity Lost.

Our esteemed and illustrious brother, his excellency, President Arthur, and the editor of the Pennsylvania department of the Protector, traveled together on the same train from Pittsburgh to Harrisburgh on Sept. 6th. We would gently remind his excellency that we did not mention anything about an office during the whole time.—Baltimore Protector.

If our good brother of Pennsylvania expects to get through this "dismal vale of tears" by such extraordinary evidences of extreme modesty as is given above, we just wish to say to him that when the hour of final dissolution comes he will have much to regret of. To think of a good brother riding in the same train with the President of the United States, and he a Workman as well, and then not scrape an acquaintance, is a course of action that will in no wise redound to his credit in the eyes of the journalistic fraternity. His first duty was to have given the recognition sign, and then "pulled his leg" for a year's subscription to the valuable paper he represents. This done, he should have occupied the attention of our illustrious President and brother for at least an hour in a "brief" interview, and lastly, he should have reminded the great chieftain that it would be an excellent thing for him to exert his influence upon his Cabinet and constituents, and exacted a sacred promise that for the rest of his official life he would take zealous care that his influence and assistance be devoted to the benefit of his fellow Workmen, and that no one without the password should in future be allowed to enter any of the governmental departments. We have no doubt but that President Arthur would have not only accorded him an attentive and patient hearing, but acquiesced in nearly, if not all of the valuable hints suggested, and what a satisfaction it would have been for Bro. James to have enjoyed the blessed experience and knowledge of having planted Workmen seeds in the White House which would ripen to the glory of the Order and the personal satisfaction of himself. No, no, my dear brother, this will never do. Such grand opportunities do not come every day, and when presented, grasp them with a tenacity strong and lasting, and never say die until the contract is signed, sealed and delivered.—Philadelphia Sunday Courier.

Man and Insects.

The only nerves (worth mentioning) in the human body, which are not under the control of the brain, are those of the heart and other internal organs; and over these parts, as everybody knows, we have not any voluntary power. But all our limbs and muscles are moved in accordance with impulses sent down from the brain, so that, for example, when I have made up my mind to send a telegram to a friend, my legs take me duly to the telegraph office, my hand writes the proper message, and my tongue undertakes the necessary arrangements with the clerk. But in the insect's body there is no such regular subordination of all the parts composing the nervous system to a single central organ or head office. The largest knot of nerve matter, it is true, is generally to be found in the neighborhood of the sense organs, and it receives direct nerve bundles from the eyes, antennae, mouth, and other chief adjacent parts; but the wings and legs are moved by separate knots of nerve cells connected by a sort of spinal cord with the head, but capable of acting quite independently on their own account.

Thus, if we cut off a wasp's head and stick it on a needle in front of some sugar and water, the mouth will greedily begin to eat the sweet syrup, apparently unconscious of the fact that it has lost its stomach, and that the food is quietly dropping out of the gullet at the other end as fast as it is swallowed. So, too, if we decapitate the queer Mediterranean insect, the praying mantis, the headless body will still stand catching flies with its outstretched arms, and fumbling about for its mouth when it has caught one, evidently much surprised to find that its head is unaccountably missing. In fact, whatever may be the case with man, the insect, at least, is really a conscious automaton. It sees or smells food, and it is at once impelled by its nervous constitution to eat it. It receives a sense impression from the bright hue of a flower, and it is irresistibly attracted towards it, as the moth is to the candle. It has no power of deliberation, no ability even to move its own limbs in unaccustomed manners. Its whole life is governed for it by its fixed nervous constitution, and by the stimulations it receives from outside. And so, though the world probably appears much the same to the beetle as to us, the nature of its life is different. It acts like a piece of clockwork mechanism, wound up to perform a certain number of fixed movements, and incapable of ever going beyond the narrow circle for which it is designed.—Grant Allen, in Knowledge.

DR. VENUKOFF, during his late journey in Central Asia, discovered the horse, the camel and the goose in their wild state. No alarm was shown by some of their number after others of their associates had been shot.

Silk Culture in the Schools.

The Silk Board are making a good move in their effort to enlist prominent educators in the establishment of silk culture as a subject of instruction. There are many reasons for the adoption of the subject by the public schools, and some of them were advanced by the speakers at the last meeting of the State Board. Rev. Dr. C. A. Buckbee, President, alluded to the fact that an elementary knowledge of silk culture is a part of the educational system in France, Sweden, and some other countries. The school authorities in Kansas propose giving this industry a place in the educational system of that state. It is certainly feasible if too much is not attempted. A teacher who understands the work could give lessons in silk culture during the hours usually allotted for recreation, and would find every girl in the school enthusiastic. She would return to book study refreshed. Two or three trees around the school building would supply all the food required for this delightful study. Then when the girl's school days are over, she has been taught at school how to earn money at home. Then, too, we have helped to answer the question, What can our children do when they leave school? But trees are needed around our school buildings. Many schoolhouses in California stand on the bare plains, no tree or shrub near to beautify them, and the hot sun is sending its burning rays down with heat sufficient to burn the brains out of the children. If Professor Welcker will encourage teachers and school boards in California to plant trees—useful trees—around their schoolhouses, the State Board of Silk Culture will supply six or eight good young mulberry trees to any applicant whom he recommends. With proper care they would furnish leaves enough the next season after planting for practical lessons in silk culture.

Professor E. W. Hilgard, of the University of California, spoke very encouragingly in favor of the object. He thought that instruction in silk culture could be imparted by teachers, which would be of great use to the pupils, especially girls. He believed it was our duty to impart through our schools such knowledge in agriculture, silk culture, and other home industries, as will be helpful to the thousands of girls and boys now in our schools, upon whose intelligence and industry depend the future welfare of the state. Silk culture, he said, is peculiarly adapted to women. The Professor said that he could see nothing objectionable to the project of encouraging teachers to familiarize themselves with sericulture, and thus become able to instruct our girls and boys in the industry.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Professor Welcker, expressed himself as highly pleased with what he had heard at the meeting. He could promise nothing as to what the educational authorities of the state would do. It did seem to him, however, that it would be proper for him to exercise such a moral influence on the subject as would encourage teachers to give the subject careful attention. The planting of trees—mulberry trees—around schoolhouses was a suggestion that he most heartily approved; he believed it ought to be earnestly recommended; and in view of the assurance that the Board would furnish trees for this purpose to the school authorities, he expressed his conviction that the Board might be called upon to respond to many applications.

Silk culture has already been taken up as a study at one of our leading seminaries for young ladies—the Harmon Seminary at Berkeley—and it is altogether probable that the extension of the charming industry to other schools, both public and private, will, ere long, be accomplished.

ARTIFICIAL WOOD.—A German named Herr B. Harrass, has (it is said) discovered a new method of making artificial wood, which is likely to prove of considerable service to all manufacturers of fancy goods. Common cellulose in paper form is reduced to pulp in water, and after being strained, three parts by weight of starch and two parts of wheat or maize meal are added to it. The compound is then boiled over a water-bath in thin metal tubes, which it leaves in the form of a liquid glue. Now sawdust is added, and the whole is dried in a hot room and set to the consistency of wood. Any shapes can be made by the aid of molds and great pressure; and any color, polish, or veneer can be imparted. It is the old patent coal and rock asphalt principle over again; and we should think could be developed to almost any extent, as the compound may be required to leave the molds all ready for the most delicate and artistic uses.

News in Brief.

SEVERAL families were left homeless by the Santa Cruz mountain fires.

BUSINESS at Canton is entirely suspended, owing to the unsettled condition of affairs.

STOCKTON licenses liquor dealers at $15 per quarter, and has fixed the county and state tax at one per cent.

YELLOW fever is still raging at Hermosillo, and the rate of deaths increasing. Many bodies are buried without being coffined.

THE Dominion government is making an effort to minimize, so far as possible, Sunday labor in connection with the postal service.

THE Director of the Mint authorizes the purchase of 410,000 ounces of fine silver for use at the Philadelphia, New Orleans and San Francisco Mints.

THE steamer Newbern, from Mexico, is quarantined in San Francisco bay with five cases of yellow fever aboard. All but one of the patients are convalescent.

THE President has accepted two sections of the Northern Pacific—one of 50 miles in Montana, and the other of 36 on the Columbia River to Portland, Oregon.

THROUGHOUT all the wine districts of France the crop is the finest in quantity and quality since 1858. In the champagne districts the crop is enormous and of the highest excellence.

THE National Association of Window Glass Workers at Pittsburg, now engaged in a strike against a reduction, have formed a combination with $1,000,000 capital, for the purpose of entering into manufactures in opposition to their late employers.

THE National Bank of New Orleans has brought suit against the Postmaster-General for $100,000, for directing that money orders addressed to the bank, but intended for the lottery company, shall not be delivered. Plaintiff considers that the order was intended to charge the bank with fraudulent practices and illegal action, and has seriously damaged its business.

MINING STATISTICS.—By laborious statistics running through thirty years in the United States, from 1850 to 1880, from a large list of mines reported, it is shown that while $700,000,000 have been expended on mines of gold, silver and lead, these mines have returned $2,200,000,000, being 300 per cent profit in cash.

California Fruit at the East.

In a letter by L. H. Washburn, in the Los Angeles Times, we find a paragraph on California fruit at the East, which is significant:

We were much surprised even now, as we spent a few days in Chicago last week, to find that California grapes and pears had possession of the market. Every fruit-stand we saw in the great metropolis had almost exclusively California grapes, retailing at twenty cents per pound. They ought to be furnished there for ten cents, and then your vineyards may do their best, and the surplus will all be taken east of the mountains. Your readers do not need telling that in no place on the American Continent do they grow either the kind or quality of grapes we do in California; and who don't like grapes? Place our luscious grapes of Los Angeles at ten cents per pound in Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Kansas City, and you will want a whole train-load daily at each place to supply the market.

There seems no reasonable doubt of it. Quick, frequent and cheap overland transportation is the great requirement of our fruit future. How shall it be insured, is the question. As it is, the overland shipment of fruit is a very hazardous business. The advance payment of the tremendous rates now prevailing is a venture which should not be forced upon the business. Let us have cheap freight rates, and the railroad will double their receipts; fruit can be sold at a price Eastern people can afford, our growers will be rewarded, and the whole industry will assume its proper magnitude.

SENSITIVENESS OF INFANTS. Dr. Genzmer states that the sense of touch is present in infants at birth, although the faculty of feeling pain is slowly developed, and is clearly indicated only after the child has reached the age of four or five weeks; smell and taste are not distinguishable in the first, or, at latest, the second day of life; light is quickly perceived immediately after birth, but evidences of complete visual power do not appear for four or five weeks, and it is only after four or five months that colors are clearly distinguished.

TRUE CAUTION: "Ma," said Jennie Parvenu, at Newport, "They said those Smiths who have got the Jones cottage are awful stylish, and have got a pedigree." "Got the pedigree, have they?" said Mrs. Parvenu, excitedly; "well, you keep away from them, for I don't want you to catch it."—New York Mail and Express.

EXTREME OLD AGE: "How is your father coming on?" asked Col. Percy Yerger of a darkey he used to own before the war. "He am dead." "Dead, is he?" He must have reached an advanced age. "He did dat, for a fac. He was libin' up to de berry day of his deff."—Texas Siftings.

Learning a Trade.

Every man should be able to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. This principle was promulgated in the earliest dawn of history, and given as a part of the law of God for the government of the race. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground," is written in the third chapter of Genesis, and while the first man was yet in Eden. No where in the sacred book has that decree been revoked nor modified. It stands to-day as a part of the law of God.

But the public sentiment of our time has changed the wording of the law in such a way as to destroy its force. We talk much about the "sweat of brain," but there is no such a thing possible as "brain sweating," and if there were, it would not cover the demands of this law. "Every man," says President Chadbourne, "should spend some portion of his time at manual labor." His own health demands it, and the just and proper adjustment of the world's work demand it. If the professional class of society shall do no manual labor they thereby do a double wrong; they wrong themselves by bringing weakness and decay upon their own physical powers, and they wrong the laboring classes by leaving to them a task so heavy that it makes their intellectual culture impossible.

The world's work should be better classified, and because it should be, it can be. All men need time for study and mental improvement, and all men need a liberal amount of physical exercise. Every working man ought to have three hours each day for reading and study, and every professional man ought to spend three hours a day in good honest manual labor.

"There are," says Dr. Dio Lewis, "three million dyspeptics in the United States, nine-tenths of whom might be cured simply by labor." This groaning, pitiable class of mortals drag out a brief existence divided between office work and the drug store; whereas, if they would throw away their drugs and take to the sunlight and the soil, with hoe in hand, they might live long and happily.

Too many parents are anxious that their sons should become doctors and lawyers and editors, or even bookkeepers. All these fields are overcrowded and full of vexation. Let the "learned professions" alone and teach your boys a trade. George Washington was a surveyor before he became a statesman. Ben. Franklin was a printer first and a philosopher afterward. A man that has never become master of a good, honest trade takes many unnecessary chances of poverty and distress, with their attendant temptations and perils. And the same is almost equally true of women. Every girl should fit herself to earn an honest living by some useful trade or profession. Thus only can she maintain a spirit of noble independence and entire self-respect. The old Jewish Talmud says, "When a man teaches his son no trade it is as if he taught him highway robbery." Every Jew taught his son a trade or laid himself liable to serious penalties if he neglected to do it. Solon, the wise law-giver of Athens, ordered every parent to teach his sons a trade, and required sons to support their father in old age, provided he had given them such an education.

All the world agrees that these laws of the ancient Greeks and Jews were most wise and wholesome. But there was no more need for such laws then than now, nor among them than with us.—W. C. Damon in Rural Press.

AFTER all, the money made by farming is the cleanest, best money in the world. It is made in accordance with God's first law, under honest, genial influences, away from the taint of trade or the fierce heat of speculation. It fills the pocket of the farmer at the expense of no other man. His gain is no man's loss, but the more he makes the better for the world at large. Prosperous farmers make prosperous people. Whatever benefits our agriculture benefits the commonwealth.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE Alta California, the oldest newspaper on this coast, has been sold for $65,000.

About Connecticut.

[Written by EMILY P. COLLINS.]

Connecticut, "the land of Steady Habits" no more, since the lager keg has usurped the place of the castigated beer barrel which sacrilegiously foamed in frothy defiance of the decalogue and the Sunday statutes; and since laws of cerulean, here no longer on that sacred day, intervene between the rosy cheek of the loving wife and the ardent lips of her enamored spouse. All that is changed; and Connecticut now rejoices in a more spicy cognomen, that of "the Nutmeg State." But we would not have our California friends infer that nutmegs were ever the only production of Connecticut, for our basswood hams and basswood cucumber seeds have a world-wide notoriety. These hams were superior in many respects to Western cured hams, for they never became lively or odorous with age, as is the wont of hams to do; and being intended for exportation, this was a point of great excellence. So, also, as we never disparage aught of New England, those cucumber seeds, labeled "Long tinnet pterodactyl, belonging to a paleozoic period, and, being ignorant of the habits and characteristics of that kind of fowls, we are at a loss to judge of the fitness of the figure. If it had only been that of a goose, with its outspread wings, as though to shield and protect its brood clustering below, we should at once have recognized its remarkable significance.

Hartford is noted for its literary celebrities, living and dead. We are now writing upon the very place where once stood the dwelling of Mrs. Sigourney, the Mrs. Hemans of America. But the muses no longer linger about the spot. The residence of the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" adjoins that of Mark Twain's, the architect of whose house must have been conceived by the owner's own brain, and is typical of his odd humor and droll conceits. The life of a professed humorist must be a dismal bore. On pain of offending "a whole city full," he must not refuse the inevitable invitation to every church fair, reception or banquet, where he is expected to say something excruciatingly funny, though his railroad stock may have just dropped six points, or his baby is threatened with croup, or his own head, by reason of a

THE GARFIELD MEMORIAL.

Green," "Early White Spine," and other choice varieties, never produced a large stump, ending in a yellow, bitter pit, with no body, like some other cucumber seeds so labeled. But we take especial pride in our nutmegs, and well we may, for they never lose their flavor with age, and they last longer for family use than any other spice in the world. Formerly, we made them of basswood, but since our historic Charter Oak blew down, by some process of reproduction known only to Yankee ingenuity, whole ship-loads of articles are annually made from the wood of that, and also all the nutmegs that Connecticut now produces. So highly do we prize them, that whenever any distinguished stranger visits our State, he is always presented with a half dozen of our famous nutmegs as a token of especial consideration.

The once peripatetic State government of Connecticut, which formerly vibrated between the City of Elms and that of the Charter Oak, has at last permanently located in the latter city. The new capitol, a beautiful structure, is erected upon the old site of Trinity College. The top of the dome exceeds the height of even Bunker Hill monument, and is surmounted by an immense bronze figure of some nondescript fowl, the import of which we could never quite discover. The artist who designed it called it the "Genius of Connecticut," but in our most careful researches in ornithology we could never find any class, genus or species of birds that in the least resembled it. So we conclude that the Genius of Connecticut is a species of the ex-cold, is as a fountain of waters, or something that makes him feel anything but funny. Then, too, if it be but a step from the sublime to the ridiculous, he is confronted with the appalling fact that it is a less remove from the witty to the silly; and what humorist is there who has not at some time confounded the two?

Near to Mark Twain and Mrs. Stowe lives another gifted author, Chas. Dudley Warner, who, in conjunction with Clemens, wrote that inimitable satire, "The Gilded Age," which neither one could alone have accomplished. Besides these most conspicuous writers, there are numerous lesser literary lights in Hartford, though there are several of her citizens who have never attempted to write a book, which is equivalent to saying that there are some sensible people, even in Hartford.

CAPTAIN EADS' SHIP RAILWAY.—Many will, perhaps, be surprised to learn that Captain Eads' much-talked of ship railway across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec has been begun. Captain Eads, having changed the views formerly held regarding the project, has secured ample grants from the Mexican government to permit the prosecution of the work, and ground was broken at the Atlantic terminus of the railway, in the latter part of May, some 150 miles southeast along the Mexican coast from Vera Cruz, almost directly south of Galveston and a little south of west of New Orleans. Iron Age.

THE Alaska salmon fisheries are prospering.

Government Carp for Distribution.

We have several times alluded to the fact that the U. S. Commission of Fish and Fisheries, of which Hon. Spencer F. Baird is commissioner, were preparing to distribute young carp of improved European parentage to those who had or would prepare ponds for their culture. We have just received from Prof. Baird, by recommendation of Hon. W. S. Rosecrans, member of Congress, twelve blank applications upon which those desiring the fish can properly apply therefor to the government authorities. As carp growing has already excited considerable interest in this State, and there are many ponds already prepared, we have no doubt that California will be awake to the advantage of obtaining such new varieties as the government may offer. Gen. Rosecrans' recognition of the RURAL as a medium for placing the fish in the hands of those who will properly care for and appreciate them, enables us to give our readers this advantage. We have received twelve official blanks, and we place them all at the service of our subscribers. If more than twelve apply to us for the blanks, we shall decide by lot which twelve applicants shall receive the blanks. This will give all an equal chance to participate in the distribution.

The blanks require the applicant to state his residence and surroundings, etc.; also the area of his pond, the character of the bottom, and what other fish it contains. It is well to state, perhaps, that it is of no use to introduce carp in water already occupied with such fish as bass, sunfish, perch, trout, or any other flesh-eating fish; even chubs and minnows are objectionable, because these fish, although they may not injure the mature carp, will certainly devour the eggs and young carp, and thus the experiments which the Government wishes to make would be frustrated. It is recommended that those who are not sure that their present ponds are free from fish begin by preparing a pond, say fifty feet square, for the reception of the carp, and after they have attained the age of three to six months they may be transferred to other suitable waters. The distribution will be made between October 15th and March 1st of each year, according as is most convenient to the Fish Commission, or as the weather is suitable.

We trust that those who desire to participate in this distribution will write to us at once, that we may send the blanks to be filled out and sent to Washington without unnecessary delay.

English Postal Savings Banks.

The report of the English Postal Savings Bank for the past year shows that the total amount due to depositors, including interest, was $200,000,000, an increase of $15,000,000 for 1882. Deposits during 1883 were 6,000,000 in number, and $60,000,000 in amount and withdrawals, 2,000,000 in number and $50,000,000 in amount. Interest credited to depositors $4,458,145. The accounts are apportioned as follows: England and Wales, number 2,643,785; proportion to population, 1 to 10; average balance due each depositor, $65. Scotland, 108,701; proportion to population, 1 to 35; average balance on each depositor, $35. Ireland, 106,490; 1 to 48, $90. Savings banks seem to be in favor in Ireland, for there has been a steady increase in the number of deposits. In 1883 they stood at 278,277, amounting to $3,763,365. The total amount, including interest due depositors for the United Kingdom at the end of the year was $9,728,300. The gross revenue from the whole postal service during the year was over $47,069,060, and in net revenue $15,305,740.

The Garfield Memorial.

We publish on this page an accurate representation of the monument to be erected in memory of our martyred President Garfield, the corner-stone of which was laid with such impressive ceremonies by the Masons during Conclave week. The design was selected from a number of competing ones, and is by Frank Happersberger, a native of San Francisco, 23 years of age, who is now absent in Munich superintending the casting of the statues. Mr. Happersberger's design is a massive pedestal of granite, surmounted with a bronze statue of General Garfield standing, with a scroll in one hand, the other resting upon an arm. A figure of Columbia, sitting in a mourning attitude, and two bass-reliefs, all of bronze, are attached to the pedestal, the pedestal to rest on a solid foundation of concrete or brick. The total cost of the monument will be about $25,000, the contributions of people of the Pacific coast. The monument is to occupy a pleasant location in Conservatory Valley, in Golden Gate Park.

ACCORDING to Magee's Real Estate Circular, there were 181 sales of real estate in this city during September, aggregating $947,773. The same authority gives the number of mortgages during the same period at 170, amounting to $1,064,592, and of releases at 190, representing $1,138,989. The paper adds: "All of the savings banks report a glut of money with little or no demand. Rates are six per cent at the Hibernia, while all the rest of the savings banks are asking seven per cent."

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSEMENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

Favorable to Advertisers.

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

The Sixth Anniversary.

Matters pertaining to the sixth anniversary of the institution of the California Grand Lodge still occupy a prominent place in Workmen affairs, both on this and the Oakland side of the bay.

The Oakland Lodges have so far formulated their plan of proceedings as to be considering the suggestion of their committees to hold a grand picnic at some accessible point, on Tuesday, November 13th.

The project of the San Francisco Lodges, although not so far advanced, has by no means been abandoned. We are not at liberty as yet to state the exact plan of celebration contemplated by the city Lodges. Suffice it to say that the two plans will not conflict, and that both will, undoubtedly, redound to the great good of the Order.

THE decision noted elsewhere, where a Judge's opinion is given to the effect that an insurance policy or beneficiary certificate is part of a person's estate, is one that vitally concerns all Workmen. In view of this decision, we readvise all Workmen to see that their beneficiary certificates are clearly made payable to some particular person or persons, and not left subject to the last will and testament. This will largely obviate any legal tangles that may arise in this connection.

W. B. Turner, of the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN and FRATERNAL RECORD, of San Francisco, was in Livermore Tuesday on business connected with those papers. He has been visiting the several Lodges of the A. O. U. W. in this county for the purpose of becoming acquainted with the members and work. His visit to Vesper Lodge, No. 62, of this place, was quite interesting and pleasant. The WATCHMAN and RECORD are society papers worthy of any man's patronage. The publishers are constantly making improvements in them - Livermore Valley Review, Sept. 15.

Our Conclave Issues.

[From the Fratern Record of Oct. 8th.]

The RECORD takes pride in presenting to its readers the present number issued as an Historical Souvenir of the Conclave. It speaks for itself. Taken together with the Knights Templar Extra, of date August 23d, it forms the most complete memento obtainable of that great representative gathering.

With this date also we issue the first number of the MASONIC RECORD, an outgrowth of the FRATERNAL RECORD. It has been evident for some time past that some of our leading societies desire home journals in which the fraternal news is devoted entirely to their own Orders. Responding to this wish, we issue, to begin with, the MASONIC RECORD. The FRATERNAL RECORD continues as before, with increased facilities for accommodating its other Orders, owing to the lightening of the pressure on its columns by giving the Masons and Order of Eastern Star a paper of their own.

We give our readers of this issue of the FRATERNAL RECORD the benefit of all the salient features of the initial number of the MASONIC RECORD. The only marked change is the substitution of our regular Order news for the overplus of Masonic news, and for a lengthy directory of Commanderies and individual Sir Knights who were present at the Conclave, which will not be of so much interest to the Orders in general as to the Masonic fraternity in special.

We Wrestle.

The Michigan Herald is anxious that we wrestle with the statistical table as published by the Grand Recorder of California, showing the experience of our jurisdiction. We cheerfully essay to gratify our contemporary.

But let us premise by saying that the Herald misrepresents our position. We do not claim that old and young are an equality as insurance risks, all else besides age being equal. We do not believe an old man so good a risk as a young one—that is to say, we do not believe a man at 49 to be so good a risk as one at 21, generally speaking; but we do believe that from the age of 31 to 49 there is but little difference in this regard, and the tables will bear us out in this position. Since the tables of Grand Recorder were prepared there have died in this jurisdiction of those who joined between the ages of 31 and 35, inclusive, 25; between 36 and 40, inclusive, 17; 41 and 45, inclusive, 22; 46 and 49, inclusive, 24. These facts still farther strengthen the case.

Again, we do not contend that the level assessment plan is just—it makes no pretensions to even and exact justice. The graded system based on the experience tables, so-called, we have characterized as a hypocritical abomination, because it professes to be just, which all actual experience proves to be a fallacy, and the tables sustain us in this assertion.

To fix a grade of payments in accordance with these delusive tables would work as great an injustice as our present system, and give us a complicated impracticable affair in lieu of one the very model of simplicity. There would be much lost, and nothing gained.

If justice be the great object sought for in a graded system, a new grade should be put upon a member's payments at least once a year. Justice requires that each should pay according to the hazard the organization takes on behalf of a member. We pay for our protection as we go along, and have all we pay for. As we grow old, the hazard of the Order on our behalf increases after a certain age, and there is where the grading should begin, if begun at all. What is the sense in fixing a low rate for a man of 21, and then when he becomes old and extra hazardous allowing the same rate to remain? Suppose a thousand men should join young. Twenty years thereafter another thousand young men would want to join. Our gradists would have them come in at the same rate as the first thousand, and at the same time contending that the first thousand would be twice as hazardous to the organization as the last thousand; and yet the payments of all would be exactly alike. This would be justice with a vengeance! And yet it is exactly the same in principle as the graded assessment plan in practice. Even on the score of justice it does not appear to have a whit of advantage over the level plan.

Attempted Fraud in Illinois.

From the current number of the Anchor and Shield, published at Paris, Illinois, we learn of an attempt that has recently been discovered to defraud the Order of $2,000 by a false death report. The facts are briefly as follows:

On October 25, 1882, James M. Lyon became a M. W. Degree member of Auburn Lodge, No. 49, A. O. U. W., of Auburn, Ills., and as such received upon proper application a beneficiary certificate from the Grand Lodge of Illinois under the laws of the Order. This certificate was made payable at his death, by direction of J. M. Lyon, to James G. Crenshaw, a resident of Kentucky. Said Lyon paid his assessments and Lodge dues regularly while in Auburn. For want of employment, he, a short while after his becoming a member of the Order, went to Metcalf Co., Ky., his former home, where he obtained employment at his trade as a house carpenter. On July 2d, the Grand Recorder, C. P. Hitch, received a letter, under date of June 29th, from Bro. W. A. Wallace, M. W. of Auburn Lodge, No. 49, stating that Bro. Dawson, Recorder of that Lodge, had sent official notice to the Grand Recorder's office of the death of Bro. J. M. Lyon. On the same day said preliminary notice came as follows:

AUBURN, ILL., June 29, 1883.
C. P. Hitch, Esq., G. R., A. O. U. W.,
Paris, Illinois—DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: We have just received word from James G. Crenshaw, the payee on beneficiary certificate of James M. Lyon, No. 31, of this, Auburn Lodge, No. 49, A. O. U. W., of the death of Bro. Lyon on the 19th of this month at Randolph, Metcalf Co., Ky. His death was caused by falling from a scaffold. We will forward proofs as soon as received.

Yours fraternally, in C. H. and P.,
HENRY DAWSON, JR.
Recorder Auburn Lodge, No. 49, A. O. U. W.

Everything appeared correct, and proofs of the alleged death being furnished in the shape of sworn affidavits from Crenshaw and other friends of Lyon, bearing the supposed signature and seal of Metcalf county officials, preparations were made to forward Crenshaw the money.

But about this time certain rumors reached the ears of Bro. Dawson, the Auburn Lodge Recorder, which set him to thinking, and the results of his cogitations were the telegraphing to the Grand Recorder and Grand Receiver to withhold the money until further notice. A meeting of Auburn Lodge was immediately called, the matter laid before them, and Bro. Dawson was appointed to investigate, which he did with skill worthy a professional detective.

Within two days from September 10th he had gone to Kentucky, and speedily unearthed a fraud which was more remarkable for its colossal cheek than its ingenuity, although the latter was not entirely lacking. Lyon was discovered alive and well, though somewhat taken back by the exposure. The "official signatures" were proved to be forgeries of unknown names, to which authority was lent by the county seal, which had been evidently purloined for a few moments for the purpose. Lyon being an ignorant man, is looked upon as being more the tool of Crenshaw and his friends than a principal in the affair. Both of them, however, were placed under arrest, and will doubtless be prosecuted vigorously until they receive their deserts.

It is expected that Lodge No. 226 will be installed at the Stockyards, near Berkeley, this week.

Important Decision.

The case of Winterholter vs. The Workmen's Guarantee Fund Association, now pending in the Courts, presents some points of interest to all beneficiary organizations. The plaintiff is the executor of the last will and testament of Fritz Hoffmeister, who died while a member in good standing of the corporation defendant. The certificate of his membership recited that the sum of one thousand dollars should be paid "subject to his will," upon his death, by the Association. No other expression of his as to whom it was his will or desire that it should be paid to is known to have been made by deceased save that contained in his last will and testament, which created his aged mother in Germany his sole legatee, and appointed J. W. Winterholter executor, without bonds. The Association declined to pay the thousand dollars to the executor upon demand, and he brought suit.

The action was tried before Judge Lawler, of Department No. 8, last week, and judgment went for plaintiff. The reason assigned by the defendant for not paying the money to the executor as set forth in the answer and shown on the trial were, that the Association never contracted to pay deceased anything, but to pay to whomsoever he might will or wish; that nothing ever vested in deceased save the right to designate to whom one thousand dollars should be paid; that he exercised that right by his last will and testament; that deceased was never possessed of the thousand dollars; it was not a part of his estate, hence the executor had no right to the money.

In its answer the Association disclaimed any interest in the controversy other than to insist upon just payment, claiming the full amount should be paid to the mother, and not to the creditors of the estate, and offered to deposit the money in Court for its disposition. The mother was represented through the German Consul, her attorney in fact. Counsel for defendant cited the case of Worley vs. N. W. Masonic Aid Society, decided by the U. S. Circuit Court, District of Iowa, reported in Vol. X of the Federal Reporter, page 227, in support of his position, and it seems to be a case fully in point, although the conclusions there reached and so clearly expressed that they are not to be misunderstood, are not concurred in by Judge Lawler. The Supreme Court of Iowa has also decided contrary to Judge Lawler's opinion in a similar case. The Judge held that the money did not belong to the estate, but should be paid to the executor, and not to the mother's attorney-in-fact. Of course a judgment for plaintiff leaves him but one course—to pay the money to the creditors. An appeal to the Supreme Court will be taken.

Bro. S. J. Clark, of California Lodge, No. 1, and for many years connected with the mailing department of the San Francisco Postoffice, has met with a terrible bereavement in the loss of two of his children from diphtheria, and more are threatened with the terrible disease. The sudden blow has made Bro. Clark almost distracted. He has the profound sympathy of all Workmen.

On the first day of September, Ohio for the second time became a separate jurisdiction. This State, after having managed its own beneficiary for a number of years, returned to the Supreme Lodge in 1878, as their membership had fallen below 2,000. But now that they have worked their way to over 3,000, it becomes the duty of the Supreme Lodge to set them apart once more; in referring to which the Ohio A. O. U. W. Journal says: "Let us make the Supreme Lodge Beneficiary Jurisdiction feel sorry for having set us upon our own feet," claiming that while their membership has been steadily increasing, the death rate in their State has been steadily decreasing, giving them every reason to hope and believe that the limit 28 will not be reached during the coming year.

Grand Recorder's Department.

HEADQUARTERS of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always enclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

SEVERAL of our old D. of H. Lodges are about ready to commence business under the beneficiary law. Some have already done so. Had our present constitution been in force two years ago we should have now in the jurisdiction not less than 5,000 beneficial members of the D. of H.; but though much effort was expended to make something of the Degree, nothing of consequence was accomplished. Now we must pull against the stream; but persistent and intelligent effort will yet make the D. of H. a jewel in the crown of the Order. In response to several inquiries from the brethren in various portions of the State, we will say that the cost of organizing a D. of H. Lodge is:

For set supplies.....	$25 00
For Deputy's fee.....	15 00
Total.....	$40 00

If the Deputy sees fit to donate any portion of his fee, the cost is reduced accordingly. The set of supplies embraces everything usually needed in the Lodge, except badges, and those can be dispensed with for awhile and until a Lodge has spare funds with which to buy them. It is encouraging to know that increasing interest is being awakened in the direction of these Lodges.

NEW DEGREE OF HONOR LODGE.—At Newhall, Los Angeles county, September 15th, was organized Oak Grove Lodge, No. 27, Degree of Honor, with 23 charter members. The organization was made by District Deputy Cobler, and he reports good prospects for the young Lodge, which is under the fostering care of Newhall Lodge, No. 218. The following are the officers of the new Lodge: Mrs. C. A. Mentry, P. C. of H.; Mrs. S. H. Drew, C. of H.; Mrs. F. Mathers, L. of H.; Mrs. J. F. Powell, C. of H.; Mrs. S. H. Reynolds, Rdr.; S. H. Reynolds, Fin.; C. A. Mentry, Rvr.; Mrs. J. B. Morrison, S. U.; J. F. Powell, I. W.; H. B. Proudfit, O. W.; J. J. Connor, O. N. Kent, J. B. Morrison, Trustees; Doctors Lindley, Orme and Hannon, Med. Ex's.

THE PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, published in San Francisco, in the interest of the A. O. U. W., is worthy of the patronage of every Workman on the Pacific coast. Its ideas contained in its last issue are in accordance with our own in regard to introducing the reading of essays, recitations, music, etc., in the Lodges. It would certainly increase the attendance and create a livelier interest. Let us inaugurate this policy in Los Gatos Lodge, No. 76.—Los Gatos News.

The total amount paid for salaries in all the jurisdictions of the A. O. U. W. for last year was $31,346.64.

The Human Hornet.

There are but few persons, doubtless, who have not studied the peculiar characteristics of the hornet, and who have not been subjected to his style of argument. You have noticed as he sits upon his perch, with what an important air he surveys all objects around him, and is always ready and anxiously waiting to give vent to his contemptible nature on some imaginary enemy. With what care you must approach his majesty, for every act of yours will be construed as a direct insult. This peculiar meanness can be excused in the hornet, for it is an instinct of his nature, and he cannot help it. But the human hornet of all created intelligence is the most despicable. He is generally found to be in possession of an overwhelming amount of self-importance. You need not mistake him for a true gentleman. He is known by his loud talk and domineering style; he abounds in argument, and will not scruple to injure by bitter abuse or would-be sarcasm the feelings of any that present a more forcible theory than his. He is known also as a superb boaster, and selfishness is the feature that always stands in front. His is an irritable nature, easily provoked, and very sensitive to imaginary wrongs. With what care you must approach him; always watchful, that no unguarded word is thoughtlessly spoken. But, fortunately, he is so well known among those with whom he mingles that no great amount of injury is the result. His influence is very limited, and can only harm those who are less familiar with his irate disposition. Every town and society have their pet human hornets, and endeavor to console themselves that possibly in the near future they may be ridden of this turbulent element.

The Assuming of Titles by Unauthorized Bodies.

Much trouble and annoyance has resulted from the unwarranted assumption of titles, names, etc., of fraternal societies by corporations, associations and organizations that were in nowise connected with said societies. Just as soon as an Order got strength and popularity, some one or other would get up something, entirely outside of and unauthorized by said Order, and directly or indirectly attach the name of said Order to it. We do not have to go very far to recollect a number of so-called "Masonic," "Odd Fellow," and other "Savings Banks" and other associations, whose closing up has been detrimental to said Orders. In 1871, both the Sovereign Grand Lodge and the Grand Lodge of California passed laws forbidding the use of names, titles, initials, emblems, etc., without authority by the Supreme or Grand bodies. But there are always those who proceed without law, and at last it has become necessary to take imperative measures.

In all associations there is a large element that likes display, and "soldier's clothes," swords, chapeaux, feathers, etc., and to it there is no objection, provided they are legally obtained. The S. G. L. of the I. O. O. F. some years ago adopted laws allowing encampment members to wear uniforms. Still, this did not seem to be satisfactory to some, and a sort of outside Order was formed about two years ago called the Patriarchal Circle, having degrees of its own, and basing the qualification for membership upon the rules and regulations of the I. O. O. F. and using the prestige of said Order.

This was rather more than the authorities could bear, and Grand Sire Leech promptly put his foot down upon it. He submitted his action to the S. G. L. at its session this month, and the Supreme body unanimously indorsed the resolutions which were offered in regard to his action.

The resolutions, which take effect on January 1st, prescribe that any Odd Fellow who shall hereafter retain membership in or become a member of any sect or organization not subordinate to the S. G. L. which shall have adopted any emblems of this Order or in which the qualification for membership is based upon an application in this Order, shall be guilty of conduct unbecoming an Odd Fellow and of a grave offense against Odd Fellowship, and upon consideration shall be expelled. The duties of Subordinate Lodges in this matter are set forth, and the penalty of deprivation of a charter for failure to require due compliance therewith is imposed.

There is but little doubt of the result. Every faithful member will obey, and those who refuse will lose their membership in this Order. It would have been a good thing if this law had been imperatively enforced many years ago.

There are other Orders similarly situated, where outside and unauthorized organizations are using titles, initials, pretending to confer degrees, etc., that will do well to follow the example of the I. O. O. F. There is but one legal, safe rule in this matter, and that is, that no organization of any character should be allowed to use the name, title or initials of an Order except by consent of the Supreme or Grand body, and that no degree, work, ritual or ceremony should be allowed under said names or titles that did not emanate from the Supreme Lodge. Any practice, direct or indirect, that is otherwise sure to be detrimental, sooner or later.

Some of the Eastern exchanges and members wonder why in California, the most noted of jurisdictions in carrying forward successfully all fraternal Orders, that the so-called "Select Knights" of the A. O. U. W. cannot get a foothold. But the answer is plain. They are an unauthorized and outside organization, assuming the title of an Order and conferring degrees without permission of the Supreme body, and as such, are not entitled to and will not receive the indorsement and assistance of the membership in this jurisdiction; and how, under general fraternal law, as well as A. O. U. W. law, they are permitted to do business anywhere, is beyond comprehension in this locality. It is only a question of time when the A. O. U. W. will be compelled to follow the I. O. O. F. in this matter, unless the said Select Knights leave off the initials of the Order from their title.—S. F. Call.

We do not believe in allowing parasites of any name or description on any Order, and we do believe that any society or individual members who foster them will some day surely regret it.

Eloquent Common Sense.

At the recent called session of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, New Jersey and Delaware, held in Baltimore, Bro. Joseph C. Smith, Grand Overseer of Pennsylvania, addressed the Grand Lodge. After a brief resume of the practical operations of the Order and a statement of its wonderful accomplishments, he paid an eloquent and impassioned tribute to the fraternal features of the Order in the following words:

You have heard thus clearly explained what the Order has done and the hopes we have of its future usefulness. How can they be most surely realized? Is it possible that so great a beneficence could be so surely and so economically conducted by individual enterprise? Can it be hoped that any assessment plan, however honestly conducted, can accomplish these results? Every evidence we have proves to the contrary. It is by our Lodge system we live, and it is that which gives us our strength; by that the membership are carefully and systematically supervised. It is by means of the Lodge the membership is continued and augmented. Through that inexpensive machinery the best of new risks are obtained without a commission. But above all, and more valuable than all, it is by the living, broad fraternity taught in our Lodges that we get our greatest vitality.

We have demonstrated that our membership embraces all classes who lead a life of usefulness; they all meet on a common level. It elevates and cheers the weak; it does not drag down, it lifts up. The better learned have their humanities enlarged in helping to a higher plane their less fortunate brethren. Every motto and every teaching our Order possesses or imposes does good to all its members. We are not working for own material interests in this world, but for those of our widows and orphans who are to survive us. This ennobs us and gives greater interest to the social and fraternal life of our Lodges.

Upon the arch spanning the portals of every Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen is engraved in letters of gold: "Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." Ages before our Savior delivered this rule of action, the pagan philosopher had taught its precepts, but in a negative manner. They taught their disciples to refrain from doing to any one what they would not have done unto themselves. But He who "spake as never man spake" makes it a commandment. It has come ringing down the centuries as an obligation to every Christian man; it says to the man having a competence: "Join with your neighbor less fortunately situated, and by your mutual contributions assure the families of both of you from want, and by fraternization, mutually inspire and elevate each other." Under our banners the golden rule can be fully complied with. Each man can put himself in his neighbor's place and do exactly as he would have his neighbor under like circumstances do by him. In the bonds of our Order, therefore, fraternity, broad and comprehensive, is the main strength and factor of our stability.

Look, therefore, to the Lodge! See to it that the lukewarm are aroused, the careless reasoned with and admonished, the sick and absent protected, and the destitute helped that they may be able to help themselves. These, together with the burial of the dead and the extended protection to the widow and orphan, form a series of duties ennobling to manhood, and will mark the existence of our Order as everlasting as yonder rock-ribbed mountains, in whose shade time is withering, and around whose summits "eternity must play."

A Valuable Suggestion.

The following letter from Plymouth, Amador county, gives one Financier's plan concerning his methods, which seems to contain a valuable suggestion to Financiers in general, who may have experienced the same trouble that he has, but who may not have found so adequate a remedy:

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Your article in the last issue of the WATCHMAN, on the "Importance of Correct Lodge Records," contains a suggestion that it would be well for all Financiers to heed, as it may not only save our Order some expensive litigation, but some personal annoyance. My plan has been to take a list of the names of the brothers, draw perpendicular lines a short distance apart, heading the spaces with the date and number of assessment. As I write each notice I place a cross against each name, pursuing the same course in addressing the envelope. The number of sealed notices corresponding with that of the names on the list, shows there is no mistake, and thus secures a record. This is my fourth term of office, and during that time I have found it of practical value at least a dozen times; for brothers will be careless and take their notices from the postoffice, and forgetting all about them, get mad because they "haven't been notified." When a brother thus complains to me, I show him my records and he collapses. Fraternally yours, A. J. COSTER, Financier Banner Lodge, No. 121, Oct. 2d, 1883.

THE ridiculous cast given to an expression by a simple typographical error is illustrated in a page advertisement in an Eastern paper of a stained glass substitute for church windows, etc., starting off in display type as follows: "There must be a widow in your house that would be charmingly beautified by the easy application of my permanent and inexpensive stained glass substitute, consisting of a thin, tough, translucent material." All of which looks like an unblushing indorsement of some modern cosmetic.

WE acknowledge receipt of the first numbers of Poor Richard, a literary, educational and domestic journal published monthly at San Luis Obispo by J. K. Tuley. The number before us has a fine typographical as well as literary appearance, and offers tempting club rates with a number of the leading journals of this State, including all the publications of Dewey & Co., publishers of this paper.

G. H. FRANCOEUR, correspondent and agent for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, and other publications of Dewey & Co., called upon us yesterday. All A. O. U. W. members should take the WATCHMAN.—Redding Free Press, Oct. 6.

Of the professions and business represented in the Supreme Lodge at its last session, there were 18 lawyers, 11 merchants, 8 physicians, 7 journalists, 4 clergymen, 5 manufacturers, 5 holding government offices, 3 real estate brokers, 2 farmers, 1 public school inspector, 1 cotton broker, 1 inspector of steamboats and 4 bankers.

W. B. Turner, of the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, paid our town a visit Tuesday. He is a pleasant and clever gentleman, and we are glad to hear that he made a large number of converts to that paper while in Haywards.—Haywards Journal, Sept. 15th,

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time he intends to pay for it, let him not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing only one cent) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the 8th and 23d of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
INDEPENDENT ORDER HOSENI FRIENDS,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS AND LADIES OF HONOR,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN RULE,
ORDER OF MUTUAL COMPANIONS.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

RECORD PUBLISHING CO.,
252 Market St., S. F.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinion of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Newspaper Agents Wanted.

Extra inducements will be offered for a few active canvassers who will give their whole attention (for a while at least) to soliciting subscriptions and advertisements for this journal and our other first-class popular newspapers. Apply soon, or address this office, giving address, age, experience and reference.

Dewey & Co.'s Scientific Press Patent Agency.

OUR U. S. AND FOREIGN PATENT AGENCY presents many and important advantages as a Home Agency over all others, by reason of long establishment, great experience, thorough system, intimate acquaintance with the subjects of inventions in our own community, and our most extensive law and reference library, containing official American and foreign reports, files of scientific and mechanical publications, etc. All worthy inventions patented through our Agency will have the benefit of an illustration or a description in the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS. We transact every branch of Patent business, and obtain Patents in all countries which grant protection to inventors. The large majority of U. S. and Foreign Patents issued to inventors on the Pacific Coast have been obtained through our Agency. We can give the best and most reliable advice as to the patentability of new inventions. Our prices are as low as any first-class agencies in the Eastern States, while our advantages for Pacific Coast inventors are far superior. Advice and Circulars free.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

APPARATUS FOR REMOVING SAND-BARS.—John H. Huffer, Jacksonville, Jacksonville Co., Oregon. No. 285,487. Dated, Sept. 25, 1883. This invention relates to certain improvements in apparatus for removing sand-bars or similar deposits at the mouths of rivers or harbors, and it consists of a receiver or chamber, of sufficient diameter to rest upon the bottom, provided with jet nozzles through which water is forcibly ejected against the bottom, so as to wear it away. The receiver is connected with the vessel or boat carrying the pumps and machinery by a flexible tube, through which the water passes from the pumps, and the tube is provided with bands surrounding it at intervals. These bands have eyes at each side through which wire ropes or chains pass from the boat to the receiver, and hold them together without strain on the tube.

COMBINED CANE AND FAN.—Wm. Verbeck, S. F. No. 285,530. Dated Sept. 25, 1883. This is a fan combined with a cane or parasol-handle, so that the fan can be drawn out for use at any time, and when not in use lies concealed.

To STRENGTHEN and build up the system, a trial will convince you that Brown's Iron Bitters is the best medicine made.

STRENGTH

to vigorously push a business, strength to study a profession, strength to regulate a household, strength to do a day's labor without physical pain. All this represents what is wanted, in the often heard expression, "Oh! I wish I had the strength!" If you are broken down, have not energy, or feel as if life was hardly worth living, you can be relieved and restored to robust health and strength by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, which is a true tonic—a medicine universally recommended for all wasting diseases.

501 N. Fremont St., Baltimore

During the war I was injured in the stomach by a piece of a shell, and have suffered from it ever since. About four years ago it brought on paralysis, which kept me in bed six months, and the best doctors in the city said I could not live. I suffered fearfully from indigestion, and for over two years could not eat solid food and for a large portion of the time was unable to retain even liquid nourishment. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters and now after taking two bottles I am able to get up and go around and am rapidly improving.

G. DECKER.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is a complete and sure remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Malaria, Weakness and all diseases requiring a true, reliable, non-alcoholic tonic. It enriches the blood, gives new life to the muscles and tone to the nerves.

Mr. Hall's Mistake.

Miss Carson came to Chicago before the great fire, or, as she always expressed it, the "great conflagration." She kept boarders, and the struggle she made to at least come out even at the end of the month gave her face a pinched and worried expression which her blandest smile could not wholly obliterate.

Her boarders were five in number, and were all gentlemen.

Mr. Hall, an old bachelor of fifty, had boarded with Miss Carson for six years, though he threatened to leave on an average of once a week.

Mr. Wilkins, Mr. Crane and Mr. Stowe were salesmen in a large dry goods house. They occasionally presented their landlady with gloves, handkerchiefs, or the latest thing in neckwear, in return for which kindness she darned their stockings and replaced missing buttons.

Last, though by no means least, for he was six feet tall, there was Mr. Fay, a young lawyer who had taken a room immediately under the mansard roof, and who spent most of his evenings reading ponderous volumes that his landlady declared made her heart ache even to look at.

At first Miss Carson was inclined to weave romance about Mr. Fay. He was so handsome, so quiet and reserved. Was he somebody in disguise, or was he suffering from an unrequited love? As months passed on, however, and nothing startling was heard concerning him, she ceased to think much about him, merely regarding him as a rather unsociable young man, totally wrapped up in his studies.

Miss Carson made it a point to always show a ready sympathy with whatever interested her boarders.

If Mr. Stowe told her that the White Stockings had beaten the Boston, or some other thrilling item of news connected with the national idiosyncrasy, she would exclaim: "I am surprised!" or "What a pity!" with an interest that was only equalled by her ignorance of the great American game.

But it was a severe trial to the good orthodox lady when Mr. Hall, who was an admirer of Ingersoll, would say: "I tell you, Miss Carson, it is only a question of time when church-going will be regarded as mere superstition. People will laugh over it as they now do over witchcraft."

Miss Carson would not argue. She would merely throw him a sickly smile, and adroitly change the subject, wishing with a gentle sigh that Mr. Hall would marry a woman who would change his wicked views.

One cold winter evening the landlady did not appear, as was her usual custom, behind the coffee-urn at the dinner table. "Old girl sick?" asked Mr. Wilkins of the company in general.

"No," replied Mr. Crane; "she has gone to the Twenty-second street depot to meet a little girl, her niece, who is coming here to live."

"If she is going to take a child to raise that settles it with me," growled Mr. Hall in a deep base voice. "I shall leave at the end of the month. What is that in front of you, Stowe? A meat pie of course! Meat pie is an invention of boarding-house keepers to save scraps. Miss Carson says she never gives us hash, but she either puts it between crusts and calls it meat pie, or she adds onions and calls it an 'Irish stew!'"

"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," observed Mr. Wilkins.

"To-morrow will be Sunday," continued Mr. Hall, "and that means codfish balls for breakfast. Will somebody tell me the connection between codfish-balls and Sunday morning, that they should appear regularly on that particular day? Is there any creed that insists on codfish-balls for Sunday breakfast?"

As no one volunteered an answer to this question, Mr. Hall finished his dinner with the remark that he hoped soon to take his meals where he would be served as a gentleman ought to be, and not be fed like a tramp.

Miss Carson's boarders were rather surprised to find her niece a full-grown young lady instead of the little girl they had expected to see. It would be a difficult matter to describe Flo Sheldon. She was not a beauty. Her nose was a trifle "tiptilted" and her mouth a little too large, though her teeth were white and even; but her eyes were the glory of her face. They were large, dark and bright; they were shaded by long curling lashes; they were such alluring, provoking, bewitching eyes!

"I have always mentioned Flo as my 'little' niece," said Miss Carson at the breakfast-table. "I can scarcely realize that this tall young lady is the little girl in short dresses I parted from five years ago. Ah, well! I have changed a great deal in that time myself."

"Not at all," said Mr. Hall, with a sudden and most unaccountable attack of politeness. "I assure you you look as young and as—er—rosy as you did six years ago. Time has not put silver threads among the gold, or er—er—trifled with your appearance in any way." This was true. Miss Carson's hair was drab, and her complexion matched it. Time could make no startling change in either.

A gradual but very perceptible change came over the house after Flo's arrival. She was a very industrious girl, and knew how to employ her time. The curtains were looped less primly, the parlors had a more comfortable, home-like appearance, while delicate puddings, flaky pies and delicious coffee showed her acquaintance with the culinary art.

"You are certainly the personification of youth, health and happiness combined, Miss Flo," said Mr. Fay, as he found her late one afternoon singing gayly as she was spreading the cloth for dinner. "It does one good merely to look at you."

"Thank you; pray continue to look at me then, by all means. As to the first observation you made, I can say that I deserve it. I am young, I am certainly healthy, and I am very happy, for to-night I am going to the opera. When you learn that I am fond of music, and that I never saw a real opera in my life, you will not be surprised to hear that I can scarcely keep from dancing with glee as well as singing."

"Your parents do not approve of that kind of amusement, I suppose?"

"Oh, that was not the trouble. We live in the country, and my father could not afford to take his six daughters to a city merely for a pleasure trip. You have no idea how glad I was to get my aunt's invitation to come to Chicago, and how much I enjoy myself when I go down town. It is stale to city people, I suppose, but I like to watch the crowds, to study the different faces, and to notice the various expressions. Why, even the noses are a study," she continued, laughing. "Did you ever look about you in a street car and notice the variety of noses? The insignificant little nose, the sharp prying nose, the sly hooked nose, and, as Dickens says, the 'composite or mixed nose.' But you must not stay here, or I shall never get my work done in time to dress for the opera."

She appeared at the dinner table in her best dress, a black silk with knots of scarlet ribbon at her throat and waist. Her black hair was wound in heavy braids about her head in a most becoming style, and a rich color dyed her cheeks. Never had she looked so pretty, and Arthur Fay realized for the first time that he would like to woo and win his landlady's niece. But thoughts of love and marriage were not for him, and he must put them aside. As soon as dinner was over Mr. Fay went out for a moody stroll and a smoke. When he returned Flo was playing an accompaniment while Mr. Stowe sang. The latter was doubtless to be her escort to the opera. Probably this was the cause of her excessive happiness that afternoon. Mr. Fay resolved to seek his room and forget his unpleasant thoughts in hard study. Mr. Hall stood at the foot of the stairs with an opera glass under his arm, while he strove to draw over his fat hands a pair of pale lavender kid gloves.

"What an insufferable puppy Stowe is," said Mr. Hall, in a confidential growl. "He knows that Miss Flo is going to the opera with me, but he keeps her there playing in order to show off that wretched voice of his. Why, he howled for a mortal hour last night, and kept her pounding away for him all the while. Confound these gloves! Why don't they make 'em fit the human hand and not in the shape of a bird's claw? Here comes Miss Carson; perhaps she can button 'em for me."

That lady smiled obligingly, and made several ineffectual efforts to make the glove meet across about two inches of Mr. Hall's swollen palm.

"I am very much afraid the gloves are too small, observed Mr. Fay, coolly.

"They are not," snapped Mr. Hall. "Are they, Miss Carson?"

"Oh, dear, no, not at all," said Miss Carson, faintly, as she tried to make the obstinate button meet the still more obstinate button-hole.

"Well," then the hand is too large for the glove; something is evidently the matter," said Mr. Wilkins, who had appeared on the scene a few minutes before.

"Why, how strange, I never thought of it!" exclaimed the landlady, drawing from her pocket a bunch of keys, attached to which was a small button-hook.

"Trust a woman for helping a fellow out," said Mr. Hall. Miss Carson smiled and redoubled her efforts.

"Ah, I have sighed for rest!" sang Mr. Stowe from the parlor. Suddenly Mr. Hall gave vent to a prolonged "o-h!" which sounded like a false note in Mr. Stowe's song.

"You have dragged my whole palm through that button-hole, I think. Here, let me try it." He gave the glove a vigorous wrench and split it across the back. Mr. Hall said nothing. He probably thought he could not do the subject justice. He made a little ball of the gloves, opened the door, and threw them with all his strength into the street, after which he went to his room for a fresh pair.

"Old Hall is crazy about that girl," observed Mr. Stowe to Mr. Fay that evening. "I don't blame him, either. She looked stunning to-night. I shouldn't mind taking her myself."

"Perhaps Miss Sheldon would object to being taken by you," returned Fay, haughtily.

It was true that Mr. Hall was in love. Almost the first glance of Flo's eyes had captivated him. Usually quite careless in his dress, he now became very particular. He threw away the soft felt hat, which he had hitherto worn for comfort, and bought a low-crown felt with a stiff brim turned up with satin. As sack coats were worn short, he ordered the shortest that could be made. He wore light blue and crimson ties, and the latest style of collars and cuffs.

He could not see why Flo Sheldon should refuse him. He had $20,000 well invested and a handsome house on Prairie avenue. He was neither young nor good-looking, but surely Flo was too sensible a girl to care about the mere personal appearance of a man of property, and, better still, a man of intellect. He was so sanguine that he even hinted to his tenant that he might want the house on Prairie avenue himself by the 1st of May.

"Auntie," said Flo the day after the opera, "Mr. Hall is desperately in love."

"In love!" exclaimed Miss Carson, making a great blot on her account-book.

"Yes, and with you," continued the niece.

"With me?" murmured Miss Carson, blushing.

"Anybody would know it," said Flo.

"Doesn't he make every excuse to be where we are? Didn't he go to church twice with us last Sunday—the first sermon he had heard in years?"

He took me to the opera just to please you. To court the whole family is an old trick of lovers. I am the only member of your family that he knows, and he wants to get me on his side. It is evident that Mr. Hall has become convinced of the fact that he can't live without you. Accept him, auntie. He would be the prince of uncles."

The more Miss Carson thought over Flo's words the more firmly convinced she became that the girl was right, so true it is that the wish is father to the thought.

Mr. Hall became jealous of Mr. Stowe, of Mr. Wilkins, of Mr. Crane, and madly jealous of Mr. Fay. That the latter was the handsomest man in the house he could not deny, and Mr. Hall hated him bitterly.

Finally matters came to a climax. Mr. Hall peeped into the parlor one evening when he knew Flo and Fay to be there alone. He heard the word "darling"—he saw Fay kiss her hand!

It was enough. He went to Miss Carson with the whole story. It was improper, it was shocking. Who knew anything about Fay? Who knew that he had not a wife already? Miss Carson agreed with Mr. Hall as a matter of course. She was severe with her niece for the first time.

"What do you know against Arthur Fay?" asked the girl.

"Well, nothing definite, but Mr. Hall does not like him, and—"

Flo's eyes flashed. Mr. Hall's meddling was uncalled for, she said, and when his advice was needed she would let him know.

After this she snubbed her elderly adorer unmercifully. If he ventured a remark she answered so curtly that his breath was almost taken away.

Mr. Hall became wretched. He resolved to lay the whole case before Miss Carson. With her aid he might yet win the wayward girl, who perhaps was only flirting with Fay. He found his landlady seated at the dining-room window pensively darning a stocking.

"Miss Carson," said he, drawing a chair to her side, "I want to speak to you about something that has lain on my heart for the last four months."

Miss Carson's hands trembled so much that she could hardly hold her darning needle.

"You are a shrewd woman," he resumed. "You can not be blind as to the object of my attentions to your niece."

She tried to speak, but the words died in her throat. She made an effort to thread her needle. Anxious to engage her whole attention, Mr. Hall took her hand, and uttered a sharp exclamation as the needle pierced his thumb.

"Flo suspected this," whispered Miss Carson. "Ha! She did? What did she say?"

"Oh, she liked you very much then, but lately—"

"Oh, I know I have been a fool, but with your consent I shall yet be the happiest man in Chicago."

"And I am the happiest woman," she murmured.

"Oh, Mr. Hall, or Jacob, I suppose I ought to call you now, I shall do all in my power to be a good wife."

In her agitation she covered her face with the stocking she had been darning and wept. There was an awful silence. Mr. Hall's tongue was paralyzed. Was this an awful dream? Or was he going mad?

"You must excuse me," said Miss Carson, wiping her eyes. "But the news of Flo's engagement and everything connected with it rather upset me to begin with, and this coming, too, was too much."

"Flo's engagement!" said Mr. Hall in a voice so hollow that it startled him.

"Yes, they have been engaged ever since the night you saw them in the parlor, but Flo would not tell me because she said I was unjust to Mr. Fay. There has been quite a change in Mr. Fay's affairs. He was quite poor, and was obliged to send part of what money he made to support his widowed mother. The same day that he proposed to Flo he had received a letter stating that a fortune had been left him by an uncle in Philadelphia."

Mr. Hall waited to hear no more. He seized his hat and rushed from the house. His tenant was waiting at the office to see him. "You intimated that you wanted the house, Mr. Hall, but I called for a definite answer before—"

"I don't want the house. I am going to leave Chicago. I'll make out a lease for five years if you like. Call this afternoon."

Left alone, he buried his face in his hands and reflected deeply. Whether he wished it or not, he was engaged to Miss Carson. He tried to remember just what he had said, but could not recall his words. Possibly in his confusion he had proposed. Well, she was a good woman and might make a better wife than her niece. He remembered how kindly she had nursed him through the rheumatism two years ago. Yes, it was all for the best. He went to one of the large stores on State street and bought a handsome piece of velvet for a dress. "She shall have a pair of diamonds to wear with it," he said, with a chuckle. His tenant called in the afternoon. Mr. Hall told him that he had again changed his mind. The tenant left deeply disgusted.

"Elizabeth, I really meant what I said this morning," he said, as he laid his presents in her lap.

"Do you suppose I doubted it, Jacob?"

"No, no; of course not. Here comes Flo. Give a kiss to your uncle that is to be, and forgive me for meddling with your affairs. You see I was so devoted to your aunt that I—"

"I understand," replied Flo, with a roguish smile.—Emma Cornelia.

Sleep.

It is scarcely possible for the brain-worker, the delicate and nervous to sleep too much.

Indeed I do not know what special harm could result to these classes, though the heavy, dull and naturally stupid might become more indolent and inactive, in consequence of an unnecessary amount of sleep. The former classes "work on nerve," or are constantly under the influence of excitement—are running the human machine on the "high pressure" principle, always at a great disadvantage. But the "wear and tear" of life, from whatever causes, find an alleviation in good and refreshing sleep. Indeed, it is the mission of sleep to soothe the excited nerves, to aid in restoring the jaded body and to resuscitate in general. It is during natural sleep that nature performs her most beneficent work in the removal of disease, while it is as true that the grand work of consolidation then proceeds untrammelled, the solidification of the blood—made from our food and intended for general repairs of the body—into the tissues.

It is utterly impossible to determine the precise time to be spent in sleep, the age, temperament, sex, employment, manner of life and habits of diet being so various. It is said that John Wesley was able to perform an immense amount of mental labor, living very abstemiously, and yet slept but about four or five hours daily, but it is probable that very few would survive ten years of such labors with that amount of sleep, if the usual style of living should be adopted.

Among the animals it is known that a wide difference in the sleeping habits exists. The herbivorous, sleeping at night and living on a bland food, sleep less than the carnivorous. Though the herbivora are more hardy, are longer-lived, stronger or more enduring, they demand less sleep, are less exhausted by active effort, demanding less recuperation than the carnivora.

It follows that those who stimulate, either by food, by the exciting articles of the castror or by ardent spirits, implying a corresponding waste of vital energy, demand much sleep as a means of restoring the poise of the system or of regulating its action. The frail female, if nervous, those subject to unusual cares, anxiety, excitement, annoyances, etc., so generally succeeded by depression, with all real brain-workers as clergymen and the like, demand an unusual amount of rest and sleep, and sleep under favorable circumstances. One important condition is that it be secured at night, and, as far as practicable in the early part of the night, when the birds secure theirs, though it may not be strictly true that "one hour before midnight is worth two after." Another is that the sleep shall be undisturbed, implying quiet, darkness, and an empty stomach, or the "periodical" suspension of all of the functions of external relation. It is a state of rest, rest of the body as a whole, the stomach included, and of the body, a dreamless sleep. The half sleep or dozing in the morning or that disturbed by harassing dreams, either from gluttony or undue excitement, not only can not refresh one really, but must prove more or less depressing. To secure real sleep it is well to take a very light and plain supper, such as will digest before the hour of retiring.

Dr. Hall says that a single slice of bread and butter and a cup of weak black tea are enough for an ordinary person. I should recommend, instead of even weak tea, none, a cup of cocoa, or still better the cocoa shells, a good nerve, are preferable. If the tea aids one in keeping awake while watching, it is evident that it does so by irritation, and that if we would secure the best sleep it may safely be omitted, at least at night. Instead of the bread, a light oat-meal mush, or that made of "granulated coarse wheat," resembling the crushed wheat, would be an improvement, while all pastry difficult of digestion should be discarded, by those at least needing much sleep.—Dr. Hall, in Golden Rule.

NOVEL NAVAL AND SIEGE GUNS.—The French government is experimenting near Lille upon some naval and siege guns of novel construction and enormous power. One of these, as described by a technical journal, is of steel, and nearly thirty feet long. The tube is strengthened with ten coils of plated steel wire one millimeter (.039 inch) in diameter. The composition is such that the cannon, after a few discharges, becomes elongated by three millimeters. The weight of the gun is fifty tons; it projects a shell weighing 297½ pounds, capable of penetrating armor plates nearly six inches thick at a range of seven and a half miles, and its cost has been $116,160.

Taxation of Inventors and Use of Patent Fund.

Our readers well know that Congressional attention has been yearly invited to the above subject, and kindred questions affecting the rights of intellectual property, with inadequate results. It is now evident that Congress can give that attention to the subject which its importance justifies only by personal appeal to its individual members by their constituents, supplemented by a numerous signed memorial to Congress itself. In view of the assemblage of so many of those specially interested in such questions at the various expositions and conventions, and the near approach of the Congressional session, it is proper to give publicity to a draft of a memorial such as is now being circulated. It is as follows:

Memorial.

To the Honorable the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, manufacturers, inventors and other citizens, interested in the progress of the useful arts, respectfully represent:

That to the law granting to inventors, for a limited period, the exclusive use of their discoveries, the country is indebted for much of its pre-eminent prosperity;

That the surplus to the credit of the patent fund, amounting, on the first of July, 1883, to $2,500,000 in round numbers, unappropriated to any of the ostensible purposes of its exaction, constitutes a special tax upon a useful class of citizens, mostly "poor but making many rich," without constitutional sanction, and neither expedient nor just;

That the fees for granting patents of invention should not, as they have done for many years past, greatly exceed the expenses incurred in examination and other procedures called for in such grants;

That the surplus could and should be applied, under proper safeguards, to means for increasing the usefulness of the patent office, both to inventors and the public;

That among these means are adequate digests and indexes of improvements in the various useful arts, for use of the examining corps, and of inventors and others in the principal industrial centers; increase of the working force of the patent office, on salaries that shall secure and retain competent service; and enlargement of its present cramped and inadequate accommodations.

Under the present law, previous grant of foreign patents operates to limit the terms of one granted here for the same invention to that of the earliest expiring foreign one, possibly because it was thought that the American public should not be called on to pay for what was free elsewhere. The provision, while oppressive to inventors of the more important improvements, fails to accomplish the ostensible object of its enactment in the great majority of American inventions, which, because of this clause, are never patented outside of the United States, and are therefore free abroad from the first. We ask the repeal of this worse than useless clause.

Legislation is asked that shall enable amendment, after due public notice, and within reasonable time after grant, of a defective specification, without on the one hand bringing into subjection machines already constructed, or, on the other hand, releasing previous trespasses on claims remaining unchanged in the amended specification.

It is submitted that a commission be established, with authority to order such Patent Office expenditures, not in excess of receipts, as such commission may from time to time deem fit. It is requested further that the President be authorized to enter into all arrangements with other powers for the international protection of rights of inventors, such a movement having already been made by the English government in the patents, designs and trade-mark act of 1883.

THE EFFECT OF LIGHTNING ON TREES.—The frequency of thunder storms in Switzerland this summer has afforded Professor Colladon, of Geneva, a great authority on electricity and meteorology, ample opportunity of continuing his observations on the effect of lightning on trees and vegetation generally. He has ascertained that when lightning strikes a tree it leaves very few marks of its passage on the upper part and middle of the trunk, a peculiarity which he ascribes to the fact of those parts being more impregnated with sugar, a good conductor, than the lower part. As the electric fluid descends to the neighborhood of the heavier branches, where there is less saccharine matter, it tears open the bark and in many instances shivers the tree. It is no uncommon thing to find the lower part of a tree literally cut by the lightning, while the upper portion and the higher branches seem to have suffered hardly at all. Oaks, however, would appear to present an exception to this rule, for they are often found with tops quite blasted and the passage of the lightning lower down marked by a gouge-like furrow. These furrows sometimes go completely round the tree, like a screw, the reason of which is said to be that the lightning follows the cells of which the bark is composed lengthwise, and in certain sorts of wood those cells are disposed spirally.

THE BOY'S ROOM.—The dining-room, sitting-rooms, parlor and sleeping-rooms, are usually tastefully furnished, bright and cosy, excepting the "boys' room," which very often is the most shabbily furnished room in the house. "The boys are so rough," is the excuse. Try polishing their room, and see if it will not take some of the roughness from its occupants. Ragged quilts must be on the bed, "the boys tear them so." Put on good bedding—make the bed look nice, and they will have too much respect and good sense to destroy things. A carpet, a washstand and all articles considered essential in other sleeping apartments ought to be in the boys' room. Some of the fancy articles the girls have made, and wondered where in the world to put them, will brighten up the forlorn-looking place. A piece of sand-paper with something bright around the edge, fastened to the wall near the match-holder, with a burnt-match receiver fastened below it, will save the wall from being "all scratched up by the boys." If a button comes off when they are dressing, a box with needles and thread will save running all over house to find some one to sew it on, but with the material right at hand can sew it on himself. Make their room look nice and you will not be troubled with muddy boots tracking all the way to the "boys' room." Even the lower animals love a clean nest. The average boy is not lower than the brute I know.—Cor. Rural New Yorker.

HOT WATER AND BEEF.—A writer in the New York Tribune sounds the praises of hot water and chopped beef as a wholesome diet. The chopped beefsteaks are made from the most tender and juicy part of the round, chopped in such a manner as to separate the nutritious part from the tough cellular or fibrous structure that contains it, and which forms more than one-third of the substance. This pulp is carefully removed with a spoon and lightly formed into a cake of the thickness of an ordinary beefsteak, broiled and seasoned with salt, pepper and other condiments. This is pronounced perfectly digestible, and far more delicious than a fillet steak. Two glasses of hot water taken an hour and a half before eating, and a diet of this beef, will, it is said, give the most incorrigible dyspeptic new views of life.

BROS. RICH & BLUMENTHAL, respectively of Enterprise, No. 17, and Mt. Hamilton, No. 43, have been associated in business for a period of 27 years in San Jose as clothiers. Lately they have opened a clothing emporium on First street, that city, 160 feet in length, and stocked it with a fine assortment of furnishing goods and ready made clothing. Connected with their establishment are merchant tailors. Their patrons are the leading citizens of San Jose. It is but a just tribute to their long and successful career to say that a course of honorable dealing has brought them honor, respect and wealth.

A NEW ENGLAND lady was asking her cook the other day about a waitress she proposed to hire, and said: "Mary, is she Irish?" "No mam," said Mary; "she's American." "What is her name, Mary?" "Bridget O'Connor, mam." "Why, then, of course she is Irish, Mary." "No, mam; she was born in Lynn." "Oh, but that makes no difference, Mary; she is not an American." "Well, in faith, perhaps she ain't, mam. They tell me the real ones is red."

BIGGINS never loses his gallantry. When he came home how-came-you-so the other night, and Mrs. B. told him she was ashamed of him, Biggins replied: "Better my wife (hic) should be ashamed of me (hic) than I should be ashamed of my wife."

B. J. BLEIMAN, of Gilroy Lodge, No. 26, has taken the position as special agent for the celebrated house of G. M. Jarvis & Co. of San Jose, who are growers, dealers and distillers of pure California wines and brandies.

WE call attention to the card elsewhere of C. M. Foster, machinist at 211 Mission street. Special attention is paid to the making and repairing of hydraulic, steam and sidewalk elevators.

Precaution Against Consumption.

Dr. Arthur Ransome, in his Manchester Health Lectures, says:
Let me, then, urge again upon you the importance of thorough and sufficient ventilation of your living rooms. Avoid crowded omnibuses or railway-carriages in which the windows are closely shut, or in which the ventilation is so small that it does not prevent the condensation of vapor on the windows. Above all, do not frequent crowded meetings in which the organic exhalations are pent up within four walls. Remember, too, that the danger is especially great wherever there is a continuously high temperature. Professor Koch tells us that the limit of temperature within which the bacillus can be cultivated is from about 86 degrees to 107 degrees Fahr., about the heat of a hot summer's day. The continuously high temperatures in which formerly our consumptive patients were condemned to live was the very worst condition with which to surround them. Consumption is a much more rapidly fatal disease in hot than in cold climates, and it is probable that it is more truly infectious. The Indians treat it as if it were almost as infectious as scarlet fever or measles, and we must ascribe its less prevalence there to the almost open-air life the inhabitants lead. The evil practice of heaping upon the bed at night the clothes that have been worn in the daytime, or even as some do, of wearing the same under-clothing day and night, is most pernicious, and likely to breed consumption in those who live in houses where this practice is pursued.

An advertiser in a Dakota paper wanted the editor to take a calf in payment, and was greatly surprised to see in the next issue of the paper an item captioned with his name to the effect that the editor did not care to take the advertiser himself in payment for the ad.

How to PUT ON A POSTAGE STAMP.—A man can always learn something if he will only look about him. I was at the Postoffice Department the other day, and I noticed an employe busy affixing stamps to envelopes. Every time he moistened the right corner of the envelope and then placed the stamp upon it. I asked him if there was any advantage in wetting the envelope instead of the stamp, and he said: "You notice that I moisten the envelope first; well, I do that because it is the right way. There is a right and a wrong way to everything, and, consequently, there is a right and a wrong way to put on postage stamps. It is impossible to moisten a stamp with the tongue unless a small proportion of the gum adheres to it. Now this gum is by no means injurious, but then the department do not advertise it as a health food, so the only way left is the right way, and that is to moisten the envelope first." After listening to this brief statement, I felt as though I had emerged from the deep shade of ignorance to the glorious sunlight of knowledge.—Washington Letter.

Wood pavement is to be given up in London. It has not only failed to realize the promised advantages, but has led, according to Prof. Tyndal's report, the serious affections of the eyes and lungs. By continual watering the wood became saturated with the nastiness of the London streets, and then, under the influence of the hot sun, gave forth a species of dust which was pernicious. The old McAdam system is to be restored.

THERE was company to supper, the table was set out splendidly, and all were enjoying themselves exceedingly, when the pet of the house unfortunately whispered: "Ma, why don't you have this sort of supper when there isn't any company?"

An Autobiographical Sketch of Father Upchurch.

Apropos of the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the mother Lodge of the Order, it is deemed fitting to devote some space to the founder. The WATCHMAN has, heretofore, given complete biographical sketches of Father Upchurch, but there is frequently a charm about autobiography that is not found in other writers' description of a person's life, and so we make no apologies for presenting the following, which we find in the Ohio Journal:

STEELVILLE, MO., July 30, 1883.

I was born March 26, 1820, in Franklin County, North Carolina. My father, Ambrose, was the son of a farmer. My mother, Elizabeth, was the daughter of the Hon. Henry Hill. There were of us four children, two boys and two girls. When I was four and a-half years old my father was killed; our property was taken by designing persons, and my mother was compelled to resort to her needle to support herself and children. When I was about nine years old, I went to live with my grandfather Upchurch. In 1836 my mother bought a small farm. I then went to her, and remained on the farm until 1837. I then undertook to learn the trade of a millwright. My health being poor, I was compelled to give it up. I got a situation in a store, which I retained until June 1st, 1841, when I was married to a Miss Green, of Bethlehem, Pa., an adopted daughter of John Zeigenfuss, who was her uncle. Mr. Z. and myself opened a hotel in Raleigh, N. C. In 1842, the Washington Temperance Society was organized in the city; we both joined it, and opened the first temperance hotel south of Mason and Dixon's line. In 1845 we had to close for want of patronage. Soon after we opened the Temperance Hotel an old tramp came along sick; I took him in. The next day I discovered that whisky was the cause of his disease. He was sick two or three weeks; in this time he sobered up and joined the temperance society. He was a good engraver and die-sinker. I rented a shop, bought tools, and he went to work. I liked the business and commenced to learn the trade; worked six or eight months, when he died. I was then offered and accepted a situation in the shops of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad Co. I remained in the shops and on the road until 1846, when I moved to Pennsylvania. I worked for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad two years and for the Catasqua Iron Company one year. I then moved to Cressand, and worked for the Mine Hill and Schuylkill Railroad Co. three years; was then appointed Master Mechanic of the road, and retained my position thirteen years; got the oil fever, resigned my position, and went to Oil Creek; put down two wells, both dry; remained on the creek one year; then got the appointment of Master Mechanic of the Alabama and Florida railroad, headquarters at Montgomery. I remained here from February to November, 1856. My health being so very poor, I was compelled to go North again. I worked for the M. W. Baldwin Locomotive Co., Philadelphia, and the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at Altoona. I then moved to Meadville, Pa.

In April, 1868, while in the employ and the Recorder refunded to every man his entrance fee. I can assure you that the future looked dark, but I was determined to do my duty. On November 3d, the second meeting night, seven of the fourteen came forward and paid their entrance fee for the second time. That evening we took in two new members. We went to work with renewed energy and determination to try and build up the infant Order. When we were nine months old we had twenty members.

When my mind runs back, I can hardly realize the fact that our noble Order, now over 120,000 strong, is the outgrowth of that twig planted in Meadville, Pa., October 27th, 1868. Its growth shows the justice of our cause. Let us not grow weary in well-doing, but push the good work forward until every of the Mine Hill and Schuylkill Railroad Company, we had trouble with strikes. It occurred to me that something should be done to obviate this difficulty. Nothing seemed to present itself so forcibly as a society where the employer and employe could be brought face to face and obligate them to the same great principles of the greatest good to the greatest number. With this object in view, I commenced to write up the work of our Order. No opportunity was offered to introduce the work until I went to Meadville. I was induced to join what was called the League of Friendship, Supreme Mechanical Order of the Sun. I soon discovered it was rotten to the core. I offered my work; it was accepted. On October 27th, 1868, Jefferson Lodge, No. 1, A. O. U. W., was instituted, with fourteen members. On the morning of the 28th a number of the fourteen demanded that the words white male be stricken from the constitution. I persistently refused to do so, good man is brought under its beneficial influence. Yours in C. H. and P.,

J. J. UPCHURCH.

IN every co-operative Order there is a considerable proportion of the deaths from hard drinking. It is seldom, though, that the plain English is used in giving such a cause in the proof of death. The physician's vocabulary of scientific terms is most extensive, and frequently words are used which, if attention is attracted, cause expressions of commiseration for the poor devil, who, by the mysterious jaw-breaking conglomeration of consonants, seems to have died from some unusual and terrible disease, the sympathizer little dreaming of the real state of the case. It is refreshing, therefore, in the last assessment notice of the Knights of Honor, to read one death as caused by "whisky." Every one understands that it is blunt and honest, and we know just what we are paying for, and lots of fellows in the same boat cheerfully pay for their comrade gone before.

Seasonable Notes.

The regular term in our Lodges will close with December. It will be but a little time before new officers must be chosen. On the choice of these, brethren, will depend the prosperity of the Lodges for the coming term, for in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred good officers will make a good Lodge, and vice versa. Where practicable the offices should be filled with the idea of advancement, at least from the Overseer up; therefore great care should be taken in the selection of Overseer. Recorders, Financiers, and Receivers, who fill their respective positions satisfactorily, should be retained and become their own successors. There is need of skilled and experienced men in those positions. Under the law there is no necessity for them to vacate in order to be advanced, for three consecutive years of service qualifies them to receive the Grand Lodge Degree, and so become Past Masters.

We notice one grievous fault in many of the Lodges that ought to be remedied. At the close of the term the official financial reports are not ready for the action of the Lodge, and often installation has to be postponed, because they are not ready for a week or more after they should have been disposed of.

Again, when the time for installation comes, often officers who are required to give bonds have not executed them, and so they can not be installed without stretching the law. Lodges should look carefully to these things. Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well.

And now a few words about bonds. Don't make them excessive; but so long as they are required at all see that they are good. If we had our way we would do away with official bonds altogether. As a rule, they prove but a delusion and a snare. It is wrong and illogical that when a man whom we ourselves have chosen, unlawfully takes our money, that then we should take from some innocent but over-confiding party to make good our loss. What better, morally, is it, than the crime for which our trusted servant was guilty?—The fact that we do it under the shield and forms of law does not better the matter a particle. The wrong has been done all the same. In lieu of bonds we should require a monthly or quarterly examination of the accounts and moneys of the Lodge, and the necessity of bonds would disappear altogether. The duty of such examination should be imperative on the Finance Committee, so that an examination of any officer's accounts could in no case be construed as a reflection on his competency or integrity. Under such a system correctness and safety would be assumed. Under such a system many a man would be kept honest and remain a respectable citizen who would otherwise turn out a thief at last.

Franklin Lodge, No. 44, will hereafter meet in Grand Pacific Parlor, on Market street, between Sixth and Seventh, on Friday evening.

The Fireside.

The Old Homestead.

A large brown house, with rambling rooms,
On a rising meadow facing;
A noble tree with loving arms,
Its eastern side embracing.

In front, on greensward sloping south,
Are happy children playing;
And in the field across the road
The men and boys are haying.

On "pasture-hill," in shadows cool,
The cows are idly chewing;
"Old Sorrel," standing by the fence,
The green corn fondly viewing.

By Landham Brook in meadows green,
I see the fisher trolling,
And many a lusty pickerel seeks
The tempting bait he's trolling.

To west, on Nobscot's wooded height,
A cap of mist I'm viewing;
The farmer trims the haycocks well,
He knows a storm is brewing.

And far away, at day's decline,
My eyes o'er green hills roaming,
I see Wachusett's crown of blue
Tower upward through the gloaming.

The cows come home, with beverage sweet,
From swollen udders dropping;
Now lowing for the milker's pail,
And now the young grass cropping.

The work is done, and supper waits
With Hyson wreaths ascending;
While round the board, with festal cheer,
The summer-day is ending.

The dusky shades of night come o'er
The landscape, softly creeping,
And in this valley home are all
The loved ones sweetly sleeping.

Country Life.

WRITTEN BY MARY RUFFELL.

"I hate the country!" I heard some one and a very sensible somebody she was, too—say the other day, "and I never could be happy to live there."

"Yes," I replied, "I said so once myself, and yet three of the happiest years of my life were spent in the country; and it was a grievous trial when the time came that it seemed best to give up my first home and start afresh, even though it was in a city; and my thoughts went back tenderly and lovingly to a lonely South Carolina plantation in the "piney lands," where the nearest neighbors were rough, coarse and uncultivated, and civilization could hardly be sought for under five miles. Just fancy two young people, gay and fond of society, sitting quietly down in such a place and actually being happy. I look back upon it all and wonder what we did, and have often laughingly declared that the chief excitement of my day was seeing the pigs fed; and really, one would scarcely believe how interesting pigs can be if the experiment has never been tried. After all, I think the secret of it was, first, the love that glorifies every thing, when it is the love of a woman's life; and second, the power of finding pleasure in all small things, and not waiting for the great events of life that are often so slow to come. I never shall forget the feeling of absolute content with which I sat down in my own home for the first time. It was all our own—our individual kingdom, where we reigned supreme, with some well-trained dusky subjects to do our bidding.

The big fires in the wide fireplaces were among the first of my comforts. It was so delightful to feel that they cost nothing, for there were acres of uncleared land ready to furnish us with fuel for many a long year; and so the immense logs were piled on the brass fire-dogs that shone as brass fire-dogs ought to shine, and the whole quiet room was full of light.

So we settled down to our new life with some luxuries, a great many comforts, and bright hopes for the future, for we had faith in "King Cotton."

Hog-killing, the making of lard and sausages, the salting and curing of bacon and ham, were a new experience, and I superintended the work of experienced "hands" with much dignity; and it was pleasant to see these household treasures packed into the store-room and smoke-house.

Then the spring came, and the real work of the year commenced—the planting of corn and cotton seed, my secondary business being the raising of chickens and turkeys and making butter, and I found pleasure in it all.

It is true that I had no hard work to do, for servants were plentiful, of their kind, but I had two little children to sew for in the days when sewing machines were not as numerous as they now are, and there was much that no hand but mine could do.

One of my recreations was a flock of pigeons that I made up my mind to tame. I was laughed at, and told that grown pigeons were too shy to make pets of; but I persevered. Every morning, in going to the store-room I filled my pocket with peas, and commenced by scattering them on the ground, first at a little distance, gradually nearer and nearer, and in the end I had the satisfaction of feeding the lovely creatures from my hand. My appearance after breakfast was the signal, and immediately there would be the sound of soft wings, and a big speckled fellow would alight on my head, a purple one on my wrist, another on my shoulder, and when the supply of peas appeared, three or more would be scrambling and hustling each other on my wrist, until I was scratched and scarred as if from a battle.

Then the vegetable garden had to be visited and approved of, perhaps the orchard or the small vineyard, then a little hurried run among the roses before the business of the day. There was a scuppernon grapevine on a large arbor that was a distraction all day long, with a tall step-ladder always in position, ready for duty, and I should be afraid to say how many bushels of grapes I ate during the season.

All small pleasures, but then small things make up the sum of human life, and all taking a little time, that an overworked mother feels she can hardly spare, but time well spent, and giving relief to a mind burdened with many cares and troubled about many things.

A Flower Garden.

If it is ever so small, is the dearest of comforts, and one that so many fail to appreciate for the want of a trial. So many women say it is so much trouble, and they haven't time with so many little children clinging to their skirts; and so much, so much to do. I often think in such a case of a very excellent book by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, called "Little Foxes," in which her advice to all such mothers is to "have silence toward man and speech toward God," and surely one of the ways to come close to an Infinite Presence is through his flowers.

Many times, after a worrying day, when every thing has seemed to go wrong—tired, fretted and discouraged—I have felt their sweet influence, and have been lifted up out of the jar and fret and made to feel that the world was not altogether wrong where such pure things blossomed for our pleasure.

Once, some years ago—there was a time when life seemed a very hard matter, with delicate health, a fretful baby on one hand, and an old person slowly fading out of life on the other, and it was often a puzzle as to which should be cared for first, and the hours of the day and night were full of weariness—I had a stand of growing plants in a large sunny bay window, forty or more in all, some of them overflowing on to the window sills. Every morning I devoted ten minutes to watering them, loosening the soil, etc., and during the day as I ran up and down stairs, I would steal in, look at them, so fresh and green in the sunshine, and go on with the day, cheered and refreshed.

They were a blessed comfort, some of God's own helps, the "angels in disguise" that we so often "entertain unawares." So to all women whose lives are circumscribed, I say have flowers about you—flower beds in summer and potted plants in winter; cut-flowers in your room if possible, a preserve dish full of them on a table, a little vase of them on an inexpensive bracket; put them wherever you can, and however plain your rooms may be they will look like home. I have a friend whose rooms are never entirely empty, for when the cold Eastern winter makes any but hot-house flowers impossible to get, there is always a bunch of autumn leaves, the holly with its red fruit, or beautiful ivy branches artistically arranged.

Household Charms.

Another thing, have books, so easy to get in these days of cheap publications, a little hanging book-shelf if a large library is impracticable, with some standard works and an occasional "Sea-side" for rest for the mind, George Elliott's "Middlemarch," Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," and Black's delightful stories.

Even though the day is very busy, some part of the evening may be made free for a little dip into such pure wells. If you have children of eight or ten read to them occasionally—see how a bright boy will enter into "The Charge of the Light Brigade," or a sensitive girl into the "May Queen," both poems hackneyed, but beautiful always; and while you read you will feel the thrills going all over you as you see the gallant fellows going down "into the valley of death."

It is astonishing how much a child can understand and enjoy. I was reading some of Mrs. Browning's small poems aloud to a girl of sixteen not long ago, and my small man of nine was by, almost asleep, I thought, but the next day he spoke of the one that had specially taken his fancy. It is a sort of education for a child, and helps the mother in more ways than one.

Have pictures, too. A few years ago they were luxuries only to be had by people with some means, but now cheap copies of good pictures, some of them very soft and pretty, may be bought and framed at comparatively small cost. The price of a few chickens and turkeys can help to make a home beautiful.

Ah me! we often think we have so little, when we really have so much; and women in quiet homes long for the bustle and stir of the great world. Oh restless hearts have patience! If you have love, the one good, hold it fast. It is something to win it, but a far greater thing to keep it.

Make home lovely in all ways possible; learn to laugh easily, and to sigh as seldom as may be. Thank God for all small blessings, praying him through all, that the day may be far distant when the one good may slip out of your life, leaving you with an empty heart and desolate.

A Brave Boy.

"So this is our new cabin boy," was my inward exclamation, says our story-teller, as I walked on deck and saw a dark-eyed, handsome youth leaning against the railing and gazing with a sad abstracted air into the foamy waves that were lustily dashing against the vessel. I had heard so many remarks made about him by the crew, who did not like him because he seemed somewhat shy of them, and were continually tormenting him with their rough jokes. He had refused to drink any intoxicating liquor since he came on board, and I was curious to know more about him.

My interest and sympathy were aroused, and I resolved to watch over and protect him as far as possible from the ungovernable temper of the captain and the rough jokes of the sailors. A few days after this conversation with Allen, I was standing beside the captain, when suddenly rough shouts and laughter broke upon our ears. We went to the fore part of the deck, and found a group of sailors trying their utmost to persuade Allen to partake of their grog.

"Laugh on," I heard Allen's firm voice reply, "but I'll never taste a drop. You ought to be ashamed to drink it yourselves, much more to offer it to another."

A second shout of laughter greeted the reply, and one of the sailors, emboldened by the captain's presence, whom they all knew was a great drinker himself, approached the boy and said: "Now, my hearty, get ready to keel right over on your beam end, whin ye've swallowed this."

He was just going to pour the liquor down his throat, when, quick as a flash, Allen seized the bottle and threw it far overboard. While the sailors were looking regretfully after the sinking bottle, Allen looked pale but composed at Captain Harden, whose face was scarlet with suppressed rage. I trembled for the boy's fate. Suddenly Captain Harden cried out sternly:

"Hoist that fellow aloft into the main topsail. I'll teach him better than to waste my property!" Two sailors approached him to execute the order; but Allen quietly waved them back, and said in a low respectful tone:

"I'll go myself, captain, and I hope you will pardon me; I meant no offense." I saw his hand tremble a little as he took hold of the rigging. For one unused to the sea it was extremely dangerous to climb that height. For a moment he hesitated, as he seemed to measure the distance, but he quietly recovered himself, and proceeded slowly and carefully.

"Faster!" cried the captain, as he saw with what care he measured his steps, and faster Allen tried to go; but his foot slipped, and for a moment I stood horror-struck, gazing up at the dangling form suspended by the arms in mid-air. A coarse laugh from the captain, a jeer from the sailors, and Allen again caught hold of the rigging, and soon he was in the watch basket.

"Now, stay there, you young scamp, and get some of the spirit frozen out of you," muttered the captain, as he went down into the cabin. Knowing the captain's temper, I dared not interfere while he was in his present state of mind. By nightfall, however, I proceeded to the cabin, and found him seated before the table, with a half empty bottle of his favorite champagne before him. I knew he had been drinking freely, and therefore had little hope that Allen would be released; still, I ventured to say:

"Pardon my intrusion, Captain Harden, but I'm afraid our cabin-boy will be sick if he is compelled to stay up there much longer."

"Sick! bah, not a bit of it; he's got too much grit in him to yield to such nonsense; no person on board my ship ever gets sick; they know better than to play that game on me. But I'll go and see what he is doing, anyhow."

"Arrived on deck, speaking through his trumpet, he shouted:

"Ho! my lad!"

"Aye, aye, sir," was the faint, but prompt response from above, as Allen's face appeared looking with eager hope for his release.

"How do you like your new berth?" was the captain's mocking question.

"Better than grog or whisky, sir," came the quick reply from Allen.

"If I allow you to descend will you drink the contents of this glass?" and he held up, as he spoke, a sparkling glass of his favorite wine.

"I have forewarned all intoxicating drinks, sir, and I will not break my pledge, even at the risk of my life."

"There, that settles it," said the captain, turning to me, "he's got to stay up there to-night; he'll be toned down before morning."

By early dawn Captain Harden ordered him to be taken down, for to his call, "Ho, my lad!" there was no reply, and he began to feel alarmed. A glass of warm wine and biscuit were standing ready for him beside the captain, who was sober now; and when he saw the limp form of Allen carried into his presence by two sailors, his voice softened, as he said:

"Here my lad, drink that and I will trouble you no more."

With a painful gesture, the boy waved him back, and in a feeble voice said:

"Captain Harden, will you allow me to tell you a little of my history?"

"Go on," said the captain, "but do not think it will change my mind; you have to drink this just to show you how I bend stiff necks on board my ship."

"Two weeks before I came on board this ship

I stood beside my mother's coffin. I heard the dull thud of falling earth as the sexton filled the grave which held the last remains of my darling mother. I saw the people leave the spot. I was alone, yes alone, for she who loved and cared for me was gone. I knelt for a moment upon the fresh turf, and while the hot tears rolled down my cheeks, I vowed never to taste the liquor that had broken my mother's heart and ruined my father's life. Two days later, I stretched my hand through the prison bars, behind which my father was confined. I told him of my intention of going to sea.

"Do with me what you will, captain; let me freeze to death in the mainmast, throw me into the sea below, anything, but do not for my dead mother's sake force me to drink that poison that has ruined a wife's husband, and do not let it ruin a mother's only son."

He sank back exhausted, and burst into a fit of tears. The captain stepped forward, and laying his hand, which trembled a little, upon the boy's head, said to the crew who had collected round:

"For our mother's sake, let us respect Allen Bancroft's pledge. And never," he continued, firing up, "let me catch any of you ill-treating him."

He then hastily withdrew to his apartment. The sailors were scattered and I was left alone with Allen.

"Lieutenant, what does this mean? Is it possible that—that—"

"That you are free," I added, "and that none will trouble you again."

"Lieutenant," he said, "if I was not so ill and cold just now, I think I'd just toss my hat and give three hearty cheers for Captain Harden."

"He served on our vessel three years, and was a universal favorite. When he left, Captain Harden presented him with a handsome gold watch as a memento of his night in the mainmast." Selected.

Women in Journalism.

The nature of the work to be done is not changed by the fact that it is a woman who undertakes it. It may be done better, more delicately, more shrewdly, more honestly, but it is the same work and requires the same qualities, whether the worker be a man or woman. There are, indeed, some special branches of labor upon a newspaper, such as that which relates to the dress of women, to needle and other work of the kind, with which women are naturally more familiar than men, and women will therefore treat them more satisfactorily and intelligently. But a "woman's duty upon a newspaper" is substantially the same with that of the man.

Perhaps the most conspicuous and noted of women who have been employed in journalism was Harriet Martineau. For some years she wrote editorially for a London paper. Her articles were upon the current public questions of the hour—the policy of the government at home and abroad, the characters of eminent public men, and the various problems of political economy. There was no editorial contemporary of Miss Martineau's who was more fully equipped for the office of public censor, and the volume of obituary biographies which was collected from her contributions to the paper are as admirable and vivid as any which appeared in any journal of the time.

There was, however, nothing which Miss Martineau selected to do, or which was suggested to her to write, which could not be defined distinctly as a woman's work on a paper. She wrote articles not as a woman, but as an editor, as Mrs. Somerville studied astronomy not as a woman but as a scholar. If the Easy Chair may take an illustration close at hand, it would say that any woman who is anxious to know what is a woman's work upon a paper or in journalism has only to turn to the Critic, a weekly literary journal in New York. The Critic is edited by a woman, but it depends for the just and we hope assured success which it has achieved upon the ability with which it is edited, upon the tact with which public sentiment and interest are perceived, and upon the skill with which the books for review and the writers of the reviews are selected.—Harpers' Magazine.

"PLEASE, sir, there's nothing in the 'ouse for your dinner," said the landlady in the tone of one who had a chronic cold, and isn't ashamed of it. "How about the fish I sent in?" "Please, sir, the cat 'ave eat them." "Then there's cold chicken—" "Please, sir, the cat—" "Wasn't there a tart of some sort—" "Please, sir, the cat—" "All right, I must do with Stilton and celery—" "Please, sir, the cat—" "Then cook the cat. Let's have it all at once."

A GROCER grossly insulted Mrs. Mose Schaumburg the other day without intending it. She is an immensely stout woman, and, stepping upon the scales playfully, requested the grocer to weigh her. As he adjusted the weights, he remarked that she weighed 190 pounds, which proved to be her exact weight. "How did you come to guess it?" she asked. "I am used to guessing at weight. I weighed hogs for five years in Cincinnati."

MISS LYDIA POET having gone through a regular examination, has been admitted as a lawyer to the bar of Torino, Italy, with eight votes against four. After her admission to the bar two members of the Council, Mr. Spantigati, M. P., and Mr. Chiaves, resigned.

Scene in Hindustan.

There are no people in this world who are so much attached to rural beauties as the Hindus. By well-wooded rivers, green-encircled tanks, upon the banks of which grow wide spreading mangos casting pleasant shade over the waters, they love to congregate, and there in the early morning come the villagers to refresh themselves by a dip in the azure depths, and to perform those ablutions which the holy law commands, for cleanliness with the Hindu is akin to godliness. It is a moral duty, incumbent upon every Hindu, whether he be Brahman, Kaiat or Banyan, that three times a day he bathe. And in parts of that immense country where no river is, large bunds or tanks are built; sometimes they are artificial, made of marble and of stone, and sometimes where there is a depression; which by careful banking and damming will contain water which falls in the rainy season; and often wells are dug and fountains are struck, so that the water in the tank stagnate not. Such must be the tank of which we give an illustration. The scene is laid in Lower Bengal where vegetation is richer than in any other part of Hindustan—richer than even in Ceylon or in the green hills of Travancore. In the foremother, father and brothers and sisters are abused and consigned to the eternal torment.

Thus the material and the animal he uses in pipal and standing on an island, must be some temple sacred to the water-god, at whose shrine in early morning is poojah, offering of fresh flowers, made; and the steps leading to the water are for the convenience of the priests there living, who have three times every day to cleanse the temple and pour out before the god many libations, to pour before him and over him many cups of water, over which have been pronounced many mantrums, prayers.

The large and imposing structure is the residence of the zemindar, or land-holder, equivalent to the English Lord of the Manor, who holds in his possession all the country thereabout, and to him, when the sahib logue, Englishman, is not near, the natives pay court. His house is lofty, having fine verandas and airy rooms, the best and most conveniently situated appropriated for himself; those to the rear and on the inside are for the zenana, or where the women live. And none does the zemindar respect, for no one's rights does he care, save that of the English and the priests, for under the latter he completely is—for if they tell him to give them one half of his property he dares not refuse, lest they put upon him the ban of

British Postal Service.

The following interesting figures have been compiled from the annual report of the Postmaster-General of Great Britain and Ireland, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1883. Number of letters delivered in the United Kingdom during the year, 1,280,636,200—increase, 42 per cent; postal cards, 144,016,200—increase 6.4 per cent; book packets and circulars, 288,206,400—increase 6.3 per cent; and newspapers, 140,682,600—the slight decrease is owing to their being sent as parcels. One London firm posted 132,000 letters for a single mail, and another firm 167,000 postal cards, while circulars posted by single firms at one time numbered from 44,000 to 56,000. The average of letters per capita was 40 in England and Wales, 30 in Scotland, 16 in Ireland. Mr. Fawcett, Postmaster-General, estimated that the average number of letters per capita in 1881 was, for the United States, 21; France, 15; Germany, 13; Italy, 6; and Spain, 5. Post-offices in the United Kingdom number 15,406, employing 44,600 permanent officers. Of this number 2,561 are women, 455 clerks, and 2,106 counter women. On the retired list are 355 officers with pensions aggregating $884,130.

Perils and Pleasures of the Botan

A reception tendered to the well-known botanists Prof. and Mrs. J. G. Lemmon, at the Harmon Seminary, on the evening of Oct. 16th, was a great success, and was highly enjoyed by all present. The large audience room of the Seminary was well filled, and the excellent addresses by Prof. and Mrs. Lemmon, with musical selection by several of the pupils of the institution, made the evening seem very short. The guests of the evening were in good heart and voice, and they talked in an informal manner of their botanical researches and the results thereof. They described the topography of Arizona, and the peculiar forms of vegetation met with, with an abundance of specimens, and with beautiful water-color sketches, made by Mrs. Lemmon, of various plants as they were found growing. Certainly all who heard went away with new ideas of the great wonderland to the southeast of us. The speakers carried their audience through the plains of mesquite and the almost impenetrable fastnesses of cacti, and showed them the most beautiful flowers and ferns, which they found growing in great abundance in certain ground stands a cocoanut palm—so dear to the heart of the genuine Hindu—for in Madras, and in Bengal, he uses this for all purposes. The fruit is his food; from the water he ferments an intoxicating, though delicious drink. The broad leaf forms the simple roof of his simpler dwelling, and the leaves are often split and made into books; these strips being cut into regular slips, and the clean surface is written upon with a sharp stylus. By these tanks flourish enormous ferns of more than twelve feet in height, and under the immense fronds are often built the huts of the raiat, or husbandman. These ferns are of the most gorgeous coloring, from the pale, delicate light green, streaked with bright yellow and red, to the glaringly gaudy green with its broad bands of scarlet.

In the open patch is a circular mill, upon the wooden handle of which sits a native. Perhaps this mill is his sole property, and the animal which turns it and grinds out the corn is cooling himself in the waters, thus to pass its idle hours, all hidden save the neck and head, which but protrudes from out the water's surface. The bullock thus immerses his body to save it from the bite of the huge horse-fly and dreadful mosquito—the torment of animal life in the Far East. The mill is of peculiar construction. It is built of stone and mortar. Its rim, as seen in the picture, is circular, whilst the floor is of earth hardened like unto adamant. And round and round this mill turning a clumsy crusher toils the patient bullock, enduring many a blow, many a twisting of his tail, whilst his honored per annum. The "good conduct stripe" for letter-carriers, which was formally confined to London, has been extended to the provinces, at a cost of $315,000. A stripe entitles the wearer to 25 cents extra pay per week, and by continued good conduct he can win three stripes. Reply postal cards have been introduced, but have met with poor success.

THE EFFECT OF LIGHTNING ON TREES.—The frequency of thunder storms in Switzerland this summer has afforded Professor Colladon, of Geneva, a great authority on electricity and meteorology, ample opportunity of continuing his observations on the effect of lightning on trees and vegetation generally. He has ascertained that when lightning strikes a tree it leaves very few marks of its passage on the upper part and middle of the trunk, a peculiarity which he ascribes to the fact of those parts being more impregnated with sugar, a good conductor, than the lower part. As the electric fluid descends to the neighborhood of the heavier branches, where there is less saccharine matter, it tears open the bark and in many instances shivers the tree. It is no uncommon thing to find the lower part of a tree literally cut by the lightning, while the upper portion and the higher branches seem to have suffered hardly at all. Oaks, however, would appear to present an exception to this rule, for they are often found with tops quite blasted and the passage of the lightning lower down marked by a gouge-like furrow. These furrows sometimes go completely round the tree, like a screw, the reason of which is said to be that the lightning follows the cells of which the bark is composed lengthwise, and in certain sorts of wood these cells are disposed spirally.

After a careful examination of these figures, postoffice officials here assert that the postal system of this country is operated at a cost much less than that of the United Kingdom, especially when the great extent of country is taken into consideration.

In the United Kingdom, 32,092,026 telegraph messages were sent for the year 1883, an increase of 746,165 as compared with 1882. The number of messages sent in London was 12,374,707, against 2,071,034 in 1881-2. During the past year 102 postoffices and 45 railway station offices were opened for telegraphic work, making the total number of telegraph offices 57,742.

The gross revenue from telegraph was $8,740,300, and net revenue $1,177,850.

UNDERSTAND THE SITUATION.—The Chinamen have already begun to realize the benefits of shutting out competition from an increase of their numbers, and are generally demanding an increase of wages. This is being done both by house and field hands, and the situation will be serious to the housewife unless there are considerable accessions of more desirable people than the Chinese.

situations. It was apparent that our botanists had reaped a perfect harvest of plants new to science, and thus have made most valuable contributions to our knowledge of the flora of the territory. The educational value of their addresses to the young ladies of the Seminary, and to their invited guests, it would be hard to overestimate, and we are glad to know, from the expressions of those who were present, that Prof. and Mrs. Lemmon won for themselves places of honor in the esteem of many, and that the appreciation of their brave and devoted work will be greatly extended by their appearance on the occasion we have described.

Lodge Locals.

Readers are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

Silver Spray, No. 3, D. of H.

As a social feature of our Order, Silver Spray, No. 3, has proved a success. As a part of our beneficiary system, the Lodge is not, as yet, a unit. At their meeting Monday evening, October 22d, there was a good attendance, and the members seemed to enjoy themselves. It is to be hoped that, as now, under the sanction of the constitutional law, our members can avail themselves of the privilege of an additional assurance, that they will do it at once. This Lodge being one of the largest Degree Lodges in this jurisdiction, we hope that they will inaugurate the system that will help strengthen and perpetuate the Order.

Since the above was put in type we have received the following communication relative to this Lodge, which is self explanatory:

"Silver Spray Lodge, No. 3, Degree of Honor, at its last session, made the final arrangements whereby its members can participate in the Beneficial Department of $500 insurance adopted by the Grand Lodge. All members who desire this part of the Degree should apply at once to the Recorder of the Lodge. Also, it would be well to state that the Degree is open to any Master Workman in good standing, his wife, sister, daughter, mother, widow, or lady blood relative of himself or wife who is a regular inmate and part of his family and household. This Lodge is the oldest Degree Lodge in the city, and has a large membership, and it is anticipated that a large amount of business will be done before the end of the year."

San Francisco, No. 4.

On Wednesday evening, October 24th, we made a visit to San Francisco, No. 4, the first Lodge organized in this city. There was a very good attendance of the members and several visitors present. As part of the work of the Lodge, there were receptions of three petitions for the Degrees, and conferring the M. W. Degree on one candidate. The work was fairly done, especially being creditable on the part of the M. W. A large number of the brethren had words of cheer, and made arrangements to have monthly socials and quarterly reunions.

Golden Gate, No. 8.

On Thursday evening, Oct. 26th, Golden Gate, No. 8, held a social meeting, as is their custom on the last meeting night of the month. There was a very good attendance of their own members, and they were further honored with a delegation from St. John Lodge, who called in a body, and several visitors, including Deputies Danforth, Carroll and Lemont. During recess the cigar boxes were passed, and a season of sociality and speech-making followed, which was very profitable and enjoyable. The M. W. Degree was conferred on two candidates during the evening.

Harmony, No. 9.

This old settler held a fine meeting on Saturday evening, October 20th. This is what is known as a sick benefit Lodge, and the careful attention given to their sick and disabled brethren by the Sick Committee, and the sure and substantial aid given them as weekly payments of $10, is a feature that commends itself to a large number of workmen. The M. W. Degree was given to eight candidates, who were young and of fine physique. To say that the work was well done would not fully describe it. It was almost perfect. During this term twenty-two have received the M. W. Degree, three petitions are lying on the Recorder's desk, and their membership is now 305 in good standing. Surely Harmony is in the front rank of this grand Order.

Social Visit of Yerba Buena to Spartan.

On Friday evening, Oct. 19th, Yerba Buena, No. 14, after completing the work of the Lodge, which included the initiation of one candidate, called in a body on Spartan, No. 36. The visit was anticipated, and the members of Spartan had completed their work, which was, in part, initiating one candidate. The brethren of No. 14 were introduced by Wm. Wilson, P. M. W. of No. 36, and received with honors and words of welcome from Bro. Smith, M. W. The play spell and social feast was carried out as follows: Sentimental solo by S. H. Rankin, Prof. Perkins, organist of Spartan, accompanying; speech of welcome, J. N. E. Wilson, whose interesting and eloquent remarks were well received. Here a surprise was in store, as a large delegation from Franklin, No. 44, called and were admitted, with honors and the usual welcome, and a requisition made on adjacent halls for more chairs. Violin solo, Bro. Lawler, of Spartan; Judge Ferrall made one of his happy and felicitous speeches that put the large audience in a very pleasant mood. Bro. Butt, M. W. of Yerba Buena, made some appropriate remarks, followed by Bro. Hamilton, M. W. of Franklin, also in well chosen words. A recess was followed by an instrumental duet by Bros. Wilson and Lawler; reading, E. P. Danforth, son of Deputy Danforth; selections on the harmonica, Bro. Curtis, of Fidelity. This pleasing and artistic effort was received with much favor and awarded a double encore. Organ solo, Bro. May, P. M. W. of Yerba Buena, followed by an improvised song for the occasion, in which the whole audience joined in the chorus. A unique performance was given by Bro. L. Peterson on the organette, interspersed with witticisms and repartee. Remarks were made by Bro. Adams, M. W. of Olympic, in which he discussed the two great features of our Order—business and fraternity united. The hour of 11 o'clock having arrived, the large and happy company parted. It was the universal expression that this impromptu visit was one of much pleasure and profit.

District Meeting at Hall of Yerba Buena, No. 14.

Deputy Lemont held a district meeting in the hall of Yerba Buena Lodge, No. 14, in Shields' Building, last Friday evening. Although it was a stormy night there was a large attendance, representing fifteen different Lodges. The first work of the evening was providing for the sick members; part second, conferring the M. W. Degree on one candidate. The work was impressively and pleasantly rendered, and a very enjoyable recess followed. The "feast of reason" was opened by the M. W., Bro. Butt, introducing Deputy Lemont, who, in his earnest and heartfelt manner, in a short speech, eloquently gave a succinct history of Workmanship in our Jurisdiction, which was received with much favor. He was followed by Bro. J. W. Watson, Deputy Grand Recorder, in an interesting speech, in which he drew some fine word-pictures, commencing with one whose scene was laid in Meadville, Penn. Bro. E. M. Reading, Secretary of the Workmen's Guarantee Fund, had a few words of congratulation, and was followed by Wm. H. Barnes, P. G. M. W., who in one of his happiest moods put the finishing touch with good effect on the beautiful pictures that had been already drawn. His pleasing address was received with much favor and hearty applause. "Music by the band" followed, which was one of Bro. May's best efforts on the organ. Bro. Butt then announced that the Committee on Refreshments had sounded the alarm, and it afforded him much pleasure to invite them to the banquet-room, where a fine collation was spread. After doing justice to part third, cigars were passed and an adjournment was had to the Lodge-room, where a short season of sociality and congratulatory speeches were in order, and the whole affair did much credit to this thrifty Lodge, and was an especial compliment to one of our most efficient Deputies, Bro. Lemont.

Unity, No. 27.

This honored Lodge, under the present administration, is enjoying a season of great prosperity. Bro. Block, as M. W., has proved himself one of the most efficient officers in this jurisdiction. At their last meeting night several petitions were received, and four candidates received the M. W. Degree.

Unity, No. 27, still continues on its progressive way. At a recent session an elegant Past Master's jewel was presented to G. S. Silliman, P. M. W., by J. N. Block, M. W., on behalf of the Lodge. The prosperity of the Lodge under Bro. Silliman's administration was alluded to in complimentary terms. The recipient appropriately responded.

Magnolia, No. 41.

A visit to this Lodge on Monday evening, the 22d ult., found a good attendance on hand and a lively meeting. The principal topic was the discussion concerning the revising of by-laws. The Magnolia brethren evidently have the spirit of investigation which causes them to thoroughly analyze their work before taking final action on it.

Myrtle, No. 42.

On Saturday evening, October 20th, we called on the brethren of Myrtle, No. 42. We found a goodly number in attendance, and during the evening one candidate received the M. W. Degree. A particular pride and satisfaction to the members of this Lodge is their present corps of officers. Their increase in membership has not been large during the last term, but a regular and steady growth. It is always pleasant to spend an evening with members of Myrtle.

Hercules, No. 53.

The fifth anniversary of Hercules Lodge, No. 53, was celebrated at Hamilton Hall on last Friday evening, Oct. 26th. A large audience, consisting of ladies and gentlemen and the little folks, highly enjoyed the following musical and literary programme: Quartet—"The Whip-poor-will's Call"—Messrs. Baker, Murray, Colgan and Vining; Song, Mrs. Harry Clark; Diction Solo, Mr. Sam Thors; Song, Mr. R. B. Baker; Recitation, Mr. Ed. Chandler; Comic Song, W. J. Leon; Duet, Messrs. Baker and Vining; Recitation (pathetic), Mr. Henry Ben-Hazon; Song, Mr. A. Bergmann; Quartet—"Stars of the Summer Night"—Messrs. Baker, Murray, Colgan and Vining. The encores and double recalls whiled away the happy hours until 10 o'clock, which was followed by a spirited and a very enjoyable list of dances, until 12 o'clock. The following Committee of Arrangements had the honor, and performed their duties satisfactorily: A. J. Vining, Chairman; A. Bergmann, E. F. Baruth, P. M. W.; P. Veasey, P. M. W.; J. H. Congdon, M. W. This Western beacon light of our Order has on her roll 212 members, recruited principally from among our leading business men. It was a happy episode in their history, and it seemed that the young men looked upon Hercules, No. 53, as their pride, and older veterans had renewed their age on this auspicious occasion. This term has been a very prosperous one, under the master hand of Bro. Congdon, M. W., and his able assistants. Fifteen members have been added to the roll this term, and on the following week four more will receive the M. W. Degree.

Sts. John, No. 73.

Last Thursday evening we spent a pleasant hour with the brethren of this Lodge. The work was dispatched with facility, reflecting credit upon the officers. After the business of the Lodge was disposed of the members, by invitation, adjourned in a body to the hall of Golden Gate Lodge, which meets in the same building, and spent a pleasant evening, as noted elsewhere under the local caption of aforesaid Lodge.

Olympic, No. 127.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 23d, Olympic No. 127, held what might be termed a social meeting. There was not a large attendance, but the new and unique arrangement made the meeting a very pleasant one. After the closing work of the month had been carefully finished, all were invited to sit down to a table that was already set and provided with eatables. Stowed away in one corner were two oil stoves, on which were two large urns of coffee, which, as was soon learned by the aroma and flavor, was made from Bro. Adams's compressed coffee, and generously furnished by him. After the coffee had been well sampled, Bro. Adams, M. W., acting as chairman, introduced Deputy Danforth, who, as usual, made some very interesting and instructive remarks. Short speeches were made by Bro. Cummings and Past Masters Fish, Rasbach, Dixon, Holland and Adams, and by the WATCHMAN representative; which, with Bro. Adams's compressed coffee and Bro. Dixon's cigars, closed a very enjoyable and successful Lodge meeting and social. It is understood that this system of sociality and good cheer will be kept up during this term, at least once or twice a month.

Fidelity, No. 136.

The spacious and elegant Lodge-room of Fidelity, No. 136, was the scene of a most enjoyable evening's entertainment on Wednesday, the 17th ult. The occasion was the celebration of its fourth anniversary. The hall was well filled with members of the Order, among them a large delegation from Ashler Lodge, No. 165, of Alameda. Bro. George H. Stewart, M. W., received them in a neat address of welcome. After transacting the necessary business the Lodge closed, Bro. E. M. Reading was called to the chair, and a literary and musical programme was ably presented as follows: Piano solo, Bro. Reynolds; vocal quartet, "I Long for Thee," Bros. Howland, Hill, Stanfield, and Moore; recitation, Bro. Magee; trio, for violin, flute and piano, Bros. Troutt, Hobbs, and Reynolds; song, "Fidelity, 136" (original) Bro. Sam. Booth, P. M. W. of Excelsior; recitation, "Cataline's Defiance," Bro. Curtis; vocal duet, "Larboard Watch," Bros. Mitchell and Ransome; recitation, Bro. Scott Wilson; song, "A Warrior Bold," Bro. Stuart; duet, Bros. Troutt and Reynolds; recitation, "The Watermill," P. G. M. W. Barnes. Many of the selections received hearty encores, and the programme, which throughout was one of great excellence, was thoroughly enjoyed. After this, tables were spread in the hall, and all sat down to a sumptuous banquet, where toasts were offered and responded to, stories told, and songs sung by a number, of whom our memory recalls Harry Wheaton, the humorist of Ashler Lodge, Bros. Magee, Sullivan, Reid, and others. Among the guests were T. F. Dawe, of Santa Barbara, and James Leonard, of Merced. All voted Fidelity's entertainment a grand success.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

California, No. 1.

The attendance at this Lodge is increasing considerably of late, as the evenings grow longer. A recent visit showed them to be keeping up the interest well. A noteworthy incident was the unanimous voting of $60 to a brother for funeral expenses of his deceased wife. We were informed that this is the general practice of No. 1. It is a good example for other Lodges to follow. On the evening of the 23d, the old pioneer received a pleasant visit from Past Grand Master Jordan and Brother E. M. Reading, Secretary of the Guarantee Fund. Speeches and sociability constituted the features of interest on this occasion.

Oakland, No. 2.

In a visit on Friday evening, the 19th ult., we found Oakland, No. 2, toeing the mark as usual. Affairs were in their normal state, which, with this Lodge, does not mean a state of apathy, but the steady strides of growth and prosperity. No. 2 has recently had printed some very artistic cards, doubled in book form, and containing the interesting statistics concerning the Lodge that every member ought to know. They are said to be excellent for missionary purposes. The project of the Oakland celebration of the sixth Grand Lodge anniversary started with this Lodge, and is being pushed vigorously.

Occidental, No. 3.

On Friday evening, Oct. 24th, as previously announced, Occidental gave a most pleasing and successful entertainment and ball at Hansen's Hall, West Oakland. The hall was well filled with an intelligent and appreciative audience. Almost every number on the programme was encored, some doubly and trebly. The following was the programme: Piano duet, Mrs. W. G. Hawkett and Miss Helen Webb; recitation, "Kentucky Belle," Miss Carro True; vocal duet, Misses Annie and Alice Walters, from Vallejo; comic delineation, "Chinese Melody," Mr. J. S. Swan, of S. F.; song, "The King and the Miller," Mr. Geo. H. Carleton; select reading, "Tam's Prize," Mr. Henry Aveling, professor of elocution; zither solo, Mr. Hugo Klemm; song, Mr. A. A. Burton, of Valley Lodge, S. F.; comic recitation, "A cure for Stammering," Mr. Howard McGill. Among the selections calling for especial comment were the "lightning change" character sketches by Miss Carro True, in response to her recalls; the artistic Chinese imitations of "Swan the Painter;" the magnificent bass voice of Mr. Carleton, and the imitation by Howard McGill of John T. Raymond in his celebrated character of "Col. Sellers," in the play of "The Gilded Age." After the programme was finished, the floor was cleared, and several hours dancing closed a most enjoyable evening. The whole affair reflected great credit on Occidental Lodge, and especially upon its stirring officer, District Deputy Schutz, who was the prime mover and executor of this successful entertainment.

Vesper, No. 62.

This Lodge, in the pleasant town of Livermore, celebrated its fifth anniversary on the evening of Oct. 19th. Most of the entertainment was furnished by the members of a local talent was not passed by. Among the male quartet from Oakland, although the latter was an interesting address by Bro. Israel Horton, Deputy Grand Master for that district. A large audience was in attendance, and all were highly pleased.

Keystone, No. 64.

At a fully attended meeting of the Keystone Lodge in Oakland last week, there was considerable discussion on the question of the social features of the fraternity. A committee of three was appointed to devise a plan by which, at regular periods, some sort of entertainment could be arranged. It is not intended to have formal programmes on such occasions, but to set aside a time when the members will exert themselves especially to entertain each other. In some such way it is expected to make the Lodge meetings more attractive than when business only is transacted.

Eden, No. 204.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On Saturday evening, the 13th inst., Eden Lodge celebrated its second anniversary. Brothers from our neighboring Lodges, Nos. 12 and 18, responded to an invitation in good round numbers. Also, brothers from Oakland and Alameda, with District Deputy Charles E. Alden at their head, did us the honor in meeting with us that night. Although we had no fixed programme for the occasion made up, nevertheless the entertainment went far beyond our expectations, the success of which is mostly due to our visiting brethren. At the close, a bountiful supper was partaken of, and seemingly relished by every one present; and to meet soon again was the unanimous desire expressed. Yours in C., H. and P.,

HENRY DOPMAN, Recorder.

Bay District, No. 226.

This new Lodge was recently instituted by District Deputy Graber, at Emery Station, on the road between West Oakland and Berkeley. Their postoffice, we understand, is the newly established one of Lorin. The Lodge starts in with about twenty chartered members, F. E. Corder being M. W., and F. H. Pendleton Recorder. We have not yet received the names of the other officers, or the night of meeting, both of which we hope to get by next issue. The membership is partly recruited from Hearts of Oak Lodge, at West Berkeley.

AMADOR COUNTY.

Jackson, No. 138.

In the Amador Sentinel we find the following: "Oct. 13 completed the fourth year of the existence of Jackson Lodge, No. 138, A. O. U. W. There has been no death among members who have maintained their good standing. What Lodge can show a better record? The present membership is 62. The cost of organizing a Degree of Honor Lodge is $40. What town in the county will be the first in the field? There are good working Lodges of Rebekahs and Eastern Stars in the county. Why should the Workman be behind those?"

LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Pasadena, No. 151.

EDITORS WATCHMAN: Pasadena No. 151, at this place, has been having quite a boom. We have taken in eight M. W. Degree members to-night, and had a small ratification. Bro. J. S. Mills, M. W., assisted by Bro. A. Cobler, D. D. G. M. W., "fixed them." Our Lodge, though few in numbers (34), has the spirit, and we try as a general thing to keep posted in the work of the Order. We hope not only for more good members here, but also to be able to send subscribers to the WATCHMAN.

In C., H. and P.,

L. C. WINSTON, Recorder.

Pasadena, Cal., Oct. 11, 1883.

MARIN COUNTY.

Sausalito, No. 20.

Deputy Grand Recorder Watson visited this Lodge Thursday evening, Oct. 18th, and conferred the M. W. Degree on one member. The attendance present, he reports, would do honor to our city Lodges. The Lodge is flourishing, the members are fraternally inclined, and consequently the meetings are happy.

NAPA COUNTY.

Fortuna, No. 13.

The Past Masters of this flourishing Lodge in Napa City have been planning to form an association or society for mutual improvement and enjoyment. Their first meeting was to have taken place on the 27th ult., assuming the form of a banquet to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of Workmanship, as noted elsewhere. P. M. W. George Walden is the principal mover in the project. We await with interest a report for our next issue.

Fidelia Lodge, No. 14, D. of H., is announced to give a dancing social at Odd Fellows' Hall, Los Angeles, October 30th. We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of an invitation, and will be happy to run in and spend an hour on the evening in question, if time, after office hours, will permit.

A. O. U. W. Chitchat.

One assessment for November, and probably two for December, making seventeen for the year.

A petition for a new Lodge, signed by fifteen applicants, has been received from Hueneme, Ventura County.

We acknowledge a very pleasant call from H. S. Spalding, formerly of this office, and now publisher of the Daily Tidings, of Grass Valley.

A number of officers have been changed in various Lodges since the last election, as may be noticed by reference to our corrected and revised Directory.

An interesting article by Bro. G. F. Perkins, organist of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, on "The Human Voice" is necessarily delayed until our next number.

Mr. C. Larsen is now building, and will have completed by the 15th of November, three halls for Lodge purposes, size, 23x43. The new brick building is situated at No. 18 Eddy street, next to the Tivoli.

District Deputy Thompson, of Placer County, writes: "No especial news in the district other than that Sugar Loaf and Main Top each expect new candidates soon. Manzanita Lodge is flourishing finely; also, Lucretia Lodge, No. 22, D. of H."

The first members of the A. O. U. W. were J. J. Upchurch (the founder of the Order), A. Oster, P. Linen, T. F. Upchurch, C. W. Newberry, W. S. White, J. R. Hulse, M. H. McNair, Henry Deross, J. R. Umberger, S. Roseter, P. Lansen, A. P. Ogden and J. Tracy.

The cozy rooms of the General Relief Committee, which are kept open one hour on each day of the week, Sundays excepted, are always filled with a goodly company. In their efficient efforts to help unfortunate Workmen, the Committee should receive a hearty and cordial support.

Bro. J. A. Greenwood, of Amador City, recently called on us while in town on business. He says our A. O. U. W. Lodge directory has saved him a great deal of trouble and gained him many friends while traveling through the country. If he were called upon to estimate its value in money, a double-eagle would not adequately represent it.

"The WATCHMAN, regarded as the most interesting Order paper on the Coast, and one of the ablest in the Union, says that the Lodge of Workmen of Healdsburg is looked upon as the lecture bureau of the community. Correct; and the people should sustain the effort."—Russian River Flag.

Valley Lodge, No. 30, will give a reception to its members and their families, at Dashaway Hall, on Wednesday evening, October 31st. The exercises will be recitative and musical, with a recess for social conversation and acquaintance, concluding with a short programme of dances. The membership of this Lodge renders it necessary to take a large hall, in order to accommodate the brethren and their families.

OUR late brother, M. C. Rawlins, who recently died at Stockton under peculiarly melancholy circumstances, was at the time of his death Recorder of Linden Lodge, No. 167. On the night previous to his death he visited Stockton Lodge, No. 23, and to all appearances was in the enjoyment of good health. On retiring that evening he wrote a letter to his wife, closing with the endearing words, "Yours until death." Within 24 hours from the time he was a guest of his brethren in Stockton he lay in the cold embrace of death.

Commenting upon the item in our last issue, that a Canadian Lodge has resolved that "it is imprudent to hold any picnic or other public gathering under the auspices of the A. O. U. W. which will necessitate travel by boat or rail," Past Grand Master Barnes says: "It is not certain but what the Canadians have adopted a very sensible law. They had the recent terrible steamboat accident in that Dominion before them, when a large number of a picnic party lost their lives. It so occurred that not a member of the A. O. U. W. was on said boat, but had it been a Workmen's picnic the great loss of life would have bankrupted the Jurisdiction. Where picnics go by regular lines of steamers, ferry-boats and railways, there is but little danger. It is only when extra trains, extra steamers, etc., are used that there is any risk, except what is always attendant, more or less, on large crowds. In the East, it is a common occurrence to have picnic days on the water, taking a steamer and sailing all day, and a risk like this should never be permitted by the A. O. U. W., or even when a sail or a railway journey of any distance is proposed. In California our picnic grounds are of easy access, and generally can be reached by the regular lines of ferries and cars, but even with this Jurisdiction and locality, it would be well to avoid any place or locality where the means of transportation are at all inadequate."

Other Jurisdictions.

In St. Louis there are 33 A. O. U. W. Lodges, with a total membership of 2,780.

There are 24 A. O. U. W. Lodges in Philadelphia, with a membership of nearly 4,000.

There are considerably over 5,000 members in our Order in Ontario now, though that number does not appear in the Grand Recorder's report for last month. There are a number who fail to pay their assessments on the 28th who are not counted, as they are not in good standing.—Canadian Workman.

The Supreme Lodge Beneficiary Jurisdiction has had 100 deaths and 20 assessments for the eight months ending October 31st. We are under the impression that a small relief assessment will be required for this Jurisdiction at the end of the present fiscal year, if this state of things continues.—Michigan Herald.

"No assessments" may be a very good thing for the members, but experience has proven that it is terribly demoralizing to the Order in this Jurisdiction. Machinery runs a great deal smoother when in constant use. One assessment each month is preferable to none one month and two the next. But these matters, of course, are beyond our control, and hence the ubiquitous grumbler has a wider latitude.—Baltimore Protector.

Grand Master Workman Kingsley, of Nevada Grand Lodge, has made the following appointments for Idaho Territory: Deputy Grand Master Workman for Idaho Territory, T. E. Picotte, of Hailey Lodge, No. 1; Grand Medical Examiner for Idaho Territory, Dr. Newell J. Brown, of Hailey Lodge, No. 1; Committee on Amendments to Constitution of Grand and Subordinate Lodges, T. E. Clohecy, of Ketchum Lodge, No. 2; District Deputy Grand Master Workman for Alturas County, George A. Black, of Bullion Lodge, No. 2.

California Relief Assessment for November.

Whole number of deaths, 458. Whole number of assessments, 84.

Balance of assessment No. 14: Bro. C. J. P. Wolf, of Friendship Lodge, No. 179, San Francisco; died Sept. 8, 1883, of apoplexy, aged 49 years. Joined the Order January 25, 1882.

Bro. Alex. Weed, Fidelity, 136, S. F.; died Sept. 13th, from nervous prostration resulting from accident, aged 48. Joined Dec. 22, '80.

Bro. H. A. Morton, Fidelity, 136, S. F.; died Sept. 20th, from cirrhosis of the liver, aged 33. Joined Oct. 13, '79.

Bro. Adolph Hartmann, Valley, 30, S. F.; died Sept. 22d, of suicide, aged 40. Joined May 4, '81.

Bro. Samuel C. Johnson, Hanford, 189; died Sept. 22d, from a gunshot wound, aged 41. Joined Apr. 10, '82.

Assessment No. 15: Bro. Wm. C. Harvey, Amador, 133; died Sept. 24th, of heart disease, aged 46. Joined Nov. 4, '79.

Bro. Jacob Kaplan, Memorial, 174, S. F.; died Sept. 25th, of congestion of brain, aged 44. Joined Oct. 11, '80.

Bro. John S. Lauderdale, Mt. Hamilton, 43, San Jose; died Sept. 28th, from kick by a horse, aged 26. Joined Jan. 21, '80.

Bro. Gustave Wiss, Washington, 60, S. F.; died Sept. 29th, of inflammation of bowels, aged 48. Joined Jan. 25, '83.

Bro. Claude L. Smith, Olympic, 127, S. F.; died Oct. 2d, of pneumonia, aged 33. Joined Jan. 20, '80.

Bro. Thos. F. Whiteside, San Benito, 96, Hollister; died Oct., of suicide, aged 47. Joined Feb. 3, '80.

Bro. M. C. Rawlins, Linden, 167, died Oct. 8th of apoplexy, aged 50. Joined Aug. 28, '80.

Bless his Heart.

In a very elegant palace car entered a weary-faced, poorly dressed woman, with three little children, one a babe in her arms. A look of joy crept into her face as she settled down into one of the luxurious chairs, but it was quickly dispelled as she was asked rudely to "start her boots."

A smile of amusement was seen on several faces as the frightened group hurried out to enter one of the common cars. Upon one young face, however, there was a look which shamed the countenances of the others.

"Auntie," said the boy to the lady behind him, "I am going to carry my basket of fruit and this box of sandwiches to the poor woman in the next car. You are willing of course?"

He spoke eagerly, but she answered: "Don't be foolish, dear; you may need them yourself, and perhaps the woman is an impostor."

"No, I'll not need them," he answered decidedly; but in a very low tone, "you know I had a hearty breakfast, and don't need a lunch.
The woman looked hungry, auntie, and so tired, too, with those three little babies clinging to her. I'll be back in a minute, auntie; I know mother wouldn't like it if I didn't speak a kind word to the least of these when I meet them."

The worldly aunt brushed a tear from her eye after the boy left her, and said, audibly,
"Just like his mother."

About five minutes later, as the lady passed the mother and the three children, she saw a pretty sight—the family feasting, as perhaps they had never done before. The dainty sandwiches were eagerly eaten, and the fruit basket stood open.

The eldest child, with her mouth filled with bread and butter, said, "Was the pretty boy an angel, dear mamma?"

"No," answered the mother, and a grateful look brightened her faded eyes, "but he is doing angel's work, bless his dear heart!" And we, too, said, "Bless his dear heart!"

Nothing but a Baby Story.

She was a little bit of a girl, don't you know, and her mamma told her not to go anywhere near the water. So mamma went away down to the store to buy something for supper, and the baby went out into the yard to play in the hang-up. She called it a hang-up, but it was nothing but a hammock, for all that.

Pretty soon she found the front gate open.
"I don't believe," she said to herself, "that my mamma will mind a bit if I just only go and look at the water." So she went down the lane and through the the wood-path till she came to the river.

"If I stand way away off and throw stones I just know my mamma won't care," said the little girl, and she threw one just as far as she could over the bank into the water.

How the big round circles grew and grew?
and baby watched them and laughed softly to herself. Naughty little girl!

Then by and by she found a stone that was so big, so very, very big, that she had to go up to the bank and use both hands to throw it over. And what do you think? Why, she said,
"One to make ready, two to prepare, and three to go slambang right in there," and slambang she did go, I can tell you—stone and baby—splash into the water.

Now you see mamma was back from the store by this time, coming along that very road, and she caught up her baby just in time. With both arms around her wet little girl mamma ran straight home, and in about two minutes the doctor was there, only to say that all that naughty baby needed was some dry clothes and a good round spanking.

Mamma put on the clothes right away in a minute, but I don't believe the baby has had that good round spanking yet, the rascal!—

Maurice's Sled.

Maurice Kittredge is a little boy eight years old. He lives in the Sandwich Islands, where it is warm, and where the grass grows all the year round. Maurice has never seen any real snow, or a real sled, but he has seen pictures, and he thought he could make a sled. So one day he went into the shed by himself, and was busy a long time with a hammer, some nails, and some old boards. At last his mother, who was sitting on the veranda with her sewing, heard a rough noise on the floor. Then she saw Maurice coming along, dragging something behind him.

"What would you call this, mamma?" said he.
His mamma looked at it a good while, and then said she thought it might be a sled.

"Yes," said Maurice, "it is." He was very much pleased that his mother had guessed right.

"But where are you going to coast?" asked his mother.

"I do not know," said Maurice, rather sadly,
"unless I take the front stairs." His mother thought that two or three round trips would spoil the stair carpet. But she said if he really wished it, he might try the front doorsteps.

It had been raining, and the steps were quite slippery. Maurice started bravely down. He sat firmly on the sled, he held on the rope, and then down he went, bump, bump, bump, to ground. There were seven steps in all. Just then his father went by, and stopped to watch him.

"Don't you find it rather hubbly, Maurice?" asked he, with a smile. But Maurice did not give up till he had gone down the steps a good many times. Once he fell off, but he was too brave to cry. When his father came in to dinner he asked Maurice what he thought of coasting.

"Pooh," said Maurice, "I do not think much of it. I have tried it now, and I don't see why our cousins in America think there is so much fun in it."—Our Little Ones.

How Animals Have Foretold Earthquakes.

An Italian writer on the dreadful catastrophe which occurred so recently on the Island of Ischia, mentions those prognostications of an earthquake which are derived from animals.
They were observed in every place where the shocks were such as to be generally perceptible.
Some minutes before they were felt the oxen and cows began to bellow, the sheep and goats bleated, and rushing in confusion one on the other, tried to break the wicker-work of the folds. The dogs howled, the geese and fowls were alarmed and made much noise; the horses which were fastened in the stalls were greatly agitated, leaped up and down and tried to break the halters with which they were attached to the mangers; those on the road stopped suddenly and snorted in a very strange way. The cats were very much frightened, and tried to conceal themselves, or their hair bristled up wildly. Rabbits and moles were seen to leave their holes; birds rose as if scared from the places on which they had alighted; and fish left the bottom of the sea and approached the shores, where at some places great numbers of them were taken. Even ants and reptiles abandoned, in clear daylight, their subterranean holes in great disorder, many hours before the shocks were felt. The dogs, a few minutes before the first shock took place, awoke their sleeping masters by barking and pulling them, as if they wished to warn them of the impending danger; and several persons were thus enabled to save themselves.

"Your crop seems to be considerably in the grass," said a passer-by to a negro who sat on a fence. "Yes, sah, General Green's don got it." "Did you over-plant yourself?" "No, sah, planted 'bout 'nuff." "Why didn't you plow it?" "Wife tuck sick. She does 'de plowin' fur dis place." "What do you do?"
"What does I do? I preaches, I does. Ef Providence comes along and makes de 'oman sick, I kaint he'p it."

What Paralysis Is.

Interesting and Profitable Medical Reading for Non-Medical People.

So common has the occurrence of paralysis become in recent years, that non-medical people have a desire to know more about it. Many think that paralysis is a disease of itself. That some medical men so regard this condition is plain from the fact that deaths are frequently certified to have been caused by it. The incorrectness of this notion will, however, be plain when the conditions which give rise to paralysis are clearly set forth, and this we now propose.

A carpenter, blacksmith, or some mechanic whose business requires him to wield a hammer, finds some morning that he is unable to raise his hammer arm, or perhaps while at work the man suddenly feels his arm become numb and weak, it falls to his side, and he is no longer able to work. The doctor to whom the man applies says a "brachial monoplegia from muscle tire," which means simply that the man has overwrought his hammer arm and it needs rest.
To these cases the very appropriate name of "artisans' palsy" is given. Again, a poor-blooded, nervously constructed person, most likely a woman, meets with a great shock or has to endure an unusual and prolonged mental or physical effort. Soon, and perhaps without warning, the individual loses the use of some part of the body, often of the vocal apparatus, and the patient is unable to speak above a whisper. The doctor says "hysterical paralysis," or "hysterical aphonia," loss of voice. Now just how this comes about we fancy it would puzzle the most learned doctor to say. Concerning this condition, however, as well as the one before mentioned, this much is known, viz., that by appropriate treatment they recover perfectly and promptly, very good evidence that no part of the nervous apparatus is broken. The faith cures reported from time to time are probably cases of the kind last mentioned.

It sometimes happens that an intoxicated person will fall asleep with the head resting upon the arm or with the arm hanging over a chair back. When the person wakes the arm is numb; it tingles and is paralyzed—another
"brachial monoplegia"—but really pressure upon the trunks of the nerves which supply the disabled member has affected those nerves so that they are unable to perform their usual duty. The nerves which go out from the brain and spinal cord to the extremities are quite comparable to the wires which are stretched from place to place for electric communication, and pressure upon one section of those nerves produces results very like those which follow an interference with the wire. The case just given illustrates very well a large number of cases of palsy from pressure, for pressure upon the brain or spinal cord, or the nerves which have their exit therefrom, will produce a palsy whose extent will depend upon the extent of the pressure, and whose durability will depend upon the chances for removing the pressure.
Pressure upon the nerves which supply one side of the face produces a very characteristic paralysis, and one that causes many laughable mistakes on the part of tyros and non-professional people by their attempts to detect the affected side. Pressure upon the brain or spinal cord is mostly due to the presence of tumors, to fractures of the skull, or bones of which the backbone is formed, and to blood clots within the skull or spinal canal. Patients who recover from diphtheria, scarlet fever, and some other acute sickness, are frequently paralyzed in some part. These cases generally recover by appropriate treatment, and it is quite probable that many cases would recover spontaneously. The remarks before made concerning certain cases which recover will apply equally to the cases just named.

People who work in lead are liable to a peculiar form of paralysis, which is first seen, as a rule, in the muscles of the forearm, on account of which the patient is unable to extend the hand upon the arm. At times the whole muscular system is involved. Change of occupation and the use of remedies which will assist the elimination of the mineral from the system is the proper course for such patients. Analogous forms of paralysis are caused by arsenic and mercury, probably by their action upon the nerve structure of the spinal cord. Woo-rars, the Indian arrow-poison, will also produce paralysis if introduced into the system in sufficient quantities. The paralyzing effect of large doses of alcohol are well known.
Certain conditions of the circulatory apparatus predispose to extensive and often incurable paralysis. The arteries are elastic tubes. By age, hard work, care and the prolonged use of alcoholic drinks, these tubes lose their elasticity and become brittle. By some event which determines an unusual quantity of blood to the brain one of these now inelastic tubes is broken, the poured-out blood clots, as before mentioned,
and a paralysis immediately follows.

Owing to certain systematic conditions, fibrin,
a substance normally suspended in the blood, lodges upon the flood-gates—valves—of the heart. Presently a part of this matter is dislodged and washed away into the blood; perchance it reaches an artery in the brain which will not permit it to pass. This at once cuts off the blood supply from a part of the brain, one of the immediate symptoms of which is palsy of the part of the body which receives its nervous supply from that portion of the brain. These paralyzes are usually extensive, and are not readily distinguishable from those just mentioned.

The presence of worms in the bowels of children is believed to produce paralysis in some cases. Such cases, being due to a known removable cause, are described as reflex paralyzes.
These are not seen alone in children, but in adults as well. Finally, changes in the structure of the brain or spinal cord produce paralysis, varying in extent with the extent of nerve structure involved. Such paralyzes are especially obstinate in those of advanced years.
Change of structure in the spinal cord usually produces disability in the legs. Now, these are the most common causes of paralysis, and from what has been said, it will be observed that paralysis is not a disease of itself. Neither is it always incurable.

Household Hints.

FRENCH CREAM CANDY.—Making molasses candy is a time-honored household amusement, but pleasant as it is too much of it palls upon the children, and they find it an agreeable variation to make French cream-candy, which is composed of sugar and water mixed in the proportion of four cups of the former to one of the latter. Boil eight minutes in a bright tin pan, without stirring, and as much longer as is necessary to cook it hard enough to roll into a ball. Then take from the fire, and beat with a spoon, adding vanilla or peach flavoring as it begins to cool. Chopped raisins, currants, bits of fig or citron or nut meats may be mixed with the cream.

TAPIOCA CREAM.—Soak a tencupful of tapioca over night in milk. The next day stir into it the yolks of three eggs well beaten and a cupful of sugar. Place a quart of milk on the fire; let it come to the boiling point, and then stir in the tapioca, and let the whole cook until it has thickened; then take it off the fire and stir in the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth. Flavor to taste. A small part of the beaten whites of the eggs can be saved to decorate the top. Stir into the latter a little sugar, put it into a paper funnel, press it out over the top of the pudding according to fancy, and place it in the oven a few minutes to color.

STEWED LOBSTER.—Take a small-sized lobster and cut it up into very small bits, but do not chop it. Season it with pepper and salt, and a very little cayenne pepper. Mix into it half a teacup of sweet butter, and put it into a stew pan, with two wine glasses of white wine, or if preferred one glass of cider vinegar. Cover the pan tightly and stew it fifteen minutes and serve very hot. Or when the lobster has been seasoned it can be put back into the body shell, and covered over the top with sifted bread crumbs, and browned in the oven by putting the shell into a tin plate. Serve it in the shell.

PICKLED GRAPES.—Take ripe grapes, remove imperfect and broken ones. Line an earthen jar with grape leaves, then fill with grapes. To two quarts of vinegar allow one pint of white sugar, half an ounce of ground cinnamon and a quarter of an ounce of cloves. Let the vinegar and spices boil for five minutes; then add the sugar.
Let it come to a boil and when cold pour over the grapes. If poured on while hot it shrivels them, even if it does not break the skin and spoil the appearance of the pickles.

JUMBLES.—Rub a quarter of a pound of butter into half a pound of flour, add the same quantity of moist sugar, half an ounce of ginger, and the grated rind and juice of a lemon.
Mix with treacle to a paste, thin enough to spread on tins. Bake in a moderate oven, and when done enough, cut into strips whilst still on the tin, and then roll each piece round the fingers. The "jumbles" should always be kept in a tin, or they will quickly lose their crispness.

MUFFINS AND EGGS.—A little less than a quart of sweet milk or water thickened with a little more than a quart of graham poured into a hot muffin pan, baked in hot oven, make what we consider good gems. Am partial to food that may be well prepared without soda, as I fear it will cause the teeth to decay. Do you all know that eggs are nice baked in a buttered tin or spider? Of course you know how nice pop-overs are. Thanks for all favors received.

DELICIOUS CREAM CAKES.—Made without butter or lard. I take one heaping teaspoonful of the Horsford Baking Powder Phosphate, and sift it into one pint of flour and make a soft dough with some of the thin creamy sour milk out of the bottom of the cream jar. Roll very thin, have a hot fire ready and they will bake in five minutes. Will be sweet, crisp, dainty and delicious, and any dyspeptic can eat his fill with no bad feeling afterward.

APPLE SNOW.—Boil six apples, press them through a sieve, adding loaf sugar and a little lemon juice. Whisk the whites of six eggs, powdering them during the time with two tablespoonfuls of castor sugar. Beat the apple to a froth, then add the whites of the eggs and whisk them well together until quite stiff and like snow. Pile them high in rough spoonfuls on a glass dish, rising to a point in the center.

Miss Frances E. Willard.

The recent elections in Ohio, in which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union played such an important part, lead us to give our readers a portrait and biographical sketch of Miss Frances E. Willard, the President of the organization. Miss Willard, as will be remembered, paid this coast a successful visit some month's since, and is now at home in Evanston, near Chicago, having just finished a temperance campaign of three months in Arizona, California, Oregon and Washington Territory, taking in Denver, Colorado, on her way home. She has organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union in thirty-five states and territories.

In literary attainments and elegant culture Miss Willard has few superiors, and as a leader in the great temperance work, and as President of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is undoubtedly the foremost woman in America.

She was born near Rochester, New York. When three years old her parents moved to Oberlin, Ohio, where they spent five years in study, though they both had spent several years as teachers. From Oberlin they moved to Wisconsin, and settled on a farm near Janesville. That rural home was a little republic of letters. The children lived in an atmosphere of literary pursuits. There they found "sermons in stones, books in running brooks," in the beautiful Rock River, and the wide expanse of prairie, dotted and fringed by groves of timber. Here, for ten years, the power of conscious thought grew under the judicious tutelage of her mother.

In 1859 the family removed to Evanston, near Chicago, in order to give the children better advantages of formal education. Miss Frances and her sister Mary were placed in the Northwestern Female College, since absorbed into the Northwestern University. Within two years Frances graduated. Her valedictory poem, on the "Human Heart," surprised every one. She touched that mysterious harp with weird fingers, far beyond her years. Every one predicted for her a brilliant literary career. Soon after, her beautiful and gifted sister Mary was called to the "Sun-bright Clime," and Frances enshrined her memory in a little memorial volume, "Nineteen Beautiful Years." Dr. R. S. Foster, President of the Northwestern University (now Bishop Foster), said in his introduction to this loving tribute to a beautiful soul:

"Daily as I sat in my study I saw them pass and repass with books in hand—books of metaphysics, literature and science—both delicate of build, the younger tall and slight. The pallor of much thought and earnest effort had fixed its unmistakable impress upon them. Even in youth, the inward fire of love of learning was consuming them. Thus I saw them for the years, toiling lovingly together up the rugged steps to the summit where Knowledge holds his seat. Sabbath morning found them regularly in the lecture-hall, most attentive, most thoughtful among the listeners. Above their years they were appreciative. When the discussions were profound, their faces glowed with sympathetic inspirations of genius. When the utterances were tender and beautiful, their hearts trembled with emotion and their eyes glistened with tears."

After this sad event Miss Willard took up the work of life with new earnestness, but for a long time seemed restless and discontented. She became one of the faculty of the Female College at Pittsburg, Penn.; then preceptress of Genesee College, at Lima, New York; then Professor of Natural Science, at Evanston. In 1868 she went abroad and spent two and a half years in study at Paris, Berlin, and Rome, enjoying the tutelage of such men as Guizot, Laboulaye, Legouva and Chevalier. Returning from Europe, she became Dean of the Woman's College, at Evanston. In 1876 she yielded to Mr. Moody's earnest entreaties to aid in his revival meetings in Chicago, Boston, and elsewhere. In 1878 she became editor-in-chief of the Chicago Evening Post, and there remained until financial troubles sent the editorial chair and desk to the auction room.

Leaving the field of labor, she was about to retire to private pursuits, when Mr. A. E. Bishop, a wealthy Methodist brother, of Chicago, said to her:

"You have the power of speaking in public, and it ought to be developed. If you will, within three weeks, prepare a lecture, on any subject you choose, I will present you with as fine an audience as can be got together in Chicago."

Miss Willard says: "The proposition quite took my breath away, but I went at once and laid it before my mother. She replied, 'By all means, my child, accept—enter every open door;' and so I sat me down and wrote a lecture on 'The New Chivalry,' the substance of which was that the chivalry of the nineteenth century is not that of knights and troubadours, but the plain, practical chivalry of justice, which gives to woman a fair chance to be all God gave her power to be. In it I stated that my brother had just entered a theological course—just what his sister would have done if the world had not said 'No.'"

She had found her sphere. It was not long before she received a "call." Just as she was contemplating accepting the position of chief lady teacher in the Von Norman Institute in New York, the "latch-string of the temperance gate" to use her own words, dropped into her hand. The cause looked like a "root in a dry ground," but she believed it was destined to become a banyan tree and cover the whole land. She said later: "I was reared on a Western prairie, and often have helped to kindle the great fires for which the West used to be famous. A match and a wisp of dry grass were all we needed, and behold the magnificent spectacle of a prairie on fire, sweeping across the landscape swift as a thousand untrained steeds, and no more to be captured than a hurricane! Just so it is with the Crusade. * * * When God lets loose an idea upon this planet we vainly set limits to its progress; and I believe that Gospel temperance shall yet transform that inmost circle, the human heart, and in its widening sweep the circle of home, and then society, and then, pushing its argument to the extreme conclusion, it shall permeate the widest circle of them all; that is, the Government."

Miss Willard is small in stature, very quiet and unobtrusive in manner, a pleasant conversationalist, a devout Methodist. As a public speaker she is forcible without vehemence, logical without dullness; possesses the happy gift of piercing with feathered arrows; is doing a noble work, and has the best wishes of all temperance people.

The Jordan Canal.

Doubts have been thrown on the practicality of the scheme for connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea by way of the Jordan valley and Dead Sea. It is alleged that the engineering difficulties are greater than had been foreseen. The whole distance between the Dead Sea and the Red Sea is 108 miles, and though at either extremity there is for the first few miles an easy, gently rising sandflat, yet this soon gives place to rugged ascent. Beginning from the Gulf of Akabah, in the first thirty-five miles alluvial deposits and sand are passed over, but the ground gradually rises 600 feet above the level of the Red Sea. Even in the first fifteen miles the rise is 240 feet. The lowest point of the watershed is 780 feet above the level of the Red Sea, solid limestone and several bold porphyritic dykes intruding from Mount Hor eastward. To say nothing of the cutting from the Gulf of Akabah for thirty-five miles, where a slope has to be cut through which rises to 600 feet above the sea, there remains a mountain range of twenty-four miles to cross, varying from 170 feet to 780 feet in height, and after this a slope of six miles more till the sea-level is reached.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, PRESIDENT OF THE W. C. T. U.

The writer leaves it to engineers to say how far the eight millions asked for will go towards this work. It is only just to the promoters of the canal, the Jordan Valley Canal Company, to mention that the whole of the facts about the heights of the different points in the Wady el Arabah referred to were known long ago to the promoters of the undertaking, and their estimates of the expense of the cutting have been framed to meet all the difficulties cited. Lieut. Vignes made his survey in 1864. Since then many things have happened. The present Suez Canal and Mount Zenis and St. Gothard tunnels were then thought to be impossible. Now they are not only made, but a tunnel under the English Channel has been projected, and M. de Lesseps is himself cutting a canal through the Isthmus of Panama, which, in consequence of the great depth of the cutting, and the mercurial condition of the river Chagres, renders it a far more difficult undertaking than the canal through the Jordan valley.

The Jumbo of Crickets.

Throughout the whole territory of Utah the cricket is one of the common objects of the country; but there are crickets and crickets, and it is just as well when in search of the best article to "see you get it." For a consideration, therefore, I will put the speculator on the track of some of the grossest locusts that ever devoured green stuff—locusts, moreover, that squeak when pursued. Poets (American poets especially) are very partial to what they are pleased to call the cricket's merry chirp. But the poet's cricket is the insect of the domestic hearth, a pale-colored ghost of a thing, all voice, and with an irregular midnight appetite for the kitchen cloths that are hung out to dry before the stove. The Piute's cricket is very much otherwise. It is the Jumbo of crickets and just as black. It lives on the slopes of the Utah hills, among the sagebrush, and when alarmed tries invariably to jump down hill. But, being all stomach, and therefore top-heavy, so to speak, the ill-balanced insect invariably rolls head over heels, and every time it turns a somersault it squeaks dismally. To walk down the hillside driving a whole herd of these corpulent crickets before me used to amuse me immoderately, for the spectacle of so many fat things simultaneously trying to jump down hill, simultaneously rolled head over heels and simultaneously squeaking was mirthful enough to drive the dullest care away—Harper's Magazine.

HOW TO TEST KEROSENE OIL.—It is a simple matter to test kerosene oil. The point of danger is called the flashing point, which is the degree of temperature at which it is evaporized and explodes. The lowest safe point is 100 degrees; 120 degrees is low enough for domestic use. To make the test, pour a small quantity of kerosene in a small saucer or tin vessel, and float it in a basin of water heated to 100 degrees. Apply a lighted match an inch or so above the oil, and if it takes fire it is dangerous. Have a thermometer in the water, and note the temperature as it falls, and the lowest point of flashing is easily ascertained; or the water may be gradually heated by adding boiling water from eighty degrees up, and the flashing point found.

MODEL VETERINARY SCHOOL.—The Berlin Veterinary School was attended last winter by 247 matriculated students, the largest attendance during the century of its existence. The main building, with its three lecture halls, its large, well stocked library, and numerous lodgings for officials, etc., contains also an extensive anatomical department, with very valuable collections. The pathologic-physiological institute connected with the establishment is situated in one of the new wings. The dog hospital, the horse hospital, the operating-rooms, riding school, smithy, etc., are considered the best of their kind. In the cow stables are to be found the favorite races of all countries, partly for purposes of instruction, partly for the use of the dairy. The horse hospital can accommodate 100 sick horses. In it there were treated in 1882 no fewer than 2,241 animals; 600 were examined and dismissed; 7,085 sent to the polyclinic. In the stationary dog hospital 1,200 patients were treated; in the polyclinic, 3,216.

It is stated that the Mexican Government has negotiated a loan of $10,000,000 with Americans and Germans, the bonds to be taken at eighty-four cents on the dollar, bearing nine per cent interest.

Boys Here and Elsewhere.

The boys seem to be the coming problem everywhere. It does not seem to matter much whether they are good boys or bad boys, so far as the general trouble is concerned, for in countries where the boys are good the question is, "What can our boys do?" and in countries where boys are bad the question is "What can we do with our boys?" According to the latest statement from abroad it appears that in England, where there are good boys, if boys are good anywhere, there is nothing for them to do by which they can earn a decent livelihood. In California, where boys are generally reputed to be indescribably bad, there is plenty to do, but the boys won't do it. And thus the boy becomes a problem nearly everywhere. In fact girls are rather becoming fashionable as offspring, and the father whose family is petticoated throughout is to be congratulated.

There is a peculiar state of affairs in England, according to the latest local authorities, and a condensation of the mass of conflicting views expressed is as follows:

Those taking part in this interesting discussion agree on only one point, namely, the difficulty of finding openings in professional or mercantile life, or even of securing employment for the sons of the middle class. The opinion most commonly expressed is that fathers of that class—merchants, lawyers and tradesmen—make the mistake of educating their sons to a higher level of pursuits than they ought, and neglect to provide for the contingency of mediocrity by apprenticing them to mechanical callings of a lower social grade. There are many, however, who maintain that the artisans are mainly at fault in over-educating their boys, and in this way rendering them discontented with their own rank in society. It is urged that there would be room enough for the boys of the middle class, if the sons of working people were not encouraged to rise above their station and push their way into clerkships and professional vacancies. The fact, moreover, that skilled laborers are constantly emigrating in large numbers is adduced as a convincing proof that the mechanical trades are already overcrowded, and that the sons of the middle class will not gain any material advantage by a retrograde movement.

By analyzing these statements it would appear that the trouble in England is too many boys. If the factories lacked hands, if tradesmen were short of clerks, if farmers had no workmen, if machine shops were silent because the metal-mongers were few—then it would do to say, perhaps, that the boys were being over-educated, or rather falsely educated, because rightly applied processes of education do not war with industry. But there is no lack of help in the trades and manufactures, and no opening for profitable employment of the boys, for we read again as follows:

The man who suggests the occupation of lace draughtsman as a suitable one for middle-class boys is immediately reminded from Nottingham that "every gentleman" in that town is making his son a draughtsman, and that the trade is "flooded out," so that experienced operators, after a seven years' apprenticeship can only earn from eighteen to twenty shillings a week. The proposal that a "gentleman's regiment" shall be recruited from the class that cannot find clerkships or professional employment is at once amended so as to restrict its membership to university graduates who are unable to earn a living. An outcry for more dentists and veterinary surgeons is met with a counterclaim that there are so many of them already that they are emigrating to Australia.

Thus it seems that England is nearly as badly off with her good boys as we are with our bad ones—they are both eating their heads off and doing nothing. If there could be arranged a sort of an international boy exchange, it would be a grand thing for us. If we had a few thousands of those good English boys who are calling for work and can't get it, just think how happy would be a father's lot in this state, for such a well disposed force of workers would make every family independent of the hired-help puzzle, and our fruit-growers could order their boys by the score, install them in their parlors, and marry their daughters to them with perfect safety, for they are good boys, well educated and crying for work.

In return for this boon England would receive our boys who will not work, will not behave themselves, will not do anything but raise Cain generally. Verily, the sound of the walloping in English homes would be loud, nor would the rod be spared until the boys were beaten into some condition of decency and obedience. This would be a great humanitarian enterprise: the English youth would get what they seem most to yearn for, and that is a chance to work, and the California youth would get what they most need—a good, generous and persevering walloping.

PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Issued on the 1st and 15th of each month,
AT NO. 232 MARKET STREET, (TELEPHONE 12 FRONT STREET)

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSE- MENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

The above was adopted by the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., April 5, 1883.

Favorable to Advertisers.

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

OUR readers will notice some slight changes in the make-up of the present number of the WATCHMAN. By putting the directory further back in the paper, we are enabled to give more space to home departments and illustrations in the first half. This will also bring the directory on to the second printed form of the paper, which will always allow us to make corrections up to date in case of re-elections of officers, etc. As a rule, the first page will hereafter be unillustrated, except by some cuts or insignia especially appropriate to the Order, as is the case with the present issue. It has also been deemed best to change the publication days from stated days of the month to stated days of the week, and our subscribers may hereafter look for their papers on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month.

OUR old neighbor, the Pacific Overseer, comes to us with its name changed and its influence extended by including in its columns news of other Orders. It is now called The Lodge Visitor, and the Order most prominently represented by it, in addition to the A. O. U. W., is that of the Knights of Pythias.

WE acknowledge with thanks the receipt of an artistically gotten up volume of the Grand Lodge proceedings of Oregon and Washington for 1883.

THE complete proceedings of the Supreme Lodge since its organization in 1873, in two volumes, at $1.50 each, can be had by forwarding the amount to the Grand Recorder of any jurisdiction, or the Supreme Recorder. Every Lodge should have a copy.

Anniversaries Here and Elsewhere.

Fifteen years ago, on the 27th of October, Father Upchurch and his little band of co-workers, whose names are mentioned elsewhere in this issue, instituted the first Lodge of our Order—Jefferson Lodge, No. 1, at Meadville, Pennsylvania. Arrangements have been made in a number of the States east of the Rockies and especially in Pennsylvania to celebrate this fifteenth anniversary in a manner becoming its importance. In Alleghany City, the Coliseum, seating over 3,000 persons, has been secured for a reunion. The only movement that we have heard of in this State to celebrate it is by an organization of Past Masters in Napa, further mention of which may be found under Lodge Locals. We hope to be able to present particulars of all of these meetings to our readers in the next issue.

Coming down from the subject of general anniversaries to special ones, we are informed that the plans are about matured for the celebration in this city and Oakland of the sixth anniversary of the institution of the Grand Lodge of California, on Tuesday, the 13th of November. The subject of our local anniversary has probably caused the general one to be largely passed by in this state, owing to their coming so near together.

In order that the demonstrations on both sides of the bay may in nowise conflict, it has been deemed best to have the observance of the anniversary in this city take the form of an evening banquet. This is under the supervision of Past Grand Master Workman Jordan, and will be held at the Baldwin Hotel on the evening of November 13th. All the pioneers of the Order in this state, the present Grand Officers, and other prominent Workmen to the number of about 200, it is anticipated will be present. It is expected that this banquet will take the form of a reunion of old comrades, and a most enjoyable as well as profitable evening of reminiscence and camaraderie be the lot of all in attendance. Bro. Jordan in his invitations says: "I sincerely hope that there may be no vacant seats, and that the enthusiasm and warmth of heart enkindled by our gathering may go forth to bless the cause of Workmanship throughout our entire Jurisdiction."

The Lodges of Alameda County, through their General Committee, of which Bro. T. H. Allen is Chairman, have decided (weather permitting) upon a street parade in the forenoon, after which they are to proceed with their families and friends to Shell Mound Park and participate in a picnic. The San Francisco Lodges are so invited to participate. Here musical and literary exercises are to be held, including addresses by the Grand Lodge officers. These concluded, dancing and games are to occupy the remainder of the day. In case of inclement weather, the programme may be so changed as to have the exercises at the Coliseum. In all events a grand good time is insured, and it is to be hoped that every Workman who possibly can will turn out.

Grand Medical Examiner.

According to the new law of the Supreme Lodge, it was enacted at the last session of the Grand Lodge that a committee should select a Medical Examiner, whose duty should be to examine and approve all reports made by the Medical Examiners of Subordinate Lodges before a beneficiary certificate could be issued. Pursuant to this law Dr. James Simpson, one of the Medical Examiners of Valley No. 30, was selected. Bro. Simpson has discharged the duties of his office over one-half of the year, and it is but a just tribute to a faithful officer to say that our Grand Medical Examiner has discharged the necessarily onerous and difficult duties of his office in a wise, painstaking and upright manner.

GRAND RECORDER PRATT has been on the sick list during the past fortnight, but is now recovered, we are glad to say.

Laying a Memorial-Stone.

Excelsior No. 126 having determined to build a hall of her own, it is now the intention to lay the corner-stone (or rather the memorial-stone), of the building some time about the middle of the month, with original and appropriate ceremonies. It is expected that nearly all the Grand Officers will be present and participate on the occasion.

There could be nothing more appropriate than the laying of the memorial-stone of a structure by Workmen for the uses of Workmen. No doubt long ere this such a custom would have been established, but for the fact that no formal ceremonial for such purpose had been adopted by the Order. That such a ceremonial is needed no one we presume will question. No doubt Excelsior, through its able committee, of which we believe Bro. Sam Booth is chairman, will give us something worthy to be adopted by the Supreme Lodge as the official ceremonial of the Order; and if so, we hope our representatives to the next session of the Supreme Lodge will be charged with the duty of using their influence for its adoption.

And now while on the subject of ceremonials we desire to say that nothing save the end we have in view is of so much importance to the Order as its ceremonials. Without them there could not exist any lasting fraternity, and without fraternity the end for which the A. O. U. W. was organized and exists would fail most miserably.

Besides an established ceremonial for the laying of corner-stones, we need one for the dedication of halls. One was gotten up by some of our New York brethren, that, as we remember it, was a good and creditable production.

We do most thoroughly believe the Supreme Lodge at its next session could do the Order no better service than by confining its labors almost exclusively to matters in connection with our ritualistic work in all its branches, to the end that in these regards the Workmen shall be ready to fill the needs of any appropriate occasion, and in a manner to reflect credit on the oldest society of its kind.

Official Visitations of the Grand Master.

We are in receipt of a letter from Grand Master Workman Rogers, in which he wishes to inform all interested of the list of official visitations which he is soon to make, and which we trust may be productive of great good to the Order. He further states that he will be in attendance in this city at the time of the laying of the corner-stone of Excelsior's new hall, and also at the anniversary celebrations to be held here and in Oakland. We append a copy of the letter sent to each Lodge on his list, and also a list of his appointments:

OFFICE OF GRAND MASTER WORKMAN, A. O. U. W., OF CALIFORNIA,
UKIAH CITY, MENDOCINO CO.,
CAL., OCTOBER 20, 1883.

To ———— Lodge, A. O. U. W., ————

California; fraternal greeting: I have the happiness to inform you that on the day of ———, 1883, I shall officially visit your Lodge in the course of my fraternal tour, which I contemplate making through the southern portion of the state. I most respectfully suggest that you make such arrangements as in your judgment will be most conducive to the best interests of the Order for that occasion. Of course I shall expect to meet the Lodge while in session, at which time, if we can conveniently arrange it, initiations will be in order. At the same time it will please me greatly, and I shall be prepared for that purpose, to meet the citizens generally in a public address upon the interests of the Order. You will therefore make such arrangements as in your wisdom may best advance the welfare of the Order, both in your own vicinity and at large. Any communications in reply you will please send to me at this place, if likely to reach me before the 10th of November; otherwise send to Bro. Pratt.

Fraternal yours, in C. H. and P.,
J. T. ROGERS, G. M. W.

Let Harmony Exist.

An exchange from the East, which is published in the interest of one of the Orders, does not seem to like it because there are several of the leading secular papers in its locality that once a week give fraternal society news. The exchange alluded to should take a broader view. * * * Whatever calls attention to these Orders, their aims, objects and purposes, is beneficial to said Orders, and so far from cavilling or finding fault, the fraternal press should feel grateful to the secular for the money it expends to assist them in their laudable work. One merely gives the index, the outlines. It is for the fraternal press to give the minutiae and details.—S. F. Call.

The foregoing coincides with our views upon this subject. The daily press and the fraternal periodicals should recognize in each other assistants, not rivals. The only case where there may be any cause for complaint in the question at issue is where the dailies endeavor to present a very exhaustive fraternal department, and in doing so purloin almost verbatim from the fraternal press three fourths of their news without giving a word of credit, and then call upon the public to admire their enterprise. Plagiarism is not enterprise. The Call is the pioneer among the dailies of this coast in the matter of giving an outline of the fraternal news once a week, and is not to be classed among the papers we have just mentioned. On the contrary, it is honorable, and does not hesitate to give credit where credit is due. Let all other dailies follow its example and they will find that harmony will exist, and that the fraternal press will find no fault. Their departments should not clash at all, as they should move in different spheres. The province of the one is to furnish the general news and outlines of any fraternal matters of general interest. The province of the latter is to furnish the fraternal news in detail, and if they are able, to combine it with good family reading and illustrations, making valuable and appreciated home journals like the WATCHMAN and RECORD.

WE are assured of the genuineness of the following curious notice, addressed, quite recently, to the members of a friendly society which need not fear a "run" upon it, if the procedure therein described be rigidly adhered to: "In the event of your death, you are requested to bring your book, policy and certificate at once to the agent, Mr. —, when your claims will have immediate attention."

THE falling of the leaves is not more certain than the death of man, of which it is typical. Let autumn's leaf-strewn forests remind us that our own death is always near, and that it should not find us unprepared, nor our dependents unprovided for.

THE Signal Service will no doubt adopt the new time standard for railways.

Grand Recorder's Department.

HEADQUARTERS of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always enclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

SOME day we shall get into trouble through the carelessness of our Lodge officers in not sending notices of assessments to members. Each member is entitled to such notice (so long as he remains in good standing), served on him personally by the Financier, or mailed to his address as furnished to the Lodge; and unless such notice be given, he can not be legally suspended. The Financier should so keep his books that he may be able to swear, if brought into court, that the legal notice was served according to law.

SO many of our Recorders are slow in sending in their monthly reports, and so many Receivers late in remitting on the assessment calls, that the conclusion is irresistible that the law requiring inquiries in relation to these matters, by the Master Workman, is not observed when going through the Order of Business. The law is a good one, and should be followed in every Lodge.

THERE is one assessment for November, making five single calls in succession. Two assessments for December may be expected, giving us seventeen in all for the year, as against nineteen last year.

SEVERAL new Degree of Honor Lodges are in process of formation. Those that get a good proportion of beneficial members will no doubt succeed, as a rule; those that do not, may, but the odds are very largely against such a result.

THOSE who desire to know just what sort of an organization the A. O. U. W. was in the beginning, should read the original constitution, etc., as published by order of the Supreme Lodge, in the proceedings of the last session of that body.

UNDER the beneficiary law, as amended, members have till the close of the 28th day of the month in which to pay assessments, but Lodges must remit on assessment calls, so that the money shall reach the Grand Recorder during the first week in the month in which the call is dated.

The Old vs. the New.

Our good brother of the Michigan Herald evidently thinks that Protector and WATCHMAN are a bad lot or terribly dull of comprehension, because we do not fancy the new reinstatement law. The Protector thinks the old law better than the new—an opinion in which we coincide. We do not agree with the Protector, however, that the old law was as clear as it should have been, because so able a brother as he of the Herald, and some others we know of, did not understand it. A law should be sufficiently explicit to make "interpretation" and "construction" unnecessary. Because the new law is not of this character, we find fault with it. But of the two, the old law was by far the more easily understood.

Addressing itself to the Protector, the Herald has this to say:

We propose to propound one question relative to the old law, and we hope that our worthy contemporary will answer it as freely and as promptly as we did those it propounded relative to graded assessments some time ago.

That part of the old law to which we refer reads as follows:

"Any member holding a final card, or a member suspended from the Order by reason of non-payment of dues or arrearages of beneficiary assessments, applying to be reinstated, shall pay the amount he was in arrears at the date of his suspension, under the provisions of Sec. 12, of this Article, not exceeding eight dollars, and in addition thereunto a sum of not less than two dollars," etc.

Now will the Protector turn to its constitution and tell the Order what arrearages of dues or beneficiary assessments the member holding a final card is compelled to pay under the provisions of Sections 12, [13], of the Beneficiary Article, when he is reinstated. How much was it? We are of the opinion that the Protector's answer to this question will exhibit to the Order at large the clearness of the old law.

And then turning to the WATCHMAN, he confronts us with the following:

We have in this issue propounded one question to the Protector relative to the old reinstatement law, and we now wish to propound one to the WATCHMAN, and hope that full replies may be received from each of these journals.

How much would a member suspended for the non-payment of dues and "one or more" assessments, say three, have to pay before he could be reinstated under the old law. We are of the opinion that the answers to the two questions will show the clearness and plainness of the old law.

Before proceeding to answer the foregoing, we will quote Sec. 12 of the Beneficiary Law, referred to in the portion of Sec. 13 quoted by the Herald:

"Any member in arrears (on beneficiary assessments) for the period of six months shall stand suspended from all benefits and privileges of the Order. His beneficiary certificate shall be reported * * * as annulled, and he shall not again be admitted to membership except as provided for in Sec. 13 of this article."

Now we will answer the question. He should pay for three assessments, as "back beneficiary," and, under the constitution for the government of Subordinate Lodges under the immediate jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge, and also under that of our Lodges (for they are identical in this regard), he would also be required to pay the amount of his arrearages of dues up to the time of his suspension from the Order; or, in other words, the amount of dues for which he was suspended from the Order, and not less than two dollars for Library or General Fund. He should also deposit one dollar in the Beneficiary Fund.

It may be a little discourteous for us to answer the question propounded to the Protector, but we can not resist the temptation. We simply say he would have no arrearages of any kind to pay, for he would have to be clear on the books in order to get a final card. There would be no arrearages; and hence none to pay. Plain enough, isn't it?

Keep the Ranks Increasing.

Over and over again we have urged our Lodges to see to it that their memberships be not allowed to decrease. Often the loss of one or more members by suspension or otherwise will work no harm to his Lodge, but a real benefit instead, provided the vacant place be at once filled by some other good member; but to allow the membership to run down, or even remain at a standstill, means disaster and not success. The same is true of the jurisdiction as a whole, and as the jurisdiction is constituted of separate subordinate lodges, if they or any of them go backward, the jurisdiction is to an extent affected.

Many of our Lodges are not as active as they should be. Their enthusiasm has died out. They are sleeping on the watch-towers, oblivious of danger, but danger lies beneath their feet. To such we say, Rouse up! Shake off the slumber from your eyelids, and look about for recruits to your waning ranks. There are yet plenty of men, good, true and desirable, that should enlist under our banner. Their hearth-stones are unprotected. Death would leave wife and children, at least in a measure, destitute. See them, talk with, and if possible, persuade them to come into your Lodge; not only for their own good, but for yours and for that of the general public, for all are interested in having no such thing as destitution in their midst, and if every man belonged to the Workmen or some similar organization, destitution would be almost unheard of. Gather them in! The morals of the Lodge-room are better than those of the saloon. To make a good Workmen is to make a good citizen, a good husband, a good father. Swell up your numbers. You are putting a shield over the houses of the people by which they will be preserved. Thus not only will you be doing good pecuniarily and morally, but be performing a patriotic duty as well, for the homes of the people constitute the strength of the state.

Excelsior's New Hall.

Arrangements have been completed for the ceremony of laying the memorial stone of the new hall of Excelsior, 126, and the affair promises to be a notable one for the Lodge and the Order. The programme prepared by the Committee on Ceremonial is, for the Lodge (and as many members of other Lodges as may find it convenient) to meet in their hall—Blair's Lower Hall, Mission street, between Seventh and Eighteenth streets, at 3 P. M. on Monday, November 12th, and forming in procession, escort the officers of the Grand Lodge and specially invited guests to the new hall. A special ceremonial service, prepared by P. M. W. Samuel Booth, and noted elsewhere, has received the hearty indorsement of the Grand Master, and will be introduced the first time on this occasion. In the evening, the Grand Officers and specially invited guests, with such of the members of Excelsior as desire to avail themselves of the privilege, will partake of an informal dinner, at 7 o'clock, in the Palace Hotel, when music, short speeches, and a general glorification will be in order. The building, under the energetic management of Bros. Gray and Stover, the contractors, is getting along finely, and two or three days of fine weather will see it covered in.

The stone is called a memorial-stone, to distinguish it from the ordinary corner-stone, because it is not to be laid on the corner of the foundation, but in the center of the structure. It will, however, contain documents, etc., of the same general character as are ordinary deposited in corner-stones. We are informed that several other Lodges anticipate following Excelsior's example in building and owning halls of their own, among them, the San Jose Lodges.

Important Legal Decisions.

From the Call we extract the following in regard to some important legal decisions touching upon the matter of the relation of a beneficiary certificate to a person's estate: More than two years ago Grand Master Barnes of the A. O. U. W. of California made several important decisions, which were unanimously concurred in by the Grand Lodge of this State, which have been adopted by other States, and on several occasions approved by various Courts of law. Among these decisions were: 1. That the laws of the Order required that beneficiary certificates should name the person or persons to whom the money was to be paid in event of death, and that if a certificate was made payable to "will" or "order," and no "will" or "order" was made specifying said money, that said certificate was legally payable to no one. 2. That no claim of creditors could be recognized, but that the money must be paid to the party designated. 3. That unless the certificate read "payable to estate" or "legal representatives," no claim of executors, administrators, etc., would be entertained. 4. That beneficiary moneys could not be considered as "estate," unless the certificate distinctly stated that they should be.

In a number of instances when a party has died, self-constituted administrators have arisen, but not one of them yet has ever obtained the money. Hosts of creditors have often endeavored to secure the moneys of the widow and orphan, and thus far have failed. There are many, however, ignorant of the laws upon the subject, who might be deprived of their beneficiary amounts in the future, and therefore we reprint the above, not only for their benefit, but to induce members who have their certificates made out in an uncertain manner to correct them immediately, and, according to fraternal law, specify the party or parties to whom the money shall go in the event of their death.

Financial Statement of the Order.

The report of the Supreme Recorder, A. O. U. W., shows that in the General Fund the Supreme Receiver had in his hands $1,490.98 on Sept. 1st, and received up to Oct. 1st, $550.76, making a total of $2,041.74. He paid out warrants for $1,301, leaving a balance of $740.74 on hand. The Supreme Recorder furnishes the following summary for the month of August, 1883:

† No report. Membership estimated by Supreme Recorder.

‡ The amount disbursed by the Supreme Lodge includes also the disbursements of Grand Lodges under the immediate jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge, viz.: Ohio, Ky., Ga., Ala., Miss., N. Car., S. Car. and Fla., Texas, Nev., and Col., N. M. and A.

Fifteen deaths and four assessments again in the Supreme Jurisdiction this month, for October. The following is taken from the assessment notice sent out by the Supreme Recorder to Lodges under the Supreme Jurisdiction: "The continued heavy death rate again necessitates a call this month for four assessments. The calls made last month were calculated, with the aid of the amount due from the Relief Fund, to liquidate all claims up to and including death No. 85. The amount of estimated receipts from Assessment No. 17 is $10,000, from Nos. 18 and 19, $16,000 (Nevada not being liable), and from No. 20, $5,000 (Nevada and Ohio not being liable). Should these estimates prove correct, a balance of $1,000 will then be in the treasury after settling all death losses up to and including No. 100. Four more calls in addition to the above complete the quota of the Supreme Lodge Jurisdiction for the fiscal year ending 1883-84, and all losses thereafter during said fiscal year will be provided for from the Relief Fund. The Jurisdictions of Nevada and Ohio have been set aside by the Supreme Master Workman as separate Beneficiary Jurisdictions, the former to date from August 15, 1883, and the latter from September 1, 1883. Nevada is therefore liable for Assessment No. 17, and Ohio for Nos. 17, 18 and 19."

The San Francisco Brass Works.

Among our home industries which have made rapid progress of late is that of the manufacture of brass goods, and more especially those which are used by the plumbing trade. Until within a comparatively short time almost all the plumber's material has been imported for this coast. When Joseph Roylance started in some eight years ago in a very small way to make his castings without any capital at all, he had little idea that the branch he had undertaken would grow to such dimensions as it has since. After going along on a small scale for nearly eight years, William Moller joined the firm, and property was bought on Mission street, Nos. 413 and 415, and the original buildings, etc., were very much enlarged. After these two had run the business for a while, Robt. Dalziel, of Oakland, came over and consolidated the business, which then became a manufacturing and jobbing one.

The establishment is known as the San Francisco Brass Works, and has abundant capital, working from 90 to 100 men continually. They make all kinds of brass goods for plumbing and water works. They are the sole manufacturers in the United States of the "X" steam cock and globe valve. This is made of a metal far superior to any steam metal in the United States. They also manufacture the oxidized bronze, which is used for journals, being the hardest of metals. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's foundries, etc., use this, and it is pronounced superior to phosphor bronze. There are only two other places in this country where they make this. They have just started this kind of manufacture here. A very large stock of iron pipe and pipe fitting, for water, gas and steam, are constantly on hand. Among other goods are sinks—black, enameled, galvanized and marbled. Also, water closets, plumbers' earthenware, and in fact every article pertaining to a first-class plumbers' supply headquarters. A strong speciality is in iron pipes and fittings, it being the intention to keep the largest and best stock of these goods on the Coast.

The establishment is quite a large one. The basement is filled to overflowing with the heavier goods, such as pipes, etc. The two-story building above has every inch of room occupied, and more space is so much wanted that a new and third story is shortly to be added. The lot is 40x160, covered with the building, and there is a foundry in the rear. The foundry is adapted to make three heats, or 210 boxes a day regularly. Up stairs, in the finishing room, are all the necessary appliances for finishing the various castings. Every article made is carefully tested, so as to stand certain pressure without leakage. The manufacturers can therefore guarantee all their work as perfect in every respect.

This is a home manufacture which is equal to any in the United States of its kind. The managers are practical men, and with the experience of Mr. T. W. Jeffress, who was for a number of years employed by W. W. Montague & Co., of this city, and who has a thorough knowledge and knows the wants of the trade on this Coast, they can not but continue to succeed. The success which they have met with is proven by the gradual and constant increase of business and necessity of enlargement of the works. No very large castings are made, the work being confined to that class of articles used in the plumbers' trade, such as cocks, valves, faucets, fittings, etc. They now keep all the supplies needed for first-class plumbing stock.

The Oil Interest of Southern California.

Few persons who have not given especial attention to the oil interest in this portion of the state realize its importance. A casual trip only through the region in which the oil developments are being made gives no idea of the results already accomplished. Take the Newhall or Pico district, for instance. The oil output of this district has averaged during the last year more than 1,000 barrels per day, of an average value of $2 per barrel, or in round numbers 365,000 barrels per year, of the total valuation of over $700,000. All this has been derived from a very limited area of territory, not over 1,000 acres all told.

So great has been the success of the parties who have inaugurated this enterprise at Pico, that they have determined to enlarge to an enormous extent their field of operation, and take in the whole of the Santa Clara Valley, containing an oil area of many hundreds of thousands of acres. Already have they formed corporations for pipe lines down the valley to Ventura, and the pipes are laid from Santa Paula down to the sea. In addition, there is piled up at Newhall large stacks of pipe, which would seem to be more than enough to pipe all the way from Newhall to Santa Paula and connect the wells already productive with the sea.

Companies of parties from Pennsylvania have been formed for putting down additional wells, and derricks are rising in all directions on the mountain sides of the Santa Clara. There are also piled up at Newhall large piles of pipe, six, seven, and eight inches in diameter, to be used in casing wells now being put down, or to be put down in the immediate future. The indications now are that more than one hundred wells will be put down in this valley alone in the next six months, and the output more than doubled.

Already is this the second oil-producing field in this country, and with the energy and pluck now being shown, it will not be many years before Pennsylvania, so long the oil monarch of the world, will be obliged to look to its laurels.

This increased development can be of incalculable value to our sister county, Ventura, and to its principal port, San Buenaventura. With a million or more of dollars flowing into it from its oil exports, with the increased valuation given to its productions by a home market established by the oil industry, Ventura County must, in the immediate future, receive a boom which will add a greatly increased value to its lands and prosperity to its people.

Without any jealousy of Ventura and its riches, we can call attention to the fact that the surface indications of oil in Santa Barbara County are every whit as good as those in Ventura, and that beyond question oil lies within the limits of this county, only needing stirring activity and business energy to bring it forth. Who will inaugurate this enterprise and put down a well, not 200 feet deep, but 2,000 feet, if necessary? There may be risk, but if successful the result will more than compensate for the risk run.—Santa Barbara Independent.

EDUCATION IN THE WORK SHOP.—One of the New England manufacturing companies has introduced an educational qualification into its works, and is said to be discharging all employees who can not read and write. Before doing so, an opportunity was offered to all to qualify themselves, a night-school being established for that purpose. While this is an unusual proceeding, there is some good sense in it. Illiterate labor is, as a rule, the very poorest kind. While the mill operative may have no need while actually at work to either read or write, he will almost surely be a better and brighter workman at purely mechanical operations if he can and does read instructive publications and write in his leisure hours. The fact is recognized by the state that education is desirable, and the New England manufacturing companies simply apply to their own communities what everybody says is good for the population en masse.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Successful Patent Solicitors.

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is new and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That is this understood and appreciated is evidenced by the number of patents issued through their agency. DEWEY & CO. Patent Agency (S. F.) from week to week and year to year.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN'S progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the first and third Saturdays of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following, the first six mentioned, however, being more fully represented in the organs of their own which we have established:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF HOSIEN FRIENDS
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS AND LADIES OF HONOR,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN RULE,
ORDER OF MUTUAL COMPANIONS.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

RECORD PUBLISHING CO.,

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this the oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time they intend to pay for it, let them not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through DEWEY & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

GUARD FOR CARS.—John Craig, S. F. No. 285,975. Dated Oct. 2, 1883. This guard attachment is specially adapted for cable cars, and is intended to prevent accidents by furnishing a means for keeping persons from getting under the wheels. An iron frame with side pieces and cross pieces is secured on the axles. The ends of this frame are inclined downward until they reach within a short distance of the road-bed. The ends are hinged and limited in their downward movement. Under the lower bar, on the guard, are rollers which impinge on the track. The device is steady. Being secured to the frame it travels at a uniform distance from the road-bed, and will neither strike small obstructions nor rise up, thus adapting it for its purpose.

ROAD ENGINE.—John S. Woolsey, Gilroy, Cal. No. 285,942. Dated Oct. 2, 1883. This steam or power road-wagon consists of a pair of friction wheels mounted on a shaft above the bearing wheels of the wagon, driven by the engines, means being provided for throwing them into and out of contact with the bearing wheels, so as to drive or stop the wagon. By applying the power on the rims of the wheels a saving is effected. Springs allow the boxes of the shaft carrying the friction wheels play enough so they will accommodate themselves to any inequalities upon the rims of the wheels, or to any stones or dirt that may adhere to them as they revolve.

ELEVATING AND CARRYING APPARATUS.—Ira Bishop, Benicia, Cal. No. 258,873. Dated Oct. 2, 1883. The improvements consist in a traveling elevator belt, provided with peculiar hooks; in a carrier belt above to receive the load, and in the mechanism for driving the belts and for changing the direction of the carrier belt. The general object of the invention is to elevate material or articles from one point to another, and to transport them to different places; but the particular use to which the apparatus is adapted is to raise material or sacks from the ground or lower floor of a warehouse to the upper floor, and to carry it along on said floors to points desired.

ENRICH and revitalize the blood by using Brown's Iron Bitters.

TRUE Temperance

Is not signing a pledge or taking a solemn oath that cannot be kept, because of the non-removal of the cause—liquor. The way to make a man temperate is to kill the desire for those dreadful artificial stimulants that carry so many bright intellects to premature graves, and desolation, strife and unhappiness into so many families.

It is a fact! BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, a true non-alcoholic tonic, made in Baltimore, Md., by the Brown Chemical Company, who are old druggists and in every particular reliable, will, by removing the craving appetite of the drunkard, and by curing the nervousness, weakness, and general ill health resulting from intemperance, do more to promote temperance, in the strictest sense than any other means now known.

It is a well authenticated fact that many medicines, especially 'bitters,' are nothing but cheap whiskey vilely concocted for use in local option countries. Such is not the case with BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It is a medicine, a cure for weakness and decay in the nervous, muscular, and digestive organs of the body, producing good, rich blood, health and strength. Try one bottle. Price $1.00.

Aims, Objects and Regulations the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen is a general organization for the mutual benefit of its members and their families. It embraces in its membership men of every vocation, profession and occupation—employers and employees—workers of all classes, whether their labor be mental or physical. It has no connection with any religious sect, political party, or organization for effecting the prices of labor or commodities, but is designed to promote fraternity, mental and social improvement, and mutual assistance.

The most distinctive feature of the Order is what is designated as the Beneficiary Fund—a carefully-devised, well-guarded, economical and beneficial system, by means of which the sum of

is secured to each member's family, or such person or persons as he may choose to designate. During the several years since the Order has been established this sum has been promptly paid in full in each case of death, to the persons entitled to receive it, within a few weeks, and without any litigation or troublesome formalities. A careful examination of the working of the system will satisfy any intelligent person that such will continue to be the case.

HOW ASSESSMENTS ARE PAID.
Each person who becomes a member of the Order pays to the Receiver of his Lodge one dollar for the Beneficiary Fund. Every Lodge has on hand, at the beginning of the month, ready for a call, one dollar of Beneficiary Fund for each member. When a death occurs, if there is a sufficient amount of the Fund in the Grand Lodge to meet the required payment of $2,000, no call is made upon the Subordinate Lodges, but if there is not a sufficient surplus from the last assessment, then the Lodges are notified at the first of the month to forward their portion of the Fund on hand ($1 for each member), and an assessment is made to replace the amount forwarded. By this means the Beneficiary Fund of the Lodge is again replenished, ready for a call at the first of the next month, if it should be made. Assessments are only made on the members at the first meeting night in each month, and written and printed notice is sent to each member, bearing date of such meeting night. Twenty days time is given from that date to meet the payment. Thus the payments are made at such intervals, and are called for in such manner that they may be easily provided for and met without inconvenience even by persons of small income.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?
In the first year of the working of the Supreme Lodge (1873-4), the number of assessments made upon the members of the Lodges directly under its jurisdiction, was 20; second year, 14; third year, 15; fourth year, 5; fifth year, 14; sixth year, 16. Since that time, the average has remained about the same, and these figures will also apply to the Jurisdiction of California. It is probable that the future average will remain about the same. The average cost to each member, therefore, has been $15.66 per year; being a little more than four cents per day as the cost of a completely-secured guarantee of $2,000, to be paid on the death of a member. Any man who is in circumstances to avail himself of this system be justifiable in neglecting to give to his family the security which it affords? Does not prudence and affection dictate that he should secure for them the protection thus offered? A number of States, having over 2,000 members in each, collect and disburse the Beneficiary Fund separately through their Grand Lodges, instead of through the Supreme Lodge. In these, the cost per year has been, in some cases less and in others greater than that given above, but the average has been about the same.

California was set apart as a separate Beneficiary Jurisdiction in July, 1878, and at the end of July, 1879, levied and collected ten assessments for deaths occurring in the State, and for the months of August and September three more, making a total for 14 months of 13 assessments, or an average of a little less than 93 cents a month for each member. During 1880, 16 assessments were levied in California, and for 1881, it is estimated there will probably be 14 assessments.

ADVANTAGES OF THE SYSTEM.
The A. O. U. W. Beneficial system is simple, easily understood, economical in its workings, and in all its details comes under the direct observation and care of the members who meet weekly in their Lodges, where the business is transacted, and where they enjoy the advantages of social and fraternal intercourse, and of mental improvement. These Lodges are governed by officers regularly elected by the members—the financial affairs are under the proper guards and restrictions, and a careful system of checks prevents fraud or betrayal of trust.

PROTECTION AT NET COST.
All money paid on assessments for the Beneficiary Fund goes to the payment of death benefits without reduction even for expenses, these being provided for out of a General Fund raised in each Lodge. This fund is made up from initiation fees (usually about $15 for each member, with sometimes an advanced rate, according to age), and weekly dues of not less than 25 cents per month. The advantage which each member derives from the social, fraternal and educational features of the Order, and the good which is accomplished by it in these respects, afford a more than ample return for the sum he pays into the General Fund, which meets all the expenses of the Order, leaving the entire Beneficiary Fund intact for the beneficent purpose for which it is intended. There are no commissions, fees or salaries to be paid out of it, but the entire amount paid in goes to the widows, orphans and other heirs of deceased brethren. Thus the Beneficiary system may be fairly said to be carried on absolutely without any working expenses, and, at the same time, to be more closely under the observation of those interested in it, and more carefully guarded than any other method adopted for similar purposes.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION.
A medical examination is required under such rules as are generally adopted by life insurance companies. The character of the applicant must also be investigated, and the Lodge pass upon his application by ballot. Persons between the ages of 21 and 50 only are admitted.

BENEFITS OF SICK OR DISABLED MEMBERS.
The payment of weekly sick benefits to members is a matter left to the control of each Subordinate Lodge. Some provide in their By-Laws for such benefits—others do not. If sick benefits are to be paid, the initiation fees and weekly dues are fixed at an amount sufficient to cover the expense—each Lodge having the power to fix the fees and dues at such sums (not below $15 for initiation and degrees, and $2 for Beneficiary Fund and certificate, and 25 cents per month for dues) as may be determined upon.

GENERAL FEATURES OF THE ORDER.
The A. O. U. W. is a secret Order, having two degrees, with appropriate initiation ceremonies. These are simple, but impressive. The teachings are calculated to strengthen the character and elevate the moral principles of the members.

The Order is composed of Subordinate Lodges, Grand Lodges and a Supreme Lodge. Subordinate Lodges in States or Territories where no Grand Lodge has been established, are under the immediate jurisdiction of and report to the Supreme Lodge, until a Grand Lodge is established.

When a Grand Lodge has over 2,000 members under its jurisdiction, it can be set apart as a separate Beneficiary district if desired. In this case the members are assessed for the deaths which occur within such district or jurisdiction, and the Grand Lodge collects the assessments and pays the death benefits under the laws and regulations adopted by the Supreme Lodge. The Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, California, Wisconsin, Kansas, Oregon and Ontario have been thus set apart as to the Beneficiary Fund. In all other respects they remain integral parts of the Order.

PROGRESS OF THE ORDER.
The A. O. U. W. was started in Pennsylvania in 1868 but was not sufficiently established to pay the $2,000 benefit until 1873, from which time up to the 1st of January, 1880, the Grand Lodge of that State alone has paid over $546,000 of Beneficiary Fund.

The Supreme Lodge, up to June, 1881 had paid out $919,172.90 on deaths of members of Lodges under its immediate jurisdiction. The amount paid by the Order during the year 1880, was $1,305,887.00.

The membership reported on the first of March, 1881, was 97,179, with Grand Lodges established in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, New York, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Michigan, California, Georgia, Kansas, Ontario (Canada), Oregon and Washington Territories, Massachusetts, Nevada, and Subordinate Lodges in a number of other States. In all these States the Order is steadily and rapidly growing. With the increase already since the above date, it is safe to say that before the close of the year 1881 it will number over 125,000 members.

The Order was founded by a few earnest, honest men, for fraternal and beneficent purposes. Its sphere of usefulness has been enlarged, and it has been faithfully conducted as its founders designed it to be—not to subserve the selfish interest of a few, but for the mutual benefit of all. Thoughtful and prudent men join it because they can thus provide, without present embarrassment, for the contingencies arising from the uncertainties of life, and at the same time aid each other in mutual improvement and the elevation of humanity.

CHARITY, HOPE AND PROTECTION.
To every loyal brother of the A. O. U. W. these words symbolize the greatness of an organization which, to-day, is doing good commensurate with the loftiness of its mission. Charity, hope and protection are the three cardinal principles of our Order. By a combination in the character of each member of these three attributes, we have men of noble mind working together for a common good. Our field is a world-wide philanthropy, where the merits so combine as to make of every member a true man. Selfishness is no part of the A. O. U. W. system. It is a departure from it as much as is possible. The true Workman has none other than charity for a brother, hope for the good of the future, and protection for the helpless in time of sore trial and distress. These are the three talismanic words and objects of the Order, and he who cannot affiliate with those whose aims are embraced in these, cannot be, in word and deed, a true Workman.

ADVANTAGES OF THE A. O. U. W. SYSTEM.
Some one has epitomized the prominent reasons for joining the Ancient Order of United Workmen about as follows:
1. Because insurance benefits are furnished to all the members at cost. Having had 14 years or more of practical experience and trial, during which, hundreds of thousands of dollars have been paid to widows and orphans at less than half cost of insurance in stock companies, it is worth more than a trial.
2. The A. O. U. W. offers more benefits than any other Order.
3. Because the cost of all the above large benefits is less than one-half of a corresponding insurance in the ordinary insurance companies.
4. Because the assessments are based on the "Actuarial Table of Costs of Risks."
5. Because the Order is steadily and rapidly growing.
6. Because the whole membership is taken into full confidence as to the management, and in the monthly published reports of the officers every member can see what has been done with every dollar received by the Order, and the final result officers have given adequate bonds; and lastly, because
The Supreme Court of the A. O. U. W. will not take advantage of any technicalities, but will pay all claims promptly, whenever they arise.
Further information cheerfully given by applying to H. G. PRATT, Grand Recorder, S. F., Cal.

News in Brief.

JUDGE J. D. THOMPSON states that five miles of grading has been done on the Napa and Lake County railroad, and that on reaching Dinnie, some fifteen miles above Napa, a track will be laid and a construction train put on.

The old Mission church at Carmel, near Monterey, is fast going to decay, and if steps are not taken and the old structure covered over soon, it will become a mass of ruins, and nothing but a heap of stones will mark the place where this historic relic now stands.

The city of Canton is apparently quiet, but foreigners are in constant dread of further trouble, unless the Hankow affair is satisfactorily settled. Six war ships help to preserve order. The Viceroy has about 10,000 troops in the city, to curb any attempt at rebellion fomented by secret societies.

The assessment rolls in this city foot up as follows: City real estate, $112,219,377; improvements, $46,503,892; Total, $158,723,269; assessments of railroad, $229,442; Grand total, $158,952,711. The State Board of Equalization raised the assessment fifteen per cent for state purposes, which brings the assessed value of real estate and improvements in the city up to $182,761,201, apportioned on the basis of $1.20 on every $100 of valuation for city and county purposes, and 47.7 cents for state purposes. The statement of tax revenue for the year is as follows: City and county purposes, $1,907,432.54; state purposes, $908,323.17; personal property increased, for state purposes, $347,567.87. Total, $3,163,323.53.

A Moral with a Value.

All of us have heard of some one who says he will join the A. O. U. W. after he will be better prepared to do so financially. Such a person does not take into account the fact that sickness or death does not await his convenience, but comes unexpected and suddenly. When we hear of one of this class passing away, we see in it a moral of value. But far greater the moral can be drawn out of the following, told us by a brother, of Terre Haute, some weeks ago: He says he had in his family for a number of years a treasure of a servant girl who was penuriousness itself, and by the exercise of her desire to save, aided in keeping expenses within bounds. After a time the girl married a hard-working young man who was a member of the A. O. U. W., and much valued for his energy and wish to serve the Order. He remained a member some months after his marriage, but at length his wife's penuriousness got the better of her. She said the money was every month thrown away, put into a hole without a bottom, and it ought to be stopped. She ding-donged about the matter until he was convinced the Order cost too much money, and left it. He had saved some money before his marriage, and by his wife's economy afterwards succeeded in getting together enough to buy a home. After he left the Order they took a notion to go to California, where money was more plentiful (?). The house was sold, and they emigrated, establishing themselves at Los Angeles. By the time he had become established in business, nearly all their money was expended, and it was only a month later when he died, leaving his wife without means, in a strange land, and without the aid the Order could have given her had her husband remained a member.—Indiana Reformer.

Lodge Libraries.

In a late number of the Pacific Overseer, whose name is now changed to the Lodge Visitor, we find some interesting correspondence from Bro. C. Brown, Recorder of Seaside Lodge, of Astoria, from which we take an extract of merit, which also gives one Lodge's experience in regard to Lodge libraries. The idea of making our Lodges the intellectual centers of their respective neighborhoods is one which the WATCHMAN has frequently advocated, and expects to continue. After suggesting the plan of getting P. G. M. Barnes and Bro. Reading of this jurisdiction to visit their Lodges and revive interest, Bro. Brown continues as follows:

There is another way to insure an interest. In nearly every town or village throughout the jurisdiction there is not a place where one can get a book to read without buying it. I would suggest that all Lodges try the experiment of Seaside Lodge, and own a library. Our Lodge commenced, when there were but few members and but little money, by buying a bookcase costing about fifty dollars. We then, to start the library, contributed some books, and amended our by-laws by assessing each member 25 cents per month as dues, for the benefit of the Library Fund. We soon had money to purchase about 100 volumes of standard works. We continued the dues for library purposes for about two years, when we found that we had quite a nice library and money on hand, and we no longer needed the extra dues. That part of the by-laws was repealed, and during the last month we have added 53 volumes of standard books at a cost of only about sixty dollars. We have now about 300 volumes in our library, and if any one will only take a look at the Librarian's books, they can at once see how generally they are read. We are positive that the library is a great benefit to our Lodge, and nothing would induce our members to part with it. There is still another thing which might be done at a very little cost. That is to circulate your paper and any other papers relating to the Order. I am of the opinion that the press has a great deal to do with men generally. When a great political campaign is on the boards, the first thing done by the sharp politicians is to distribute, as far as they can, newspapers to every man in every county throughout the United States. They canvass the country by districts, appoint committees, and send public speakers out. Now we are not exactly in the same position as they, but something similar. We, strange to say, have an opposition, and it comes from the regular life insurance societies. The first thing an agent will ask you when he solicits your risk, and you say no, is, "Do you belong to the A. O. U. W.?" If you answer in the affirmative, he will then tell you that we are "just on the point of destruction, can't last very long, only wait until you quit taking new risks, then see how soon you will go to pieces," and that they have been members of the society themselves and know how unstable are its foundations, etc. This element ought to be met intelligently, and no doubt nearly every brother has heard the same story, and many could not answer them properly. I believe it is just as important that we should be posted in regard to our Order and the general welfare of our brothers as we should in any avocation in life, for we are trying to do what no other or regular insurance societies are doing, namely, to carry insurance at its actual cost. Does any brother ask for more? If he does he is not a proper person to belong to the A. O. U. W.

Our Agents.

OUR FRIENDS can do much in aid of our paper and the cause of practical knowledge and science, by assisting Agents in their labors of canvassing, by lending their influence and encouraging favors. We intend to send none but worthy men.

COMPLIMENTARY SAMPLES OF THIS PAPER are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage, and, as far as practicable, aid in circulating the journal, and making its value more widely known to others, and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $2 a year. Extra copies mailed for 10 cents, if ordered soon enough. Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times), by turning a leaf.

FRIGHTENED TO DEATH. The London Daily News mentions a "joke" which had a fatal termination, and comments upon it as follows:
"A girl of eighteen, named Harriet Etherington, has just been frightened to death at Brock-ley. She was walking on a lonely road beside a cemetery, when a man with something white around his face 'flew out at her.' Probably the neighborhood of the graves may have disposed her to be readily alarmed. She went home, told her story, and fell down dead at her father's table. 'There is a class of idiots who think it amusing to play on the nerves of women in this manner. To be frightened terribly by a person in a hideous disguise, who leaps out suddenly in the dark, a girl need not be superstitious or inclined to believe in churchyard spectres. The suddenness of the attack might startle even a man of strong nerve for a moment. To a girl, still more to a child, such an attack may mean simply murder.'"

NEW MUSIC.—Among the latest publications of Oliver Ditson & Co., of Boston, are the following: "The Origin of Love," a very pretty Italian-English song, by La Villa, of which the English words are by Lord Byron; "Morning by the Spring" is another romantic ballad, this time by Jensen, who is a German or Dane; "Let it be Soon," by Tosti, is of Italian quality, but with only English words; "If Love were what the Rose is," by Cowen—still harps on "Love," who is the one perpetual public favorite; "La Gioconda Waltz" is an arrangement by Le Baron; "Fanfani March," from Afrikareise, is by Suppe; "Miner's March," of the set called "Buttercups and Daisies," is by E. S. Clark;
"Esmeralda Galop" is by Goring Thomas.

THERE is now a lady florist in Quincy, Mass., who, to indulge her own love of flowers and improve her health, built a small greenhouse and took the care of it and a garden besides.
People wanted to buy flowers, and the business grew upon her hands till now she has four forcing houses, a fern house, and a large garden crowded with flowers, herbs, and fruits. She has three young women in training, who find it easy to do all the work of the place, the only other help being a boy in the busy season.

ORIGIN OF THE UNIVERSE.—The well known Parisian editor, M. Moigno, has written a paper on the synthesis of the heavens and the earth. In this he makes the deduction that everything originated from ether, which first generated hydrogen. To an impulsion of ether he attributes the existence throughout the universe of the action of gravitation.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and shareholders
on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practi-
cians in this country.

The Press gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.
New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

About Obtaining Patents.

Patents are Virtually Contracts

Between inventors and the public. The consideration flowing from both parties to the contract is expressly fixed by statute. The Government requires the following consideration in every case: First, that an applicant for a patent shall disclose a new and useful improvement, of which he is the first and original inventor. Second, that the invention has not been patented, or published in a printed publication prior to the date of his invention. Third, that the invention has not been in public use, or on sale, more than two years prior to his application for a patent. Fourth, that the invention shall be properly described and claimed in the specification forming a part of the patent. Provided an inventor complies strictly with these conditions, the Government guarantees that the inventor shall have the exclusive right to make, use and sell the thing invented for the term of seventeen years.

The Patent Law provides that in case a patent, which is the evidence of the contract, is not executed in compliance with the requirements of the law, it may be annulled and rendered void. Hence, it is of the greatest importance to every inventor that his patent or contract be skillfully and accurately drafted, that it may afford him complete protection for his invention during the life of his patent.

Secure a Good Patent.

An inventor should first ascertain whether or not his improvement has been patented. This requires an exhaustive search among all the patents in the class to which the invention relates. This question can often be answered gratuitously by us, immediately on receiving full information of the invention, by reason of our long and extensive practice as patent solicitors and editors and publishers of first-class, scientific and industrial journals, during the past 20 years and over. When the question of priority of invention is not so readily to be determined, it is generally best to make what is termed a "preliminary examination," by searching through the patent office reports among the patents in the class to which the invention relates, and referring to our extensive patent library, containing compilations of special classes of American and foreign inventions, mechanical dictionaries, scientific encyclopedias, files of scientific and mechanical newspapers, and an immense number of patent applications by inventors of the Pacific coast, carefully filed by this office since 1860.

If, by this "preliminary examination," the improvement is found to have been previously invented, our client will receive, for the small sum of $5 for the examination, a verbal or written report showing definitely whether his invention has been anticipated, thereby saving him further expense and perhaps much time, useless delay, anxiety, etc.

To avoid all unnecessary delay, however, in securing patents at the earliest moment practicable, inventors will do well to forward a model, drawing or sketch, with a plain, full and comprehensive description of their invention (stating distinctly what the particular points of improvement are), with $15 as a first installment of fees. If the improvement appears to us to be novel and patentable, the necessary papers for an application for a patent will be prepared immediately and forwarded to the inventor for his signature. When the inventor receives the application and finds it duly prepared, he will carefully sign and return the same plainly addressed to us, with postal money order or express receipt for our own fee. The case will then be promptly filed by us in the Patent Office, and vigorously prosecuted to secure the best patent possible. (This course is the most expeditious and satisfactory, as no time is lost in transmitting correspondence relative to the preliminary steps to be taken.) When the patent is allowed the inventor will be duly notified, and on sending the final Government fee of $30 to us, we will order the issue of the patent, and forward the same as soon as it is secured from the Patent Office.

The payments are thus divided and made easy. We make no pretence of doing cheap work, in order to entice custom, nor do we afterward make additional charges to bring the bill up to a fair compensation. We do our work honestly and thoroughly, and we never give a case up as long as there is a chance to obtain a patent. The Agency charge is from $25 to $30, or sometimes more, if the invention is intricate or complicated, or requires much labor. Drawings cost from $5 upward, according to their number and the time employed, and, if a model is sent, the express charges upon this and the papers must be added. The total cost, in addition to Government fees, rarely exceeds $40, and for this we do all we can without appealing to the case.

When the invention consists of a new article of manufacture, or a new composition, samples of the separate ingredients sufficient to make the experiment and also of the manufactured article itself, must be furnished.

Models and Drawings.

Models are now seldom required by the Commissioner of Patents, and generally only in intricate cases. Perfect drawings of practical working machines are considered more satisfactory to the Patent Office than the old and more cumbersome system of storing up an immense bulk of almost numberless models.

Drawings or sketches, sufficient to illustrate clearly the invention, with a sufficient description to enable us to make a full set of perfect drawings for the Patent Office is all that we require. A model will answer our purpose as well however, in cases where the inventor can more easily furnish it for our use.

The value and even the validity of a patent often depends on the character, clearness and sufficiency of its drawings. There are thousands of existing patents in which the improvements are but partially or very poorly illustrated in the drawings. When an attempt is made to dispose of such patents, the vagueness and defects of the drawings often prejudice capitalists and manufacturers against the invention, while in reality it may be of great value, and would meet with ready sale had the invention been fully portrayed by artistic and skillfully executed drawings. Again, when patents of this character are brought into court, the uncertainty and ambiguity of the drawings enable the opposing experts to mystify the judges as to the construction or combination of parts intended to be covered by the patent. In all cases prepared by us, the drawings are made under our personal supervision, by skilled draftsmen in our constant employ, and every precaution is taken that the invention is fully and clearly shown by different views, so that the improvement will be readily understood by the Examiners in the Patent Office, and comprehended by the public when the patent is granted.

In the Patent Office

The application is assigned to the Examiner having charge of the class to which the invention relates. The case must then take its turn with others in the order of filing, and in due time is carefully examined to test the novelty of the invention. If the examiner fails to find anything that anticipates the invention, a patent is immediately allowed, provided the specification and claims are drafted in proper form. Should the Examiner find a prior patent which, in his opinion, anticipates one or more of the claims in the application, a letter of rejection is sent to the attorney in charge of the case; and, if the attorney coincides with the views of the Examiner, the claims rejected are erased. In preparing applications for patents, an attorney should be careful to familiarize himself with the class of inventions to which the application pertains, so that the specification and claims may be drafted as nearly perfect in the first instance as is possible. This course saves much time in prosecuting the application to a patent.

When claims are improperly rejected on patents which do not anticipate the spirit or wording of the claims, proper steps are immediately taken to convince the Examiner of his error. This is done, in most part, by personal arguments, as the differences in construction, operation, function and results are more readily discovered and appreciated by an oral presentation of the facts than can possibly be done by relying solely on written arguments. In order that the Patent Office record of the patents shall be complete, an oral argument is generally supplemented by a manuscript brief, that others, in examining the files at any future time, may clearly comprehend the position taken by the Examiner and attorney in prosecuting the case to patent.

In addition to our own personal attention to the interests of our clients here, we have, for over 12 years past, had constantly in association with us in Washington, one of the soundest legal counselors and ablest of practitioners in patent business in this country, who carefully attends in person to our business at the Patent Office, and has attained success in a most marked degree.

Perfect Claims.

The value and force of a patent are dependent on its claims. A patent may disclose to the public the most important and valuable invention, and yet the claim be of such meager scope that the patent is actually worthless. When the claims of a patent are so loosely drafted that infringers can flood the market with improvements, differing from the improvement disclosed by the patent only in slight changes in construction and arrangements of parts, such a patent is valueless to the owner, as it fails to afford him that exclusive and complete protection guaranteed by the Patent Law. Hence it is that the greatest care, skill and perseverance are required, first, in properly drafting the claims in the first instance, and second, in prosecuting the application before the Patent Office, and maintaining the rights of the inventor to claims as broad and sweeping as the invention will warrant. This latter is no easy task. The Examiners of the Patent Office serve in the capacity of attorneys guarding the interests of the public. It is their sworn duty to exercise the greatest care and watchfulness, that patentees do not secure claims of greater scope than they are justly entitled to. It is but natural that Examiners are sometimes in error as to just what scope should be accorded an invention. Although the Examiners act under honest convictions in cases where they refuse an inventor his just rights, yet it is the duty of the attorney to maintain the claims of his client, if he is convinced that they are just and proper. To succeed in this requires the display of tact, address and ability, and when the Examiner is made aware that the inventor is honestly and fairly entitled to the claims which have been rejected, he will almost invariably recede from his former action, and allow the case.

Advantages to Inventors on the Pacific Coast.

The firm of DEWEY & CO. (continuously editors and publishers of the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS, nearly from its early commencement in 1860) offer comparatively far better facilities to the local inventors of the Pacific States and Territories than are possessed by any other agents in America. Members of the firm give personal attention to the applications entrusted to their care. They have been longer in practice in patent soliciting than most agents who are still personally engaged in the business. They have secured more U. S. and foreign patents in the past 20 years (with very few exceptions) than any other firm still existing. Their practice has been so successful and long continued, that the great majority of inventions on this side of the American continent have been patented through their agency, thus affording them great and valuable experience, by thorough information of the true principles and points of novelty in the inventions, whether general in character or peculiarly local to this coast.

The extensive business combination and experience of this firm, is undoubtedly one of the most fortunate in existence for affording inventors prompt and reliable advice, and the best possible facilities for securing their full patent rights with safety and dispatch at uniformly reasonable rates. Every patentee of a worthy invention is guaranteed the gratuitous publication of a clearly-stated and correct description of his invention, in one or more of our influential and reliable newspapers, affording just the circulation that is best calculated to widely inform the class of readers most specially interested in the subject of his invention.

Saving of Time. Etc.

Inventors on this coast will find that owing to our familiarity with inventions and local affairs of this coast, we can more readily and fully comprehend their wants, and thus save much of the time ordinarily consumed in preliminary writing back and forth with distant agencies are employed.

Caveats.

A Caveat is a confidential communication made to the Patent Office, and is therefore filed within its secret archives. The privilege secured under a caveat is, that it entitles the caveator to receive notice, for a period of one year, of any application for a patent subsequently filed, and which is adjudged to be novel, and is likely to interfere with the invention described in the caveat, and the caveator is then required to complete his application for a patent within three months from the date of said notice. Caveat papers should be very carefully prepared. Our fee for the service varies from $10 to $20. The Government fee is $10 additional. To enable us to prepare caveat papers, we only require sketch and description of the invention.

Rejected Applications.

Inventors who have rejected cases (prepared either by themselves, or for them by other agents, who desire to ascertain their prospects of success) in further efforts, are invited to avail themselves of our unbiased facilities for securing favorable results. We have been successful in securing Letters Patent in many previously abandoned cases. Our terms are always reasonable. Inventors who do business with us will be notified of the state of their application in the Patent Office, when it is possible for us to do so.

Aim and Praiseworthy Influence of Fraternal Societies.

By the force of beneficent deeds, in the help which they extend to the bereft and unprotected, the fraternal societies have reached an honorable place in popular esteem, and have secured a large membership among those who perceive that safe and economical insurance can be obtained through these organizations. It is well that this is the case. It is eminently desirable that the societies should rest upon a well-trusted business basis, and the history of the organizations, as it is written in the records of the suffering they have prevented, and the relief they have extended, is a credit to all concerned in their management or included in their membership. And while we thus fully recognize the standing and value of these societies from a business point of view, and credit them with beneficence as shown in the results of the money distributed, there are other matters embraced in the aim and scope of the organizations, which we would impress and emphasize.

We foresee that there is a possibility that the features suggested by that grand word fraternal may be overlooked, or at least not measured as their merits deserve. It should not be forgotten that in the fraternal character lies the possibility of the society's endurance and highest benefits. If the organization be regarded merely as a business affair, it is robbed of its life, its soul, its essence, and its duration is imperiled. To discharge its business functions there is much effort required and much labor to be accomplished. To insure the discharge of this branch of the society's work there must be the consciousness of well doing to sustain endeavor; there must be the fraternal effluvia to fire the zeal—in short, there must be love to lighten labor. Such being the effect of the true fraternal feeling upon the perpetuity of the business benefits of the Order, it is the grandest charm of the requirement that the fraternal features have also a reflex action, and while they support the society's noble work, they also benefit, elevate and ennoble all included in the membership.

Those who join and go forward with the work of a fraternal society in the true spirit should be encouraged by the consciousness that they are doing a noble work for humanity. No one who has made a study of the effects of membership upon those in his Lodge can have failed to notice how in many cases intelligence has been quickened, moral sense stimulated, self-respect advanced, and in short, all the qualities which go to make up honorable manhood and citizenship promoted. The societies have received many a man of careless behavior, thoughtless action, narrow mind, full perhaps of impulses, prejudices and many forms of coarseness, and have in a few years wrought such a transformation in his behavior and character that he has become thoughtful, gentle, companionable, and in every way an improved man. This is a noble work, and it should give new zeal and courage to all who are engaged in fraternal society work. Who would not give the time and effort needed for the correct discharge of his duty as a Lodge officer, if he should think of the good he is doing in this way for his fellow men whom he calls by the fraternal name?

The spirit of Cain which repudiated fraternal duty when he voiced those hateful words, "Am I my brother's keeper?" should have no echo in this stage of the world's advancement. We are our brothers' keepers. We owe them our protection, our kindly interest, our devoted effort for their elevation and advancement. The man who labors for his brother through the channel of a good fraternal society is entitled to general regard as a benefactor. The society does an educational, a moral and in some sense a religious work, and to labor zealously and intelligently therein is to supplement the excellent efforts of church and school for the elevation of humanity.

Therefore let us all cling to the fraternal features of our societies and promote their salutary action. Let the forms which are found to be of such value as business enterprises be hallowed and fired by the soul of fraternity. Let the warm current of brotherly love vivify and give new aim to official work. Let the noble work be done for the helpless as before, but let this effort for the future be attended by a zeal for that which is to be realized in the present—the ennobling of mankind, that our homes may be filled with new joys now and with comforts hereafter.

Notwithstanding Quaker City Lodge recently passed a resolution to allow smoking during the sessions, and that it was understood that the Entertainment Committee would provide the cigars, there were no Lodge cigars on Wednesday night, and none of the committee were present. There were about thirty members on deck, and about a half dozen had cigars of their own. These puffed away, and all the others could do was to inhale the smoke second-hand, and as the cigars were of different qualities, good and bad, smoke ran in strata, much to the perplexity of the olfactory senses of the deputy smokers. By holding their breath when a bad stratum came, and taking a full inhalation when there was a good one, the members, however, did very well. P. M. W. James was so grateful that he offered a resolution of thanks to the smokers for the gratification they afforded their unfortunate colleagues. It passed.—Philadelphia World.

San Francisco Free Public Library.

The fourth annual report of the Board of Trustees of the San Francisco Free Public Library to the Board of Supervisors has been received and is replete with information and statistics concerning this great public educator. The financial management of the Library has been good considering its resources. Including the balance on hand at the beginning of the last fiscal year, the receipts for the year closed were $32,445.47, and the expenditure $28,550.31, leaving a balance on hand of $3,895.16. Of the expenses, $6,982.03 were spent for new books, $3,068.54 for binding, $11,224 for salaries, $2,600 for hall rent, and $1,138.12 for insurance.

The Secretary, Mr. Henry Marshall, says: "Running expenses have been very economical, but the Library is now just beginning to feel the loss of books worn out by use, which will now probably go on at the rate of at least 1000 volumes a year.

The total number of bound volumes in the Library to date of report was 45,004. The number of persons holding borrowers' cards was 17,838. The total circulation for the year was 320,899, of which 198,765 books were used outside of the Library and 122,134 inside. Of these the proportion of fiction was almost exactly 60 per cent of all the reading done. For the future it is proposed not to replace the books of a certain number of the more sensational novel writers, and not to buy their new ones if any appear.

From other portions of the report, we take the following notes of interest by the Librarian, Mr. Fred. B. Perkins, "roughly speaking, the natural life of an actively used popular library book is not much more than two years."

From a table of comparisons with other public libraries, judging from the number of volumes circulated for each one lost, "it seems that the citizens of San Francisco can be trusted with library books 24 times as safely as Philadelphians, 4½ times as safely as Chicago people, 3½ times as safely as those of Providence, but only about one-half as safely as Bostonians. This superiority in Boston is not moral, but is the result of a practice which would give equal if not greater security here, namely, the testing from day to day of such guarantees as seem to require it, by the police officers on their beats—a process very easily performed through the chief's office. The high rate of losses in the Philadelphia Mercantile Library may be due to the fact that members are allowed access to the shelves."

"Notwithstanding the insufficiency of the city appropriation, the number of additions to the Library is not insignificant. Among these, special notice is due to the liberality of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Williamson, U. S. A., who gave to the Library a valuable collection of over 850 scientific and military publications; of Mr. John S. Hittell, who, on the eve of a journey to Europe, gave 247 books and pamphlets of various kinds; and of Mr. John H. Carmany, who gave 281 publications, including a number of volumes of San Francisco business periodicals of special value as local history.

"The yearly sums allotted by the city government ($20,000) are quite inadequate. Such small allowances for the principal object of the Library cripple the usefulness of the Institution, place it in a false position towards the public, and render its immediate managers liable to be blamed for disappointments and dissatisfactions which are not their fault. We have constant applications for new and useful books which we are unable to supply for want of funds. No Library which responds to the public demand with such frequent refusals can continue at its proper standard of popularity or usefulness.

"It is the appropriate duty of the Chief Librarian to prepare and execute plans for improving the Library, for making it more accessible and more useful. The present tendency of the best public libraries in the country is to co-operate systematically with the public schools, by arranging regular courses of illustrative and additional reading and study for pupils and for teachers also. Much has already been done in more than one of our library cities in this direction. It only needs the requisite work to accomplish the like in San Francisco. Mr. A. J. Moulder, our accomplished Superintendent of Public Schools, could with certainty be depended on to promote such action, and his former connection with this Library renders him peculiarly competent to do so. Other friends of education would gladly assist. At present, however, the Chief Librarian of this Library is obliged to do about all that is done in cataloguing new books, recataloguing old ones, and preparing and copying lists of all kinds, besides some other details. The time and strength expended in this way ought to be better employed.

"The recommendations which were made in my report last year without result, are respectfully repeated, viz.:

"That provision be made to accommodate the natural growth of the Library; for a proper classification of readers and students; for suitable premises for work rooms; and for establishing the Library, now worth something like $50,000, somewhere where it will not be one of the most hazardous fire risks in the city.

"These recommendations do not call for any increase in the salary roll of the Library. They are directly and exclusively in the interest and for the advantage of the citizens of San Francisco, who are using this Library to the number of a thousand a day. No hesitation is therefore felt in urging or repeating them. For the sake not only of the Library itself, but of the city and of all its inhabitants, it is earnestly to be desired that the crippling and inadequate scale of support allowed the Library for the year now closing and for that now beginning shall in future be replaced by a more liberal policy."

We would suggest that if the Supreme Lodge wishes Lodges and members of the Order generally to purchase and study its published documents, that it make them as cheap as possible.

The Fireside.

An Incomplete Revelation.

While Quaker folks were Quakers still, some fifty years ago, When coats were drab and gowns were plain, and speech was staid and slow;
Before Dame Fashion dared suggest a single friz or curl,
There dwelt, 'mid Penfield's peaceful shades, an old-time Quaker girl.

Ruth Wilson's garb was of her sect, devoid of furbelows;
She spoke rebuke to vanity, from bonnet to her toes:
Sweet red-bird was she, all disguised in feathers of dove,
With dainty foot and perfect form, and eyes that dreamt of love.

Sylvanus Moore, a bachelor of forty years or so,
A quaintly pious, weazened soul, with beard and hair of tow,
And queer thin legs and shuffling walk, and drawing
nasal tone,
Was prompted by the Spirit to make this maid his own.

He knew it was the Spirit, for he felt it in his breast,
As oft before in meeting time;—and sure of his request, Procured the permit in due form. On Fourth-day of that week
He let Ruth know the message true that he was moved to speak:

"Ruth, it has been revealed to me that thee and I shall wed;
I have spoken to the meeting, and the members all have said
That our union seems a righteous one, which they will not gainsay,
So if convenient to thy views, I'll wed thee next Third-day."

The cool possession of herself by friend Sylvanus
Moore Aroused her hot resentment, which by effort she forbore,
(She knew he was a goodly man, of simple, childlike mind)—
And checked the word "Impertinence!" and answered him in kind:—

"Sylvanus Moore, do thee go home, and wait until I see
The fact that I must be thy wife revealed unto me."
And thus she left him there alone, at will to ruminate,
Sore puzzled at the mysteries of Love, Freewill and Fate.

Giving and Receiving.

The fiery crimson of the stormy November sunset was staining all the hills with its lurid glare; the wind, murmuring restlessly among the dead leaves that lay heaped over the wood paths, seemed to moan with almost human voice; but the autumnal melancholy without only served to brighten the cheerfulness of the roaring wood fire, whose ruddy glow danced and quivered over the rough rafters of Farmer Woodbridge's spacious old kitchen, sparkling on the polished service of platter, and glimmering and shedding a long stream of radiance through the uncurtained windows out upon the darkened road.

"Yes, as I was sayin' afore," observed the old farmer, rubbing his toil-hardened hands together and gazing thoughtfully into the fire,
"It's been a capital harvest this year. I would ask for no better. So, wife, you just pick out some of them yaller pippin apples and put 'em into Jessie's basket when she calls arter it."

"Won't the little red ones do as well? I calculate to keep them pippins for market.
Squire Benson says they are worth"—

"I don't keer what they're worth," interrupted the farmer, as his helpmate, a spare, angular woman, with a face plowed with innumerable lines of care, fingered the yellow-cheeked apples dubiously. "I tell you what it is, Keturah, folks never lost any thing by doing a kind thing. I never could make you believe that, unless the pay came right in in hard cash.
Now, here's Jessie Morton, as likely a young gal as ever breathed, teaching school day in and day out, and her marm sewin' to hum, earnin' a livin' by the hardest work—born ladies, both on 'em. Don't you s'pose these apples 'll be worth more to them, if you give 'em with a kind word, than they would be to that pesky tight-fisted agent up to Hardwiche Hall, if he gave a dollar a bushel?"

"Charity begins to hum," said Keturah, jerking out the supper table, with an odd twist of the face. "Not but what Jessie's well enough, but you'd a plaguy sight better be scratchin' your pennies together to pay up that mortgage, if you don't want the Hardwiche agent foreclosing on you. And them pippins is just as good as so much money. There may be, anyhow, in the basket—one of your investments,
I guess."

"One of my investments, then, if you like to call it so, Keturah," said the farmer with a good-humored laugh, banishing the annoying expression which had overspread his face when she alluded to the mortgage. "Come 'long in, Jessie, my gal," he added cheerfully, as a light touch sounded on the door-latch. "Here's the basket all right, and some of them golden pippins tucked into it. May be they'll tempt your mother's appetite."

Jessie Morton was a slender, graceful girl, of about seventeen, with satin-smooth bands of chestnut hair, parted above a low, sunny forehead; large liquid eyes, and cheeks which farmer Woodbridge always declared "set him to thinking of them velvet Jarsey peaches that grew on the tree down on the south medder." She took up the basket with a graceful smile, that went to the flinty heart of Mrs. Keturah.

"O, Mr. Woodbridge, how kind you always are to us! If I were only rich; if I only could make some return!"

"Don't you say a word about that are," said the farmer, rubbing his nose very hard; "just you run home as fast as ever you can, for it is getting most dark, and the November wind ain't no ways healthy as I ever heard on. And I say, Jessie, if it rains to-morrow so you can't get to school handy, just you stop here, and I'll give you a lift in my waggin."

"Dear old Mr. Woodbridge," soliloquized Jessie Morton to herself, as her light steps pattered along on the fallen leaves; "how many, many times I have had cause to thank his generous heart. And to think that he should be so distressed about the mortgage by the agent at Hardwiche Hall!"

She paused a moment to look up to where the stately roofs and gables of the hall rose darkly outlined against the crimson sky. On a commanding height, and nearly hidden in trees, many of which still retained their brilliant autumn foliage, it seemed almost like an old baro-nic castle.

"There it stands," she mused, "shut up and silent, year after year; its magnificent rooms untenanted, the flowers blossoming ungen-tled in its conservatories. Since Mrs. Hardwiche died—twenty years since, mamma says—the family have been away, and now the only surviving heir is traveling, no one knows where.
I wonder if he knows how grasping and cruel his agent is? Oh, dear," she added softly, "money does not always come where it is most needed. If I were the mistress of Hardwiche Hall!"

She started with a light scream, the next instant, as a tall figure rose up from a mossy border by the roadside, directly in front of her.

"Pardon me," said a voice, that instantly reassured her, for it was too gentle to come from any but a gentleman, "but I am not certain but I have lost my way. Is this the Eden road?
I was waiting for some one to direct me."

"This is the Eden road," said Jessie, all unconscious that the last gleams of the fading sunset were lightening up her face with almost angelic beauty as she stood there among the fallen leaves.

"And can you tell me the shortest footpath to Hardwiche Hall? I have not been in this neighborhood since I was a child, and I am completely at fault."

Jessie hesitated a moment. "I could show you better than tell you, for it is a rather complicated road," she said, "and if you will accept my services as guide, it will not be much out of my way."

"I shall feel very much honored," said the stranger. "Meanwhile let me carry your basket."

It was a wild and lovely walk, winding among moss-garlanded trees and hollows, sweet with the aromatic incense of dying leaves. Jessie could not help admiring the chivalric manners and chivalric courtesy of her companion, and he was pleased with the blooming loveliness and girlish dignity of the young guide. A few adroit questions respecting Hardwiche Hall and its neighborhood sufficed to draw forth a spirited abstract of the Hardwiche agent, and the impositions he was wont to practice upon the tenants and neighbors, as well as an arch description of most of the "characters" thereabouts. Then he continued to learn all about Jessie's little school, and her ailing mother, and he smiled to himself in the twilight to observe the pride of her mein when she alluded to the high position from which unforeseen reverses had compelled her mother to descend.

"There," she said, suddenly pausing with a feeling as if she had been almost too communicative; "if we could only cross yonder lawn;—the gates are close by, but we shall have to go a quarter of a mile around."

"Why?" asked the stranger.

"Mr. Talcott will not allow travelers to cross here; he says it is private property."

"I fancy I shall dare Mr. Talcott's wrath," said the gentleman laughing, as he pushed open the wire gate that defended the forbidden space.
"It is perfectly absurd to make people go a quarter of a mile out of their way for a mere whim."

They had scarcely entered the inclosure,
when they met an unlooked-for obstacle—Talcott himself, who was prowling over the grounds on the qui vive for trespassers.

"Hello, there!" growled he: "just turn back, if you please. This isn't the public thoroughfare."

The stranger held Jessie's arm under his own a little tighter, as if to repress her evident inclination to "beat a retreat." He was disposed to maintain his position.

"I don't see any reasonable cause why we should not go ahead," he said, pertinaciously.
"There is a path here, and I suppose it was made to walk on."

"Not for you," said the agent, contemptuously; "so go back with you as fast as you can!"

"Is it possible that people are made to travel a circuitous and unpleasant route for no other reason than your caprice, sir?" asked the gentleman, looking down upon the little man from the altitude of his six feet with a kind of laughing scorn. "Did it ever occur to you, my friend, that others have rights and conveniences as well as yourself?"

"Can't help their rights; nothing to me," snarled the agent, planting himself obsti-nately in the path. "I forbid all passing here!"

"But I suppose Everard Hardwiche may have the privilege of crossing his own land," persisted the stranger, still preserving the half-contemptuous smile that had from the beginning made the agent so uncomfortable.

Talcott grew not exactly pale but yellow with consternation.

"Mr. Hardwiche, sir, I did not—we did not expect"—

"No, I know you didn't, my good man. Be so kind as to step aside and allow me to pass with the lady. Miss Jessie, don't forget that I need your services a few moments yet. Nay, do not shrink away from me. Are we not to be very good friends?"

"The prettiest girl I ever saw in my life," was his internal comment as he at length parted from her at the little gate, where burning bushes and dark-green ivy were trained together with all a woman's taste.

The Christmas snow lay white and deep on the farm house eaves; the Christmas logs crackled on the hearth where Mr. Woodbridge still gazed dreamily into the glowing cinders, and Mrs. Keturah's knitting-needles clicked with electric speed.

"That mortgage bothers me—it bothers me," he murmured almost plaintively. "Well, I s'pose it ain't no use frettin'; but I thought to live and die in the old place my father did before me. The Lord's will be done, though.
Somehow things ain't prospering with me; I don't seem to get along."

"You ha' got along well enough, I guess," responded Keturah, who belonged to that class of people known as Job's comforters, "if you'd only looked after your p's and q's as I told you.
You always was too free-handed, and now you see what it's bro't ye too."

"Well, well, Keturah, we never did think alike on some things," returned the old man.
"Let's talk about a pleasant subject. What do you think about our schoolmarm's marrying young Mr. Hardwiche to-morrow? Didn't I always tell you that Jessie Morton was born to be a lady? I may be unlucky myself, but anyhow, I'm glad to hear of little Jessie's luck."

"You'd a good deal better keep your sympathy for yourself," growled Keturah. "What's other folks' luck to you, I'd like to know?
There's some one knocking at the door; see who 'tis!"

It was a little note, brought by one of the schoolboys under Jessie's care. "Where's my glasses? I can't see as I could once. Shove the candle this way, will you, Keturah?"
And fitting his brass-bowed spectacles upon his nose, the old man unfolded the note, and read, in Jessie's delicate chirography:

"Do not let that mortgage disturb your Christmas Day to-morrow, dear Father Woodbridge. It will never haunt your hearthstone again. Mr. Hardwiche will send you the papers soon to destroy. I have not forgotten those 'golden pippins,' nor all the other kindnesses."

"Aha, wife!" said the old man smiling, and trying to brush away unseen the big tears that would come; "what do you think of my investments now?"

Keturah's reply was neither elegant nor strictly speaking grammatical, but it was significant. She said, simply: "Well, I never."

"Her Serene Little Highness."

In a letter from Robert J. Burdette, at Nantucket, declining an invitation to lecture at Chautauqua, is simply told the touching story of the favorite humorist's home-life and of his devotion to his wife, who had inspired all his work, and by her inspiration has made him world-renowned: "Seriously, and in all 'truth and soberness,' I can not come.
Mrs. Burdette's health—if the poor little sufferer's combination of aches and pains and helplessness may be designated by such a sarcastic appellation—has been steadily failing all winter, and we have come down to this sea-girt island to see if old ocean and its breezes may do what the doctors and mountains and prairies have failed to do. And here we are waiting, 'her little serene highness' in utter helplessness, unable to stand alone.
For years she has been unable to walk. Her helpless hands are folded in her lap. She must be dressed, carried about, cared for like a little baby, suffering countless pains and aches day and night, and I can not leave her even for a few days. No one at Chautauqua will feel the disappointment as we do, for we had planned to go there together. If she should go with me, I would be glad enough to creep to Chautauqua on my knees. Her life has been a fountain of strength to me. In her long years I have never seen the look of pain out of her eyes, and for more than half so long I have seen her sitting in patient helplessness, and I have never heard a complaining murmur from her lips, while she has served as those who stand and wait, never questioning and never doubting the wisdom and goodness of the Father whose hand has been laid upon her so heavily. The beautiful patience of her life has been a constant rebuke to my own impatience, and her sufferings I have seen and known, and believed the 'love that knows no fear' and the faith that 'knows no doubt.'"

Fashion Notes.

THE newest sweepers for short skirts are of embroidered edging, and are very scant.

CARRAGE bows—otherwise rosettes—of velvet ribbon trim autumn bonnets, hats and dresses.

VENETIAN glass beads of the richest color ing are worn for necklaces, three or four rows being used.

VANDYKED flounces bound with velvet or with satin ribbon are used to trim the skirts of new woolen and silk dresses.

LOOSE, pointed jackets and plaited blouse bodies will be worn in wool dresses made as they were during the summer.

A NEW fringe, intended especially to trim brocaded goods, is of narrow ribbon velvet, knotted together, to make a checkered heading.

PLAID or striped skirts, with tunics to match, and a tailor-made coat of cloth or a woven Jersey, will be the regulation dress for school-girls this winter.

HANDKERCHIEFS, with a light vine of embroidery inside the narrow hem, are more fashionable than those with lace borders. They are of sheer linen cambric.

NATTY cutaway jackets, with checked waistcoats, are worn with plain skirts of dark wool, with a simple hem, and gathered into the waistband or plaited alike all around.

WILD-ROSE pink will be a fashionable color for the thick corded silk gowns worn as dinner and reception dresses this winter, and by the bridemaids at October weddings.

NEW ball dresses are of colored tulle, spotted with chenille. They are draped over satin of the same color, and have a low, sleeveless bodice, worn with a fichu of the folded tulle.

ANNE of Austria flower-belts are worn by young Parisian ladies, with white evening dresses. They are but a cording of the very smallest ostrich feathers fastened by a large rose.

VERY deep linen collars and cuffs are to be the fashion if certain leaders can manage it, but nothing could be more opposed to the ideas of the aesthetic school, which fully appreciates the charm of lace.

SERAP chemisettes, made with very full gathers or close platings, fill up the front of cashmere dresses in square plastron shape, just below the neck, or they extend to the point of the dress below the waist.

THE adjustable train, which so frequently would not adjust, is replaced this winter by a straight, flowing train of velvet attached to a very wide pointed girdle of the same material.
This is fastened to the sides of the underskirt, and transforms a short frock into a dinner dress.

THE French fancy for evening dress for young girls is to combine very dark and very light colors. The exquisite combination of seal-brown and blue is one of the favorites; but very dark purple and a soft yellow are also much liked.
The light color is usually represented in silk,
the dark in velvet.

THE fur-lined circulars are of sable this year, rather than of squirrel, and range in price from $85 to $200. Those which cost the latter sum are fringed with tips. A cloak of shaved Astrakhan with a sable border is a pretty novelty, which has the appearance of watered material,
and is very light.

THE brocades of colored velvet on a white satin ground are used to form the underskirts of evening dresses, which have trains and waists of plain satin. The artistic effect is just as valuable, and no more, than if the stuff were printed cotton, except that its weight gives it a certain richness.

THE woolen bonnet, in various shapes, will be much worn this season. One form of it is made of the same braid which is used for embroidery, and is shown in all the dark colors to match suits. Another is of embroidery worked, arranged in stripes or checks, and this style a naughty Boston milliner calls the lamp-mat bonnet.

A LEADING feature of the fashions of the season, as shown at the October openings, is that of combination costumes. Scarcely a dress among all those made by the great French dress-makers—Worth, Pingat, Felix, and the rest—is of a single fabric, the rule being the combination of brocade or fancy dress goods with plain material to match. This is the case especially with the fine woollens, the use of which is constantly increasing, and which will this winter be worn for everything except elegant reception toilets.

WIDE braid in gilt, black and silver is much used for dress trimmings. When the first and last are employed, they are softened in effect by being half hidden; they peep from beneath twisted loops of cord connecting buttons on the front of the waist, or across a slashing; they are twisted with strands of col r into a cord for decoration, or a narrow edge just shows itself above a collar or below a cuff; but the back braid is unashamed, and so many yards of it are sometimes employed that it adds a third to the weight of a dress.

ONE of the prettiest new wraps, to be made en suite or of silk, has the short shoulder seam and the sleeve rounded from it to the front in dolman shape, while the one center seam fits the back. The sleeve may be laid in tiny plaits on the top of the arm, nearly to the elbow, or it may be a half coat sleeve, or it may be an angel sleeve with the tight sleeve under.
The back is in tabs from below the waistline, where it is filled in with platings of the material, silk or satin. Four yards of silk are required for the jacket, or one and one-quarter of wide cloth.

Our Cable Railways.

One of the regular "sights" of San Francisco, to the tourist or visitor, is its cable railroad system, now illustrated by numerous lines in constant operation. The latest of these, and by streets through which a cable road runs has the same appearance as in the case of a horse car line, except that between each pair of tracks is a flat, narrow piece of iron, with a three-quarter inch opening in its center, running the length of the road, parallel with the dummy, by which the car and cable may be connected or disconnected at will by the engineer, or dummy-man, who controls the apparatus by means of suitable levers. Various forms of this grip are used on our local roads, and several other forms have been patented which engine house of the Market street road is at Valencia street. The engines run three wire ropes, 1½ inch in diameter. The main or Market street cable is 24,125 feet long; the Valencia street is 20,194; and the Haight street 20,002 feet long. The McAllister street cable, from the engine house at Masonic avenue to Market street, is 20,489 feet, and from the engine house to the western terminus at Fulton and Stanyan streets, 6,000 feet. A spare pair of engines is kept in case of breakdown. Besides these cables there are two horse-car branches and one steam dummy branch to the road.

In building the road, the first thing done was to excavate places every nine feet, in which was constructed a concrete pier sixteen inches thick by five feet long crosswise the track, on which the main structure stands. There are altogether some 9,000 of these piers, the foundations of which are 10 feet below the rails. For a number of blocks at the lower end of Market street the street is "made ground;" that is, it has been filled in on to the bay mud. In order to get a solid foundation, piles had to be driven to support these piers, so all tendency to settle was avoided. The piers being built and the trench dug, a section of rail and slot-iron was put in place on the piers, and concrete filled in, filling the space between the rails and slot iron, and forming a support for the iron-work. All the metal work is steel—rails, slot iron, car trucks, etc. In building this road, over 40,000 barrels of Portland cement were used for the concrete. There were 25,000 ribs or yokes used, also. Of the steel channel-rail that forms the slot, about 1,000 tons were consumed.

The cars run about eight miles an hour. It is a mistaken idea that these cars can run no slower than the cable. By reducing the grip pressure, by means of the lever, the cable slips along and the car does not move so rapidly; in fact, it may be slowed to a snail's pace, almost, while waiting for a team to get out of the way; and the starting-up is so gradual that no jerk is felt. The track brakes are so powerful that a car weighing 10,000 pounds, and loaded too, can be stopped in ten feet, while running eight miles an hour.

In the issue of the Mining and Scientific Press of October 27th may be found a full and detailed description of the construction and op-

One of the engravings on this page gives a view of the cars at the ferry landing, foot of Market street, where one car is shown on the turn-table. Another engraving shows how the road-bed is made. The surface of the

This endless rope is kept in constant motion by means of an engine at one end or the center of the road, the rope passing around suitable driving pulleys rotated by the engine. Different methods are adopted to prevent the rope from slipping on these drivers. At each end of the road is a large pulley, half around which the rope passes, so as to go from one tube to the other. A gripping arrangement is mounted on the car or changes. The rope is run at a speed of from five to eight miles per hour, and the cars run at equal speed on a level or up or down the hills. Powerful brakes, both on the wheels and track, control the car when the cable is released.

Such are the general principles of the cable railroad system. Of course there are various details on each road, arranged to suit the special requirements or to carry out the improvements made by the constructing engineers. The

They cost less to run than horse roads, and go equally fast on the level, or up or down hill. They are, moreover, profitable to the owners. There are five cable roads in this city, and Chicago, New York and London having adopted the system it is now rapidly being introduced in other places.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

Evening Star, No. 28, D. of H

This young Subordinate will remove to the new hall, 18½ Eddy street. Their first meeting night there will be on Thursday evening, November 15th. There are now forty-five members, several applications, and a number of the members have made application for the insurance under the beneficiary law.

Unity, No. 27.

In a recent number of the WATCHMAN we saw evidences of a "boom" in our City Lodges. A practical demonstration of this season of increase was demonstrated in Unity, No. 27, on Tuesday evening, 6th inst. Several applications were received, and 10 candidates were given the J. W. Degree. It has been a particular desire in this Lodge to give the work in a correct and impressive manner. On this occasion it may not be out of place to compliment all the officers, as each one from the M. W., Bro. Block, to the Chorister, Bro. Irying, did the work as well as can be done in any Lodge in this city. As there has been some criticism in the past when a large number were initiated at one time, we herewith give the occupation and average age of the 10 candidates, viz.: average age, 30 years and 9 months; one engineer; one merchant; two carpenters; one laborer; one blacksmith; one grocer; one book keeper; one plumber; one superintendent. By common agreement entered into by a large number of the members of this Lodge, each one is pledged to bring a candidate to receive the degrees during this term. This was the first installment under and by virtue of this contract. There was a good attendance, and an evident satisfaction among the members present. This Lodge pays sick benefits of $10 per week, and these stipends are helping a number of worthy Workmen who are unable, through sickness or accident, to attend to their respective avocations at present. Apropos to their prosperity, they propose to celebrate on their next quarterly meeting, and will give a social ball and banquet at B'nai B'rith Hall, on Tuesday evening, December 11th. It is expected, judging from their past efforts, that this will be a grand affair.

Quarterly Reception of Valley, No. 30.

As announced in a former issue of the WATCHMAN, it had become a practice of Valley, No. 30, to give a reception quarterly. Their last social was held in Dashaway Hall, and proved a very enjoyable affair. The hall was well filled with a select audience, who had the pleasure of listening to a choice literary programme, and also join in the social festivities and dance, and who pronounced it one of the best arranged receptions of the year. A very efficient committee, of which W. H. Barnes, P. G. M. W., was Chairman, are deserving of especial mention.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by Valley Lodge, on the 9th inst:

Resolved, That the thanks of the officers and members of Valley Lodge, No. 30, A. O. U. W., are due and hereby unanimously tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Clark, Miss Ella Lask, Miss Lillian Reynolds, Miss Macbeth, Samuel Booth, Henry Aveling and Master John Giusti, for their valuable and kindly assistance at our reception on the evening of October 31, 1883.

Spartan, No. 3.

A recent visit to this Lodge found affairs in a progressive condition. Five petitions for membership were received in one evening, and the J. W. Degree conferred. On good authority it is stated that the membership of this Lodge will overrun the 200 mark before spring.

Friendship, No. 179.

There was a time in the history of our Order when a number of our leading Workmen conscientiously opposed the formation of Friendship, No. 179. It was in number the 20th of our city Lodges, and it seemed a hazardous undertaking to organize this Lodge with a small charter list. Whatever may have been the views at that time, there can hardly be but one opinion now. This subordinate has a membership of over 150, and at the present rate of increase she will soon reach the 200 mark, counting among her members a good class of men, many of whom are among our leading citizens. At their last meeting, although it was a gloomy night, there was a good attendance. Several applications were received, and the J. W. Degree was conferred on one candidate. There is one feature of this Lodge that is worthy of mention. Since their organization they have always selected good officers, and their present staff have certainly maintained their former reputation. There is a good deal of friendly feeling shown among their members, and especial courtesy shown to visitors. In this respect, their Lodge is rightly named. As an evidence of their prosperity, on this evening three petitions were received, and on their next meeting night the J. W. Degree will be conferred upon three candidates, and the M. W. Degree on three other candidates.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Brooklyn, No. 8.

An open meeting which had been announced for this Lodge for Thursday evening, the 1st inst., was, by some misunderstanding among the members as to time, not largely attended. Among those who were invited from other Lodges and were present were Past Grand Master Jordan, Past Master Wood, of California Lodge, No. 1, and the WATCHMAN representative, all of whom made brief addresses, preceded and followed by Deputy Grand Recorder Watson, of this Lodge. After this, an adjournment was had to the supper table, where it was found that the ladies present had provided a repast that spoke volumes for what the absent members missed. This was done justice to, and good-nights were then said all around.

Oak Leaf, No. 35.

A visit to this thrifty Lodge across the bay last Monday evening found every thing moving along in good form. Oak Leaf has a membership whose personnel, from an intellectual standpoint, ranks high among all the Oakland Lodges. This was evidenced in an impromptu debate which was sprung, under Good of the Order, by ex-Mayor Robinson, P. M. W., on the subject of Industrial Education, which is attracting a good deal of attention of late in all parts of the country. Spirited remarks were made by Past Masters Osborne, Mackie and others, in which considerable originality of ideas was shadowed forth. The general opinion seemed to be that the public schools were already attempting too much, and the parents too little. Interesting remarks were also made, anent the general welfare of the Order, by Past Supreme Representative Robinson, of Nevada, who was sojourning in Oakland briefly on business, and took the occasion to pay Oak Leaf a pleasant fraternal visit.

Vesper, No. 62.

In our last issue we gave a brief report of the fifth anniversary entertainment of this Lodge, on the 19th ult., but since that we have found a report of considerably more completeness in the Livermore Herald, which we herewith append:

The entertainment given by this society was a success in every respect. The hall was handsomely decorated, the name of the Lodge, "Vesper," and the word "Welcome" being noticeable, in elegant and chaste letters. The music was of a high order.

The Soldier's Farewell, by Kinkel, was sung in excellent taste; Share, as first tenor, reached the high notes with apparent ease, without any of that strain of voice commonly heard, which mars the delicate sentiment of the piece. Carleton, as basso, gave a depth and solemnity to the music which somehow, taken in connection with the soldier's profession, reminded his hearers of the thunder of artillery and charging squadrons. Lloyd, though not in as good tune as usual, made the song of Olivia a marked success. Good-Bye, Sweetheart, Good-Bye, was rendered in a rich, manly voice by E. L. Benjamin. His voice is particularly mellow, ranging from B flat below to two octaves and a half above, with all ease, the changes from the lower or chest register to the middle and upper being easily accomplished. He was of course called out again, and sang the Diva in good style. The violin solo, by Sigmund Beal, was the feature of the evening. He is not yet twenty-one, and is self-taught, never having had the advantage of proficient teachers, yet he is probably the best master of the violin on the Coast. He is intending to visit Europe, to have the benefit of the best trainers there. With good training and practice, he will doubtless achieve a world-wide reputation. All lovers of a voice like that which Milton ascribes to Satan when he aroused the angels after their descent into the infernal regions, when "he called so loud that all the hollow depths of hell resounded," had their fill, for Carleton's voice is phenomenal in that respect. It is much to be regretted that his modesty has prevented him from study for the stage, for only once in a lifetime is such a voice heard. His Drink, Drink, Drink, was the embodiment of manly power. Of course the audience would not let him off with one song, but persisted in calling until he made his appearance again. The people of Livermore are under many obligations to the A. O. U. W. for such an entertainment, which will inevitably educate our musical population up to a higher standard than country towns usually attain. The addresses by District Deputy I. Horton, the Hon. J. R. Palmer and Master Workman G. B. Shearer, were short, fitting and to the point—models worthy of imitation. The management was without a discord. After the musical exercises were over, the votaries of the light fantastic, etc., indulged in a few hours of amusement, all going away satisfied.

NAPA COUNTY.

Fortuna, No. 18.

An organization to be known as "The Upchurch Association of Past Master Workmen of Napa District, A. O. U. W.," was instituted by the Past Masters of Fortuna Lodge, on the evening of the 27th ult., the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the Order. It is intended that the association will include all the Past Masters of Napa County. Its objects are mutual improvement, and the devising of means to keep aglow A. O. U. W. matters in their county. It is considered to be a novel yet laudable project, and we hope it may meet with the success that it merits. On this occasion only Past Masters of Fortuna were present, owing probably to the inclemency of the weather. Those present were: J. Walter Ward, Jr., C. R. Gritman, J. W. Hostetler, Wm. West, Geo. R. Walden, E. S. Gridley and T. N. Mount. The list of the Past Masters of the Napa Lodge also includes the names of A. D. Stockford, of Vallejo; C. B. Stone, of San Francisco; and Henry Brown, W. F. Henning and B. E. Hunt, of Napa. C. R. Gritman was chosen President; J. Walter Ward, Jr., Vice-President, and T. N. Mount, Secretary. These officers, and Dr. J. W. Hostetler, were appointed a committee to draw up rules for the government of the association. They then adjourned to meet December 22d, the sixth anniversary of the institution of Fortuna.

SONOMA COUNTY.

Healdsburg, No. 31.

From the Russian River Flag of recent date we take the following concerning Major Dane's lecture there: "The eloquent Major Dane gave his second lecture under the auspices of Healdsburg Lodge, A. O. U. W., to a large audience in this city. His splendid subject, 'Sights and Scenes in London,' gave much satisfaction. He might come four times a year and obtain a fine audience each time. The Workmen placed the admission at the low figure of 25 cents, so that all could attend, and even at that rate, cleared over $20 for the Lodge Fund, which has been drawn upon so copiously lately for the sick and needy."

A. O. U. W. Chitchat.

District Deputy Danforth will hold one of those profitable District Meetings of the Lodges under his Jurisdiction, at Platt's Hall, November 29th.

A boom seems to have been started in all the Workman Lodges in this city, and it promises to assume a large increase in our membership.

District Deputy Marsh writes from Placerville, El Dorado County, that a Degree of Honor Lodge is being talked of there, to be under the guidance of El Dorado, No. 118.

Concerning the projected Lodge at Hueneme, Ventura County, District Deputy Witherill writes: "Our Medical Examiner, Dr. Oliver, says that these men (15) are the finest lot of men he ever examined."

The charter plate of the A. O. U. W. which is acknowledged by all secret society men to be the handsomest charter issued by any Order, was designed by Past Supreme Master Workman J. M. McNair, the present Grand Recorder of Pennsylvania.

The following from A. J. Pedlar, Recorder of Yosemite Lodge, No. 171, of Fresno, has the true ring: "We are counting on a grand good time on November 19, when G. M. W., Rogers is to be with us. As the head of our great and good Order, we feel like giving him a royal welcome."

How beautiful our lives would soon grow, if we carried always with us, and put into practice, the lessons we learn by experience! We look back at the end of the year and see many things that cause regret, but instead of leaving them behind, we go on repeating the same follies and errors in the new year. A little heroic decision would enable us to rise every day on mistakes of yesterday.

Brother T. G. Linton, member of Golden Gate, No. 8, is now residing at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory. While a resident of this city, by his urbane manner and gentlemanly deportment he made many friends. He was Overseer of his Lodge of Workmen, and would have been elected M. W. if he had remained in the city. While here he was known to be quite proficient in the work, and it has come to our knowledge that he takes an active part in the Lodge work in Cheyenne. We take this occasion to remind our genial Brother that he will have a royal Workman's welcome whenever he visits our city.

Bro. W. Warne Wilson, Grand Recorder of Michigan, has had bad luck, in the fact that his assistant took French leave and departed for Canada, on the night of the 4th inst., carrying with him six express money packages, one registered letter and the contents of the cash drawer, amounting in all to about $250. Bro. Wilson, commenting upon this, says: "Not content with this, out of pure cussedness, he changed the combination of the safe, so that it had to be drilled open before business could be resumed on the morning of the 5th. While regretting the loss, we feel thankful that it is no worse, but we are more sorry that the rascal has destroyed our faith in human nature; and in the future, like Shylock, we shall demand in such cases the 'pound of flesh,' and take care to have it so nominated in the bond."

The Human Voice.

Its Unlimited Power—How it is Abused, and how to use it.

We willingly give place to the following interesting and common sense article from the pen of Professor G. F. Perkins, of Oakland, who is also organist of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, of this city. The article has especial value, coming from one who makes this subject a special study. We invite specialists in any field of labor, who can prepare as good original articles as this is, in the scope of their respective departments, to contribute to our columns.

Among other things, the voice, perhaps the most important gift of them all, and the least cultured, should not be forgotten. How many men are able to speak from day to day, one hour, two hours, three hours, without exhaustion and without hoarseness? But it is in the power of the vocal organs to do this. Who can define the limit of the voice of man, its compass, its depth, its power to win the affections or drive away in terror man or beast, bird, or insect?

"There's music in a mother's voice," and there's sweetness in the maiden's voice (at times), and terror in the urchin's voice as he eyes the advancing parent with strap in hand. There's sternness in the father's voice, and mirthfulness in the happy child's voice, when at play.

The voice has a power that demands attention from every living thing upon the face of the earth. We know it to be the mightiest oracle in subjection to man. Then why not take steps towards proper training of this power?

Thoughts are good upon paper, but are they not more powerful when given voice? Do we not pay more attention to what we hear and see? That which we merely see does not impress us so strongly as what we hear and see.

The ear stamps impressions upon the minds of most people more lastingly than the eye alone.

The quality of the voice, in most cases, portrays the character and general make-up of the speaker. The manner of using the voice has great influence upon not only the hearer but the owner himself. Cultivate the voice of a rough, uncouth individual, teach him to modulate his voice according to sentiment expressed, and you have done most of the work of refining him. A smooth musical voice proclaims a fine sensitive nature. A harsh voice comes from a coarse unfeeling nature.

There should be more attention given this branch of education in our public schools. The masses of teachers, as well as people, do not seem to comprehend its benefits and importance. They seem to think elocution means speaking or reciting selections of poetry or prose upon the stage, or before the "company" at home. This is a small part of the benefits derived from voice culture. It builds up a healthy and vigorous physical condition; it brings into activity every muscle of the body; it aids in free circulation of the blood; it enlarges the capacity of the lungs, which furnish the material for the voice; it is an enemy to consumption, and a course of lessons in voice culture will do more to drive away symptoms of consumption than medicines. It is often a cure for dyspepsia and liver complaint.

The principles of cultivating the singing voice are precisely the same in foundation as those of the speaking voice, the singing being a smooth, sustained voice, regulated by pitch and measured by time. The compass of either is determined only by the physical ability of the singer or speaker, the many "theories" to the contrary notwithstanding. The writer has been floundering about for years, giving money and time, endeavoring to find the "correct theory." Teachers of all grades have been consulted, at a cost of one dollar to five dollars per lesson, and still it is a mystery how so many "correct theories" failed to give the desired information.

A raft was built from the "driftwood," and material gathered by personal experience, and down the river of "free thought" it glides. It will encounter obstacles. Those upon other shaped craft will wonder how it is that such a craft stands so well, and how many it holds up; and some lazy people that did not try to get material will give it up and hoot us, but on it goes, increasing its freight. "The world is round" just the same. Just why nature made an uneducated throat, like the colored man's, so that he can sing with such power and sweetness, without any of this "culture" from our experienced builders, is not quite plain. It must be admitted that the colored people do sing with much power and melody, and they also sing words to be understood. They sing naturally. They know nothing of the "registers of the voice" (reference is made, of course, to those who have had no training).

Signor So-and-So and Madame So-and-So may warble away through the entire evening, and it matters not whether they speak a word intelligently or not so long as they hitch and click together, and Madame flounders up on "high C," and stays there long enough for Signor to flounder up to his respective stopping place, and both stop together and come out ahead of the piano; they bow to the thundering applause, and everybody "just thinks it is splendid!" Away with it! Let us have words sung, and let us have music in keeping with the words, and let us train our voices to sing with power, and melodiously. The minister from the country evidently did not appreciate the "highly cultured" singing of the city exchange when at the close of his reading the Scriptures, he said: "We will now listen to a performance from the hired quartette." It is a lamentable fact that there are too many "performances," and too little real singing.

To sing or speak, the lungs must be inflated with air; the muscles that have to do with the breathing must be strengthened and made flexible; the air must be judiciously forced through the vocal cords; the shape and position of the mouth and head have to do with the forming and quality of the tone; the flexibility of the inside of the mouth, the tongue, jaws and lips, all have to do with the articulation; and when all these work in unison, then you have good singing. "Words, words, words!" is what we want. Speak smoothly and gradually, multiply the force, measure the utterances by time, and you are singing. Throw away all exploded ideas of "registers of the voice" (they range in number according to the different theories, from one to seven in number). Don't put a clothes pin upon the nose "to locate the tone," as we are told that a professor not a hundred miles from here does to his pupils. Speak in melody; use the jaws freely; get all the muscles of the body to vibrate in harmony with each other, and articulate distinctly, and you will sing satisfactorily to yourself as well as others.

You will then sing plainly and not as though your mouth was full of mush, as too many of our highly "cultured" singers do.

Cranks.

What member of a Lodge has not met with a specimen of this class? Where is there a Lodge that can say, we do not possess one of these torments? If there be one such we tender our hearty congratulations. It appears as though these cranks charged themselves chuck full of cussedness before leaving home, that they may effervesce, sparkle and foam their contrariness in the presence of their brothers in the Lodge. They are determined to oppose every measure the majority may desire to adopt, from a pure love of opposition, and as a consequence they invariably suffer defeat. If they should, by any accident, carry their point, they become inflated and arrogant, and their presumption is so great that they take a step further, and are rewarded by being sat down upon so heavily that one might naturally suppose they were completely crushed, not to rebound, like a rubber ball, and object to the very next proposition for the good of the Order. Of course, the desire of these brothers is to make a record—to sound the clarion notes of their own melodious voices in such terrific tones that all may know they are present, and tremble. They take delight in impressing new members with their great importance and superior attainments; their manner is commanding and apt to be imperious; they speak as though their utterances should be the end of controversy, and that it must be a bold man who dare gainsay these oracles of wisdom. They consider they are saving the Order from dire ruin, and seem to believe the entire fabric would crumble to dust were it not for their support. They would be amazed should you tell them that they were destroying the harmony of the Lodge; they appear to be oblivious of doing anything but standing as champions for the right, against ignorance and corruption. We suppose they were created for some wise purpose. We will be charitable enough to think so anyhow.—Wisconsin Advocate.

The old line life insurance companies do not seem to slack up in their fierce fight upon mutual aid societies; and yet the latter are all prosperous, and increasing in numbers and strength. The truth is, that each system has its place, and there is ample room for all to thrive. We hope the time will come when there will be no strife between them.—Observer.

Why They Joined.

[Bro. J. J. TAYLOR, in the Overseer.]

A number of gentlemen of different circumstances in life, but all of them members of our Order, or other beneficial societies, happened at one time to be in company. The conversation turned upon the different societies to which they belonged. After relating their experience, each gave his reason for being a member. We commend these reasons to all thinking business men, who have not yet united with this popular movement.

Mr. A.—"I am a man of middle life and have watched the gradual growth of these protective societies, until I became thoroughly convinced that they were established upon the very best basis in the world—mutual help and mutual interest. I then united with the best one I could find, and have been even better pleased with its practical operation than I had expected. They make every man literally his own treasurer, and allow him to pay at each death, or at each sufficient number of deaths to require an assessment, the small amount necessary to pay his proportion of that benefit. Being managed in that way and by the members of the Lodge themselves, they save the risk of large amount of capital, and the enormous expenses of the army of high-salaried officers, directors and agents."

Mr. B.—"I am a poor man, while my next-door neighbor owns property to the amount of $3,000. Since I have joined this society I consider myself as well off as he. My expenses in the society are less than his taxes on his property. When we both die he leaves his family with $3,000 worth of property; I leave mine $3,000 in cash. Does this not place me and my family on equality with him and his family?"

Mr. C.—"I have noticed that but few men, even at the close of a long life, have laid up a competency for their families. Still fewer of those who die in middle life have enough to rear and educate their children. I have resolved not to trust such important interests to chance or fate. I have joined two societies which, for a light expense, will secure my wife and children against financial distress in the event of my death. I find that the small demands of the Orders do not prevent my building up my business in the least."

Mr. D.—"As you all know, I own a large estate, and on that account much surprise was expressed at my becoming a member of the first beneficial society that was established in this city. I notice that few men with extensive interests keep them clear and unencumbered. I have taken this as the best and most inexpensive means of keeping on hand at all times enough available cash to settle up my estate without the sacrifice of valuable property in the event of my unexpected death. At the same time I enjoy the social privileges of the Order, and I assist my friends and neighbors to secure the benefit of such a worthy institution to their families."

Mr. E.—"I had a friend in New York who belonged to the first institution of this kind that was established in this country. A couple of years ago he died, after having been a member ten years. I saw the benefit paid to his widow, who, with her family of children, would have been utterly helpless without it. With it she bought a small place in the country, and is now independent and happy. This first called my attention to the subject, and I determined to join such an Order the first opportunity. My wife encouraged me in doing so, saying that if there were any such society open to ladies she would join also, for the protection of her children. Soon after there was a Lodge organized in our town, and I was fortunate enough to secure charter membership."

Mr. F.—"I am a minister of the gospel. It is just as much my duty to provide for the welfare of my family as it is to minister to the spiritual wants of my people. My salary is just about enough to live on comfortably, and the nature of my profession prevents me from accumulating property in business. My family is safe while I am with them, but the thought would often occur, what would become of them if I should die? I determined to put my mind at rest on that question, and that is how I came to be a member. Men of my profession commonly neglect such matters too much, and hence there are so many ministers' families struggling with adversity and eking out a scanty living by labor, for which they are but poorly prepared. We are enjoined to be not only 'harmless as doves,' but also 'wise as serpents,' and I believe there is also something said about one 'who provideth not for his own household.'"

In Memoriam.

Hall of Lake Lodge, No. 135, A. O. U. W.

To the officers and members of Lake Lodge, No. 135, A. O. U. W.:

Your committee, appointed for the purpose of drafting resolutions of respect to the memory of our beloved brother, ALBERT S. WRIGHT, of this Lodge, most respectfully submit the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Supreme Master of the Universe in his infinite wisdom to call from our midst our beloved brother, A. S. WRIGHT, and while we bow in humble submission to Him the giver of every perfect gift, yet we, Lake Lodge, No. 135, A. O. U. W., desire to express our keen sense of the loss sustained by the death of our brother; therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of Brother WRIGHT Lake Lodge has lost a true Workman, the community an upright and honest citizen, and his family a kind and loving husband and father.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the family of our deceased brother in this their hour of affliction.

Resolved, That the Charter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, in his memory.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes of this Lodge, and that the Recorder be instructed to transmit a copy thereof to the family of deceased; also to the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN for publication.

Resolved, That this Lodge tender a vote of thanks to Laurel Lodge, No. 132, A. O. U. W., for their kindly assistance in the burial of our brother from their hall, and for other courtesies extended by them to the family and to this Lodge.

J. R. BOGGS, Committee.

Hall of Linden Lodge, No. 167, A. O. U. W.

To the officers and members of Linden Lodge, No. 167, A. O. U. W.

We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the feelings of this Lodge in regard to the death of Brother M. C. RAWLINS, would submit the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Supreme Master to call from labor to rest our brother, M. C. RAWLINS, who has endeared himself to us by his social qualities and by his continued services in this Lodge; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we feel deeply the loss of a brother whom we esteem so highly for the zeal he has always manifested in the workings of our noble cause.

Resolved, That we tender our sympathy to the bereaved widow and the fatherless children of our deceased brother, in their affliction; and, be it

Resolved, That the Charter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Lodge, and a copy sent to the family of our late brother, and to the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN for publication.

Linden, Oct. 22, 1883.

M. T. BREWER & CO.—We were pained to hear of the failure of this old and well known fruit shipping-house. In an article from the Daily Bee, of Sacramento, the cause of the suspension is set forth and shown that it was "an unfortunate combination of circumstances that caused the failure." This house was known to be among the largest shippers of fruit on the Pacific Coast. On shipments of $100,000 worth of grapes, only $68,000 was said to be returned by a Chicago firm. We extend our sympathy to Bros. Brewer and Farnsworth, and concur in the opinion expressed in the Daily Bee, "that the firm, while lately causing the loss to individual orchardists, had, in the long run of business, caused them all to make money." It is conceded to be an honest and inevitable failure, and there is no doubt, but that assistance will be given them to continue in their former business.

GRAND PACIFIC HALL.—The Pacific Hall Association, of which Bro. B. C. Duffy is manager, have fitted up four fine halls at 1049 Market street, on the second floor of the building. They are fitted up for Lodge and society meetings, and in their appointments and equipments in many respects are the best and most complete of any halls in this city. It was the intention of the projectors to have halls and reception rooms adjacent, so as to accommodate the desires of our society people.

The first ritual for the A. O. U. W. was printed by Bro. A. P. Riddle, now the editor of the Kansas Workman, and was done at the office of the Spectator, in Franklin, Pa. Bro. Riddle was then a compositor in that office. Since he moved West and has grown up with the country, we are pleased to hail him as the Hon. A. P. Riddle, member of the Senate of the State of Kansas, —New England Workman.

Grandpa and Baby Rose.

"Isn't it pretty?" said a little old man, as he wheeled a baby-carriage to the place where a reporter of the New York World was sitting in the park.

"It must be pretty," said the reporter, looking into the carriage and seeing a tiny creature snugly nestling in a downy nest, with its face covered with a delicate lace veil.

The little old man was delighted; his little old chin went twit-a-twit-a-twee, and he chirped like a bird.

"They keep its face covered," he said, with a sigh, "since the little white hearse drove away from the house the other day. But I—"

The little old man stopped and looked all around with his little twinkling eyes.

"I will show its face to you, sir! it's so very, very pretty."

And the little old man's chin went twit-a-twit-a-twee.

"They will be angry," he continued; "but I'm so proud of its pretty face that I must show it."

Suddenly the little old man took the lace that covered the baby's face in his tremulous fingers, and the reporter prepared to burst into exclamations of delight, even if the face should prove to be the homeliest face in the world.

"Mush!" a little child said, coming from behind the bushes and seizing the coat-tails of the little man. "Danpa mush!"

"The flies will annoy Rose," a gentle girl of twelve said, joining the little group and carefully replacing the lace.

Close observation showed a tear trembling in the girl's eye as the little old man wheeled away the carriage, with the little child dancing by his side.

"O, it's such a deception!" she exclaimed, burying her face in her hand. "Baby Rose died last week," she continued, "and we are afraid to tell grandpa, as his mind is weak and she was his idol; so we put a doll in the carriage, closely veiled, so he can not see its face, and let him wheel it around. But its deceptive."

Just then the little old man paused, left the child with the carriage, and came back to where the girl was seated.

He put his face close to hers and whispered. "What is it," he asked, "that they carried away in the little white hearse?"

"Flowers," she said, "only flowers, grandpa."

"I wonder," the little old man mused, "why they all turn their faces away when they tell me what they carried away in the little white hearse."

Then he went to the carriage again and chirped like the merry little old man that he was.

"Flowers, only flowers," the reporter heard him murmur as he wheeled the doll away.

CONSUMPTION OF QUININE.—Quinine is said to be decreasing in demand at the West, a prominent Chicago firm reporting that weekly sales are a fifth of those a few years ago; a circumstance due to the disappearance of malaria as farms are drained and land cultivated. Malaria is certainly increasing in New England. Boston Traveler.

Insane Asylums.

The insane asylums of this country have recently challenged public attention. Their management has been much discussed, often unfairly and hypercritically, but there is no doubt that these institutions, while magnificent in architecture, and while grandly generous in endowment and support, are false in organization, and generally fail to cure. Among their faults we mention, first, their vast size and the great number of patients under one management. With the highest sense of duty on the part of the superintendent, minute and frequent study of the individual case is impossible. Every thing falls into routine, and is left to the care and management of attendants, who are rarely persons of intelligence and sympathy.

The practical outcome of the great insane asylum is that hundreds of persons, many of whom need the most careful, discriminating study, are treated much as farmers treat unruly cattle—they are kept inside of a high fence and not allowed to hurt each other. With the exception that the insane are dosed with anodynes to make them sleep, it would be somewhat difficult to point out the differences between the usual management of the insane and the management of unruly cattle.

We mention next, though it stands first in practical importance, the utter seclusion of the inmates of these asylums from the outside world. Interested for years in the management of these institutions, the conviction constantly grows upon us that our insane will never receive justice, they will never be wisely and tenderly managed, until the light of day is let into their places of confinement.

The reason most frequently given for interdicting correspondence is that the patients might trouble their friends with improper letters. This is not a good reason. No one with a spark of human sympathy would give such a reason. The patient, sick of typhoid fever at home, and abandoned because he was a trouble to his friends, would be a parallel bar. In civilized life, the convenience of the well always gives way to the necessities of the sick. The case of the sick brain should be no exception. We do not now argue this point; we only wish to say that our insane asylums can never be brought into harmony with civilization until a United States mail-box is within easy reach of every patient, to be opened only by the regular mail-officer, with the usual severe penalty unsperringly enforced upon all interference with the letters deposited therein.—Dio Lewis's Monthly.

CREMATION.—Doubters are now convinced that the cremation movement will triumph. It is right; it is honest; it is clean. It is quite as sentimental as burial in the ground. It is right, because it removes from millions of the poor a great load. It is honest, because the soil contains only a small percentage of the precious materials which can be appropriated by our bodies. To withhold these precious atoms from general circulation for thirty or forty years is not honest. Through cremation these atoms are all returned at once to the atmosphere, and quickly reach the soil. It is clean, as every one knows. Graveyards have long been a detriment to the health of the living. Water circulates through the earth as blood circulates through the body. The impurities of graveyards find their way into this general circulation. A beautiful urn, containing the dust of the loved one, may be kept in some sacred place in our home.

"WHAT IS ONE MAN'S MEAT IS ANOTHER MAN'S POISON."—Good beef, good bread, exercise, sunshine, pure air, temperance, cleanliness, abundant sleep, a cheerful temper, and a hundred other things, are every man's meat, and no man's poison. It is true there are some things which one man can bear and another can not, but they are of doubtful utility. If you keep to the safe and good in food and drink, there is no truth in the old saw that "What is one man's meat is another man's poison." This old saw is made to cover a multitude of dietetic sins. Thousands of persons starve themselves into thinness, paleness and nervousness, by living on white bread and sweet things, and sleeping too little. Oat meal, cracked wheat, Graham bread, and beef, with plenty of sleep, would make them plump and ruddy.—Dio Lewis.

LEARN TO LAUGH.—Blessings on the laughers, no matter of what style. Of course we all like ha-ha-ha, and we don't like he-he-he, or ho-ho-ho, or haw-haw-haw; but give them all a welcome. The worst of them are a thousand times better than the whiners. Hearty laughter is better than pills for dyspepsia, better than chloral for neuralgia, and better than balsam for consumption. Come on, brothers and sisters, with your ha-ha-ha, and your he-he-he, and your ho-ho-ho, and your haw-haw-haw, and all the variations; you are welcome. But you long-faced, whining, groaning wretches, avout! I would rather have the cholera come this way than you. Why don't you cut your throats? I will sit on your case as a juror, and bring in a case of justifiable suicide.—Dio Lewis.

Household Hints.

VEAL GALANTINE.—Take a piece of breast of veal about twelve to fourteen inches long; bone and trim it carefully, removing all gristle and superfluous fat, as well as some of the meat, (about one pound). Take this meat and half-pound of fat bacon, pound together to a mortar, season with powdered spice and sweet herbs, pepper and salt to taste, then pass the mixture through a wire sieve. Cut half-pound of boiled tongue in pieces about an inch square; cut half a dozen truffles, each into three or four pieces. Lay the prepared breast of veal, skin downward, on the table, sprinkle it with pepper, salt and powdered spices; lay the pounded meat, the truffles and the tongue on it, then roll it up neatly as a roly-poly pudding, and tie it up tightly in a cloth. Put all the trimmings and bones of the breast into a saucepan large enough to hold the galantine, add a calf's foot cut in pieces, the trimmings of the bacon, two or three onions and two carrots cut in pieces, a clove of garlic, a bundle of sweet herbs (thyme, marjoram, parsley and bay-leaf), cloves, whole pepper, mace and salt in proportions, according to taste. Fill up with such a quantity of cold water as will leave room for the galantine to be put in. Set the saucepan on the fire; when the contents boil put in the galantine. Let it boil gently without interruption from two to two and a half hours. Then lift it out, put it on a plate, and when it has cooled a little take off the cloth, tie it up afresh, and lay it between two dishes, with a moderate weight upon it, to remain till cold. Care must be taken in this last operation that the "seam" of the galantine be made to come undermost. When quite cold, undo the cloth, glaze the galantine, and garnish it with savory jelly made from the liquor in which it was boiled.

POTATO PANCAKES.—Potato pancakes make an excellent dish for supper. Serve with the same embellishments in the way of pickles, sauces, as you would do were the dish you were offering fried oysters. Grate a dozen medium sized potatoes, after peeling them and washing thoroughly. Add the yolks of three eggs, a heaping table-spoonful flour, and if they seem too dry, a little milk will do to thin them, with a large teaspoonful of salt, and lastly the whites of the three eggs beaten stiff, and thoroughly beaten in with the potatoes. Heat your griddle and put butter and lard in equal proportions on it, and fry the cakes in it until they are brown. Make them a third larger than ordinary size of the pancake.

CLAM SOUP.—Fifty clams, hard or soft, boiled in one quart of water half an hour; take them out and chop fine, or if the hard part is disliked, remove that, and leave the soft part whole, to add at the last; boil one quart of milk, adding one teaspoonful of salt, and a saltspoonful of pepper, after the clam broth has been strained into the boiling milk. As some clams are saltier than others, taste before adding the salt; rub one teaspoonful of butter to a cream with two even ones of flour, and wet with soup till thin as cream, then add, and let it boil for five minutes; put the clams in the bottom of the soup tureen, pour the soup upon them, and serve with toasted crackers.

TEA-CAKE.—Bread crumbs may be made into a very nice tea cake by the addition of the same things which would make flour into tea-cake. Mix two ounces and a half of crumbs with four ounces of melted butter, and to them add the beaten yolks of six eggs and a teaspoonful of grated lemon peel. Two ounces of chopped raisins, a few blanched and chopped almonds, must be mixed with these, and last of all, the whites of the eggs must be added to the compound. It should be baked in a carefully papered tin, and it is well to score it into squares before putting it in the oven.

SWEDISH PUDDING.—One-half pound of flour; one-half pound of butter; half pound of sugar; eight eggs; a little salt. Rub the sugar and butter to a cream; add the yolks, well beaten, the salt, flour, and lastly the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Cook by steaming them in a steamer about half an hour. Put the batter three-fourths of an inch deep into teacups. The batter will fill the cups; turn them out on a hot platter. Serve immediately, with a clear brandy sauce in the bottom of the dish. Half the above quantity will be sufficient for a small family.

FRIED CELERY.—Cut the celery into pieces three or four inches long; boil them tender in salted water; drain them; make a batter in the proportion of two eggs to a cupful of rich milk, mix flour, or fine bread or cracker crumbs, enough to give it consistency; roll the pieces of celery in it, and fry them to a light brown in hot lard. Serve very hot. Celery can also be cooked as asparagus, boiled tender, and served with a white sauce.

CORN BREAD WITHOUT YEAST.—Corn bread without yeast or soda is sometimes desired as an article of food. Sift three quarts of meal, add a tablespoonful of salt, and mix with just enough water to make a thin batter; cover this with a cloth and let it stand until it begins to rise, and little bubbles make their appearance on the top; then pour it into a well buttered tin and bake slowly in a moderate oven.

November Fashions.

The first glimpse of new winter fashions is enjoyed as keenly as the first drapery of frost upon the trees. Although the frost is always the same, its beauty never ceases to be new, while on the other hand our garments, never alike for two seasons in succession, charm by a special fitness that pervades even the utmost surprises fashion ever prepares. This season's styles impart a satisfaction that is the consequence of hearty approval. Even a casual glance convinces one of their character. They are reasonable, lady-like and practical, and yet they are sufficiently varied in shape and diversified in general effect to please the most exacting tastes. The difference between street and house dresses is expressed almost wholly in the selection of materials and trimmings, their modes often being identical.

There is not a single new fashion, however stylish, but is so devised that a lady who really desires to cut and make her own garments may duplicate the shape satisfactorily, and that, too, without undue worry of mind or weariness of body. If she choose her fabrics from among lady-like materials and complete her costumes with severe plainness, her attire will be pronounced distingue and elegant; she may trim her dresses if she prefer to, and yet be counted artistic. In either case she will be fashionable. Her own style, circumstances and age should be carefully considered before she decides which method of costuming is best suited to her.

Ladies' Polonaise Costume.

The stylish over-dress of the season is a very long polonaise, such as is portrayed by the engraving, Fig. 1. It is made of all sorts of dress goods, heavy fancy cloths, plain and broadcated velvets, Ottomans, etc., and the finish is usually under-faced edges, broad bands of fur, rows of velvet ribbon, or some effective flat garniture. It is represented as made of novelty suiting in this instance, and is worn over a short, round velvet skirt, this style of skirt being its usual companion. The skirt is plainly finished at the foot, and is planned according to the prevailing four-gored fashion. Its pattern is widely used for dress goods of all kinds, with all sorts of decorations.

The polonaise is very closely fitted to the figure by double bust darts, single under-arm darts, low side-form seams, and a center seam, the middle three seams of the back terminating below the waist line in extra widths, which are arranged underneath in plaits, and provide a handsome fullness over the bustle. It is somewhat deeper at the back than at the front, and is raised slightly high at the sides by plaits caught up just back of the side seams. These plaits cross-wrinkle the front beautifully, and add to the full bouffant appearance of the back. The front and back are each cut all in one piece, and a long opening for a closing is made down the center of the front from the neck to a desirable distance below the waist line. The garment descends nearly to the foot of the skirt, and its edges are neatly finished with under facings. The sleeves fit the arms closely and comfortably, and are stylishly completed at the wrists by round cuff facings of velvet, which are partly hidden beneath long, loose-wristed gloves drawn up on them. The closing is made with button-holes, and small, crocheted buttons, and down each side of the closing is another row of buttons, producing by their uniform arrangement a pretty and stylish effect. An officer's collar and a linen choker-collar are at the neck. The pattern to the polonaise is in thirteen sizes, for ladies from twenty-eight to forty-six inches, bust measure, and costs 1s. 6d. or 35 cents. Such polonaises, made of velvet and other heavy fabrics, are frequently worn without a wrap on the street, chamois vests, with or without sleeves, being usually worn underneath to provide the required warmth. Such vests may be purchased already made, or may be easily constructed at home. The seams should not be lapped, but should be joined with close, short, over and over stitches, after the manner of a glove seam, and the edges should be bound.

The bonnet is of felt, with much plumage for garniture. Its brim is smoothly faced with velvet, and soft ribbon is used for ties.

Ladies' Costume.

For tall, slender ladies, the costume represented in the engraving, Fig. 2, is particularly beautiful and stylish. It is made of plain and mixed wool goods, selected from among the autumn novelties. The upper part of the skirt is a very deep yoke, cut from lining goods, and covered with a deep, puffy drapery that droops gracefully over the top of the attached skirt portion. The latter is laid in uniform box-plaits all around, its plaits being well pressed and stayed underneath by tapes. A wide hem finishes the bottom of the skirt. At the front and sides the over-dress is of basque depth, extending in uniform outline well over the hips, and being deeply notched below the closing buttons and button-holes. At the back it is deepened and widened to form a handsome drapery, that descends nearly to the foot of the skirt, and is made to fall full and puffy over the tournure or bustle, by deep loopings in the side edges, and the effective disposal of extra widths at the ends of its middle three seams. These seams, together with single under-arm darts and double bust darts, fit the over-dress superbly to the figure. A military collar is about the neck, and below it is a fancy, shirred ornament of the plain goods, which extends quite to the waist line. The sleeves fit the arms closely, and are ornamented at the wrists with short, flaring cuffs simulated with the plain goods. Brocades or velvets unite beautifully with plain, rich silks in a costume of this style, and may be gay, delicate or sober in hue, according facing, and trimmed with plumage and ribbon. Hats and Bonnets.

FIG. 4.—Ladies' Evening Bonnet.—This pretty evening bonnet is of white crepe, the shape fitting the head so closely that no underfacing is edge. The ornament used for fastening them is of gilt, imitating ancient coins held together by a golden chain. The strings may be tied separately or together, close to the throat or low on the corsage, as most becoming. Ma-lining being of the peculiar shade of red known as judee. A row of tiny ostrich tips of the same bright shade, each overlapping the next a little, forms a novel monture extending all across the front and sides, a finish being given to the intended uses of the costume. The body and sleeves may be garnished as elaborately as may be deemed becoming to the figure of the wearer, and flat garnitures may be added to the plaited portion of the skirt with good effect. For very dressy occasions, the neck may be fancifully shaped and the sleeves shortened, if so desired by the wearer. All soft or easily draped textures may be fashioned into beautiful costumes of this style, for home, evening or outdoor wear.

Girls' Costume.

Costumes like that shown in Fig. 3 are exceptionally becoming to little women, and may be suitably developed in both rich and inexpensive textures. Cashmere and velvet of a deep blue shade are the materials combined in this instance, and the sash is of wide blue satin ribbon. The skirt is laid in uniform box-plaits all around, and has its widths alternately of velvet and cashmere, and of such dimensions that the plaits are of velvet and the spaces of cashmere. A little ingenuity and care will lead one to obtain the required widths of the sections, and the effort necessitated is well repaid by the result. The body presents a blouse effect in front, where it is gathered across the center at the neck, and also at the lower edge, and then mounted on a lining that is much shorter, thus allowing it to droop with the quaint blouse effect pictured. It is in French style at the back, with the closing made down the center with buttons and button-holes. The skirt is seamed to the body, and the sash is arranged in soft folds about it and tied in a large bow at the back, apparently supporting the drooping fullness of the front. The coat sleeves are finished at the wrists with little cuff-ornaments of velvet and frills of lace, and a band-like collar and a lace frill dressily finish the neck.

All sorts of soft woollens, as well as silks, Surahs and velvets, make up beautifully by the pattern to this costume. The costume may be entirely of one material, and the sash may be of the dress fabric or of plain or fancy ribbons, as desired. A hem finishes the bottom of the skirt, and is the only finish required; but, if desired, rows of braid, velvet ribbon or a contrasting band may be applied with good effect. The hat is a velvet poke, with a shirred silk needed. On the left side are poised three full, white ostrich tips, while on the right are four rosettes of deep crimson velvet. The ties are of similar velvet ribbon, one set starting from the center of the crown and the other outlining the rine, Lincoln-green, any of the scarlet shades, or black, may take the place of the crimson, if the later be unbecoming.

FIG. 5.—Ladies Bonnet.—A capote of dark blue beaver, closely clipped, is here shown, its

by the arrangement of the ties. These are of velvet ribbon of the dark-blue shade, underfaced with judee satin. They are fastened high up on the sides, with a plain gold slide, and then caught in a plait on the edge, so that they hang gracefully. It will be in best taste to tie them under the chin in a formal bow, as the general air of the bonnet is one of elaboration.

FIG. 6.—Ladies' Hat.—The always-becoming black velvet is used for this hat, the frame of which inclines to the Henri Trois shape, now so much in favor. Around the crown is a scarf of black Ottoman silk, while coming towards the front on the left side is a black-and-white bird. This is a positive specimen of the "magpie" combination, with the black most prominent; but if other colors were desired, the bird might be of oriole yellow and the scarf of black or blue.

FIG. 7.—Ladies' Bonnet.—The mingling in this chapeau, of black, gray and white, colors that are widely divergent, is so well done that it does not surprise—which is a proof of success. The shape, a miniature poke, is covered with black velvet, and underfaced with uncut velvet of the same tone, the contrast in materials, however, being very good. A scarf of gray Ottoman silk is around the crown, but is almost concealed by the white plumes. A large gray bird is placed on one side, its wings standing up in full relief against the feathers. If preferred, ties of either velvet or Ottoman ribbon may be added; but they are not a necessity.

FIG. 8.—Ladies' Hat.—This pretty hat is made of marine blue velvet, plainly applied, the under-facing being of the same, and throwing a soft shade on the face. The trimming inclines to the front, a cock's comb rosette of shrimp Ottoman ribbon being on the left side almost in front, and just back of it two full shrimp tips, so placed that they fall forward over the edge of the brim. The simplicity of the hat makes it particularly suitable for a young lady, and, as it may be worn either forward or back, it adapts itself to walking, or even to times when one desires the hair to be shown, and a more elaborate look to be given.

Anniversary Matters.

The inclement outlook of the weather, and some other hindering causes, have decided the Oakland Lodges upon a considerable change in their projected plan of celebrating the sixth anniversary of the institution of the Grand Lodge in this state, next Tuesday. The idea of a parade and picnic at Shell Mound Park has been abandoned, and in its stead has been arranged a literary and musical entertainment, to conclude with a dance, planned to take place at Germania Hall, next Tuesday evening. The Committee of Arrangements consists of John Harris, of California, No. 1; T. H. Allen, of Oakland, No. 2; E. J. Thomas, of Occidental, No. 6; E. S. Finch, of Pacific, No. 7; and D. S. Hirshberg, of Oak Leaf, No. 35. It is understood that good speakers and music have been engaged, and a pleasant evening warranted.

Matters looking to the celebration of the anniversary on the San Francisco side of the bay are in the same condition as noted in our last issue. The banquet to be given under the management of Past Grand Master Wm. H. Jordan, Tuesday evening next, at the Baldwin Hotel, promises to be a most pleasant affair. All of the Grand Lodge officers, and the Supreme Master Workman, with many other prominent Workmen, have, we understand, responded affirmatively to the invitations, and the prospects are that there will be a notable gathering of representative Workmen in attendance. In a response to a query regarding the pro rata expenses, we are authorized to say that they will probably not be above $2 each, at the outside. A most interesting list of toasts and responses has been prepared, and no doubt under the able management that it has, everything will pass off most pleasantly.

Importance of Good District Deputies.

San Francisco is blessed with an efficient and energetic corps of District Deputies of the Grand Master Workman. We wish we were able to say as much for every other division of the state. Out of the entire number of over sixty District Deputies in the state, there are perhaps forty who are doing credit to the honorable positions they occupy. The others, of course, are not charged with any aggressive action against the interests of the Order, but only with a certain supineness that is about as detrimental.

It would perhaps surprise some of our city members who have been accustomed to the zealous and enthusiastic oversight of our local deputies, to tell them that in some of the remotest counties of this state there are Lodges that have not been gladdened by the sight of their District Deputy since his appointment; lodges whose Financiers and other officers do not know that it is the law that every member should be informed in full concerning each assessment, but who expect the brothers to hunt them up, learn particulars, and pay once a month. They may learn a needed lesson some time when a contested death claim from the heirs of a deceased suspended brother is decided against them, on the ground that he never was officially informed of the assessment. It is the duty of a District Deputy, certainly, to exercise such an oversight among all the Lodges under his charge that not one of them need ever rightly be charged with irregularities in its legal and financial machinery. More than this, it is his duty to be letter-perfect in the ritualistic and unwritten work, and afire with energy and enthusiasm for the Order. We are sorry to hear that in some counties not so remote as some we have mentioned, there are District Deputies who never pretend to install the officers without reading the work from a ritual, and reading it poorly at that.

On the same principle that the President is not expected to have a personal acquaintance with all the postmasters he may appoint, so it is not to be expected that the Grand Master has an intimate personal knowledge of all District Deputies appointed. The burden of the blame then should rest upon those who petition for or recommend a man for this office whom they know to be unfitted for it, either by want of energy or ability. Let reformation begin at the fountain head, i. e., among those who recommend these appointments.

Local Option Query.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Was the local option law which was declared unconstitutional by the District Court ever passed upon by the Supreme Court, or was it ever repealed by the Legislature? If not, would it not be a good law under our present constitution?

WORKMAN.

[1. Judges Wallace, McKinstry and Niles, of the Supreme Court of this state, declared the local option law of 1874 unconstitutional, Judges Crockett and Rhodes dissenting. 2. At the next session of the Legislature, under Governor Irwin's administration, the law was repealed. 3. That is a matter of opinion.—EDS. WATCHMAN.]

EXCELSIOR'S MEMORIAL-STONE. — All preparations for laying the memorial stone of Excelsior Lodge, next Monday, are now completed. All desiring to attend are requested to meet at Blair's Hall, Mission St., between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, at 3 P. M. sharp, whence all will proceed in procession to the new hall. In the evening the Grand Officers and other especially invited guests, with such members of Excelsior as desire to avail themselves of the privilege, will meet at the Palace Hotel, at 7 o'clock, and partake of an informal dinner, which will be enlivened by music, speeches, etc.

On the first of October, Illinois had 12,807 members in good standing.

The Oakland Lodges and the Hamilton Church Property.

Some time since the WATCHMAN made allusion to what it considered a first-class chance for the A. O. U. W. Lodges of Oakland to acquire a most valuable and needed piece of property at a comparatively low figure. We advert to it again in order to rouse some of the brethren from a seeming lukewarmness on the subject, which as yet has hindered any favorable action. A short mathematical calculation ought to open their eyes to the fact that if they let this offer go it will be a long time before they will be apt to get as good a one again. The six Lodges interested are annually paying out about $1,800 for hall rent for Lodge meetings, exclusive of that paid for rent of halls for public entertainments, amounting in all to say $2,000, which would be equivalent to 10 per cent. on the investment in the appended offer, and a 2 per cent greater rate of interest than the one contained therein. There would then be this saving, besides the inevitable profit that would accrue from renting Lodge rooms to other organizations and the large lower auditorium for concerts and other evening entertainments. The ownership of such a piece of property would give our Lodges a stability both in reality and public estimation that they can never have while in the role of tenants and at the mercy of a landlord. We understand that the lukewarmness is partially occasioned by the fact of certain Oakland real estate men throwing cold water on the proposition—presumably because they see no commissions in it for themselves. Of course they would not be expected to encourage an affair that not only promised no profit to them but might deprive them of valuable patrons in the future; as it is apt to be the case sooner or later that most A. O. U. W. Lodges will either buy or build their own halls. The example of Excelsior Lodge, of this city, in building a hall of its own by a stock company of its own members, is one that is already having effect in stirring up other Lodges to do likewise. To more thoroughly acquaint all the members interested in this matter with the status of affairs, we append in full the offer made to the Lodges by the attorney of the Hamilton estate:

To the Members of the A. O. U. W., Oakland GENTLEMEN: I am authorized to offer to your Order the property known as the Hamilton church, on the S. E. corner of Jefferson and Clay streets, in this city. This property consists of the lot 105 feet on Jefferson street by 100 feet on Thirteenth street, the building thereon, and all the furniture and fixtures therein. These last consist in part of the magnificent organ, one of the largest and finest on the Coast, costing upwards of $3,500; the gas fixtures, upholstery and carpeting; the furniture of the rooms above the auditorium, containing chairs, benches, tables, book-cases, cooking range, cooking utensils, crockery, etc., complete.

The building is substantially and well constructed, and is in good repair. Its original cost was $40,000. The auditorium is light, pleasant and large, with a seating capacity of 800, and is admirably adapted for concerts, lectures, religious and other assemblies. The upper story, with very slight and inexpensive alterations, can be fitted for two commodious Lodge rooms, with the necessary ante rooms for secret societies. These, with the kitchen and library rooms, seem to make it peculiarly fitted for the use of social and beneficial associations. The location is unsurpassed. It is central, and in a part of the city that will always be desirable. It is but one block from Fourteenth street, with its street-car connections, and in the third block from Broadway. The price at which I am authorized to offer this property is $20,000. It should, however, be understood that this price is subject to the approval of the Superior Court of this county, the property being a part of the estate of L. Hamilton, deceased, and the administratrix authorizing this offer. This property, at such a price, is undoubtedly a most rare opportunity, and could never be had but for an unusual combination of circumstances. Of the purchase price, $10,000 can be placed on long term with our savings institutions, at eight per cent interest. It is believed that the balance could be easily raised by the formation of a Hall Association, to the shares of which the several Lodges would subscribe to the extent of their surplus funds; and, also, the various members of the Order would make subscriptions. The value of the property might be represented by say 2,500 shares of stock, at a par value of $10 each, to be issued on the payment of $5 per share. The subscription of 2,000 shares at $5 each paid would raise the necessary amount, and the Association could retain 500 shares to meet any unanticipated requirements. Such an Association would be able at once, from the renting of its Lodge rooms, to derive a revenue sufficient to pay interest and create a reserve or sinking fund for the payment of the loan. This income could also be considerably increased by rental of the auditorium for concerts, lectures, etc., for which it is admirably adapted. If any doubt should exist as to the ability of the Order to raise $10,000 cash by stock subscriptions, the balance could probably be met by bonds of say $500 each, secured by a second mortgage, which at eight per cent net interest could readily be disposed of at par. The security would be ample for $4,000 or $5,000 to be raised in this manner. Thoroughly convinced that this plan is not only feasible, but would enable your flourishing Order to acquire a most valuable property at a very small price and on most advantageous terms, and at the same time give proof of your financial strength and soundness, I beg your careful consideration and an early reply.

GEO. E. WHITNEY,

Attorney for estate of L. Hamilton, deceased.

A Legal Decision as to Suicide.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The Supreme Court has decided that the self-killing by an insane person, understanding the physical nature and consequence of his act, but not the moral aspect, is not death by suicide within the meaning of the condition in the policy of insurance upon his life—that the policy shall be void in case he shall die by suicide.—Press Dispatch.

The foregoing is in accordance with numerous other decisions by lower courts, and is no doubt conclusive. It is important as showing how far not only life insurance companies but fraternal assurance associations may go in providing against immunity from loss in case of suicide. The Courts will not regard self-destruction as suicide within the provisions of any law we may make, unless such self-destruction be done by the party while in sound mind. Moreover, the presumption is that no person will deliberately take his own life while in his right mind, though we have no doubt that many do. But in case of contest against the claims of a suicide's beneficiary, the burden of proof would rest on the contestant; and to prove a person to have been of sound mind at the time of taking his own life, would be next to impossible.

Now, we have reason to believe that the beneficial Orders would escape the payment of thousands upon thousands of dollars if a practical law could be framed that would vitiate a certificate in case a member while in sound mind committed suicide, and besides, save many a weak and despairing brother to his family and the community; yet we doubt the possibility of making such a law, for the reason that the end aimed at could not be reached. A person intent on suicide to defraud the Order or better the pecuniary condition of his family, could easily, and no doubt would, leave behind prima facie evidence of insanity, or in any event, no conclusive evidence of sanity, without which there would be no sufficient ground on which successful resistance against the payment of the claims of the beneficiary could not be hoped.

We therefore conclude that legislation on the suicide question would be labor lost. A law that must needs remain a dead letter had better never be enacted. No good can come of it, but on the contrary much harm might result, and especially is this true in the case of one likely to lead to expensive and damaging litigation.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always inclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

THE law in relation to cards does not seem to be understood by our membership generally. Cards are of two kinds, clearance cards and final cards. The former is merely legal evidence of a privilege granted to a member in good standing to join some other Lodge within the time mentioned on the card; that is, for the time to which the member has paid his Lodge dues in advance. During the validity of the card, the the member's relation to the Order and to his Lodge is in nowise changed, unless he has actually been admitted into some other Lodge, and should be regarded accordingly. Before any member can legally get a clearance card he must pay all assessments standing against him, and his dues in advance for the time the card is to run. He must be notified of all assessments, just the same as any other member, and failing to pay must he suspended, and so reported to the Grand Recorder. In short, he must be treated in all regards the same as if he held no card, till the card be recalled or deposited in some other Lodge. The merely leaving a card with a Lodge with an application for membership is not a deposit thereof within the meaning of the law, for he can withdraw the same, or, the Lodge granting it can for cause call it in. The deposit mentioned in the law is the final surrender of the card on transfer of membership. Any member in good standing has a right to a clearance card on application and payment of dues (not assessments) in advance, unless the Lodge desires to try the member for some offense. When a member applies for admission by card to some Lodge, no ballot can be legally had till the Lodge to which application is made is possessed of official evidence from the Lodge granting the card that his assessments have all been paid. If a card expires before an applicant is actually transferred, it falls to the ground, and must be extended or renewed before any further proceedings can be had. When a member is transferred, the Lodge from which he came should at once be notified of the fact, and any beneficiary money he left in said Lodge should at once be forwarded to the Lodge admitting the member.

A final card severs a member's connection with the Order altogether. It is an honorable way of quitting the Order. To get such a card, the member must pay up every thing legally charged against him in his Lodge, make application in writing, setting forth the fact that he desires to withdraw from the Order, and surrender all rights and privileges, of whatever nature and kind. He should not surrender his beneficiary certificate, for should he desire to reunite with the Order he would be required to produce his certificate, or sworn proof of its loss. As in the case of a clearance card, the Lodge has no right to refuse a final card, unless the member is under charges, or the Lodge desires to try him. One holding a final card can not unite again with the Order after he is over 50 years of age.

THE law requiring notices of assessments to be served by written or printed notice, on every member in good standing, should be strictly observed. Such notice should be served on the member in person, or mailed to his last place of residence, and record of the fact kept so that it could be sworn to if necessary.

SOME of our Lodges do not observe the law in relation to suspension for non-payment of assessments. Under the new law, no member can be delinquent till the close of the 28th day of the month. Consequently, suspensions should in all such cases be reported as occurring on the day succeeding the 28th.

The Reinstatement Law Again.

The writer hereof has had some experience in matters of legislation. We know how easy it is to pick flaws and to find fault with an enactment, and how hard it is to frame a law that should work free from friction, and be so plain that people of equal intelligence shall not construe it differently. We have severely criticised the new law passed by the Supreme Lodge in relation to reinstatements. We believe no one has a right to condemn a measure and at the same time be unable to suggest something better. Hence we feel in duty bound to respond to the request of the Michigan Herald, that we furnish a draft of a "model Reinstatement Law." We do it not only for the principal reason above stated, but also in the hope that our work may commend itself to the approbation of the Supreme Lodge, inasmuch as to cause it to take the place of the law now in existence. Then, the criticism of our production may afford our contemporary much pleasure and diversion, and so improve his frame of mind, which seems to be a little "off color," so to speak, just at the present time. And now to the task before us.

Amend Sec. 13 of Article VIII. Supreme Lodge Constitution, to read as follows:

"Sec. 13. Any person holding a final card, desiring readmission to the Order, shall make application in the same manner and form as that prescribed for admission to membership by initiation, and shall be subject to all the conditions necessary thereto, except that the degrees shall not be conferred on the applicant, and he shall be exempt from all proposition and degree fees, but shall pay the usual fee required of members admitted by card, and the fees as required for a new medical examination. He shall also deposit one dollar in the Beneficiary Fund. Any person suspended from the Order by reason of non-payment of assessments for six months after first delinquency thereon, desiring to be reinstated, shall make application in the same manner and form as that prescribed for admission to membership by initiation, and shall be subject to all the requirements necessary thereto, except that the degrees shall not be conferred on the applicant, and he shall be exempt from all proposition or degree fees, but shall pay into the Beneficiary Fund eight dollars as arrearages, together with any arrearages of dues owing by him to the Lodge up to the time of his suspension from the Order as above set forth, and the fees required for a new medical examination. He shall also deposit one dollar in the Beneficiary Fund.

"Any person suspended from the Order by reason of non-payment of dues for the period of six months, or for such other period of delinquency as may be prescribed by law in the jurisdiction in which he was suspended desiring to be reinstated, shall make application in the same manner and form as that prescribed for admission to membership by initiation, and shall be subject to all the requirements necessary thereto, except that the degrees shall not be conferred on the applicant; and he shall be exempt from the payment of all proposition or degree fees, but shall pay the dues for the non-payment of which he was suspended; also, any arrearages of assessments due at the date of such suspension, and the fee required for a new medical examination. He shall also deposit one dollar in the Beneficiary Fund.

"Any person suspended from the Order for both non-payment of assessments and dues as before specified, applying to be reinstated, shall be subject to the same conditions and requirements as specified in the foregoing cases of suspension, and entitled to the same exemptions. He shall pay into the Beneficiary Fund, as arrearages, eight dollars, and into the General Fund the amount of six months' dues, as fixed by the Lodge at the time of his suspension from the Order. He shall pay the required fee for a new medical examination, and shall also deposit one dollar in the Beneficiary Fund.

"In all the above cases the reinstated member shall be exempt from any assessment for the month in which he is reinstated, but shall be liable on the next succeeding assessment. All beneficiary moneys shall be paid into the Beneficiary Fund of the Lodge, to be forwarded as the law provides, and all other moneys into the General Fund, unless otherwise provided for by law in the Jurisdiction where reinstatement occurs. In case of rejection, the amounts above specified shall be returned to the applicant, except the fee for medical examination, which shall not be returned, unless otherwise required by law of the Jurisdiction in which the applicant applies."

Now, while we are not vain enough to believe that the foregoing, if enacted into a law, would in no case be misunderstood, yet we do most thoroughly believe that it would be a very great improvement on the law we now have, which scarcely two persons construe alike. We submit it for criticism.

That the satisfaction of criticism may not be on one side altogether, we would ask of the Herald to submit a draft of a graded assessment law, to carry out his ideas in that regard; and when that is done, another, providing for a Sinking Fund, which we believe he also favors. Possibly some good can be gotten out of these discussions.

CALIFORNIA has at last wheeled into line, and now has a Legion of Select Knights, and we hope before the next session of the Supreme Legion, which will be held at Topeka, Kansas, in 1885, that California will have a Grand Legion, and be represented on the floor of the Supreme Legion by some of the energetic comrades of the Pacific slope.—Anchor and Shield.

[Another case of having to go away from home to learn the news. Will the Anchor and Shield please inform us of the location and particulars of organization of said Legion? The WATCHMAN, after diligent inquiries, has been unable to learn of the organization, or any likelihood of the organization of any body of the Select Knights in the borders of California.—EDS. WATCHMAN].

One of the remarkable features connected with the English friendly societies is that they all accumulate a reserve fund, and to our mind it is only a question of time when the fraternities of America will have to follow in the footsteps of their English cousins. One assessment per year made for a reserve fund would never be felt by the membership, and it might be the only safeguard that those who live the longest may have for the payment of their death claims. The Supreme Lodge allows it. Why should it not be done? Controlled by our Board of Trustees, it would be just as safe as if it were in the Bank of England.—Michigan Herald.

Supreme Lodge Matters in General.

During a recent interview with Supreme Master Workman Fish, he agreed to contribute something of interest to this column every month; and we have no doubt but that every item will be scanned with much interest. This insures hereafter a Supreme Lodge column every issue, as we also have a report from Supreme Recorder Sackett every month.

A change that will doubtless prove grateful to members under the immediate Jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge is the sudden and great subsidence from quadruple assessments. For the November report we have but one death and one assessment.

At the last session of the Supreme Lodge, the Supreme Master Workman, Recorder and Foreman were appointed a Committee on Digest, and were authorized to employ Leroy Andrus, of Buffalo, N. Y., Chairman of Committee on Laws, to prepare a digest of the laws of the Order. Bro. Andrus has labored steadily and faithfully since that, and has now produced a report which has been approved and ordered printed. The work is well done, and much credit is due to Bro. Andrus.

Revised List of Grand Master's Appointments.

The, following received from Grand Master Rogers, is self explanatory:

UKIAH, Nov. 2, 1883.
EDS. WATCHMAN—Dear Sir and Brother: By reason of certain information received from brothers along the line of travel from Los Angeles northerly, also to accomodate a certain Lodge with a different evening of meeting, I have determined upon a modification of my original appointments for my contemplated southern tour, as follows:
San Diego Lodge, omitted.
Higuera Lodge, No. 194, San Luis Obispo, Nov. 29, Thursday.
Sausal Lodge, No. 47, Salinas, Dec. 1st, Saturday.
Watsonville Lodge, No. 45, Watsonville, Dec. 3d, Monday.
Santa Cruz Lodge, No. 46, Santa Cruz, Dec. 4th, Tuesday.
San Jose Lodges, San Jose, Dec. 5th, Wednesday.
Please insert the same in the next issue of the WATCHMAN, as I know no means so certainly sure as your paper to give information to all concerned. Fraternally yours, C. H. & P.,

The Home Interest.

The labor problem has received another interesting attack by the members of the State Horticultural Society, and the results are reported at length in this issue. It is not necessary that we should comment upon the general subject, for we are free to acknowledge that we are the only member of the editorial fraternity not gifted with prophetic vision. It is usual for the superior order of intelligence vested in the craft to decide all matters ex cathedra, but we can not see further into a millstone than our readers can. We would, however, emphasize one point which was made by several of the speakers, and which is as true as it is old; that is, that the man is the best man who is working as though he were striving for an interest in the soil—for a home which shall give him family ties and surroundings. Such a man works for more than his present needs, and he works the better for it, and the more men with such ambitions we can get into the state the better will be our own rewards and the ultimate advancement of the state. We find in an excellent address delivered by Mayor Fernald, at the Santa Barbara Fair, the following allusion to the desire for ownership as a stimulus to labor:

Ownership of land increases industry and desire to improve it. I suppose there never was a tenant who did not desire, in his heart, to acquire his landlord's title in some way. Ownership of lands in reasonably small parcels by the farmers who have worked their acres is the secret of the marvelous growth of New York, Ohio, Illinois and the Northwest States. "Slavery," it is said, "has its whip," but no general never-ceasing incentive to labor other than the ownership of property.

How the laboring men of this country can march towards ownership in this country as they really do if they really seek it, is shown by the following interesting comparison which Mr. Fernald introduces:

The remuneration of labor in all these countries can not be without interest to us. In this country, assuming the produce of labor to be 100, 72 parts go to the laborer, 23 to capital, and 5 to the government in various forms. In Great Britain, 56 parts go to the laborer, 21 to capital, and 23 to the government. In France, 41 to the laborer, 36 to capital, and 23 to the government. In Germany the result is nearly the same. Sixteen per cent more of the produce of labor goes to the laborer in this country than in England, and 31 more than in France and Germany.

Of course in addition to this advantage in the greater share in the product of his toil, the laborer here has the grand chance of cheap land to encourage his effort. Much will no doubt be done to increase our labor supply when the existing state of affairs here becomes more generally known, and we shall have a much greater supply of that trustworthy and desirable class of workers which trusts to speedy independence by making its own homes, while at the same time it serves us as an eager wage-winner. Thousands will come to invest their small surpluses here, and supplement their present means by accepting employment during the busy season, and devoting the rest of the year to such little production on their own places as will support and advance them towards full and profitable ownership of the land. We do not want a horde of irresponsible and ease-loving adventurers to open soup houses for, as we had in 1875-6, but we do want thousands of ambitious and energetic men and women who will strike out for themselves and make good use of the earnings which the busy season in the field, orchard and vineyard will give them. This is of course only one phase of the question of our labor supply, but it is a very important one.

How Josey Was Caught.

Josey liked to keep office for his "Uncle Doctor," as he called him. But the doctor did not always like to trust him there when he was called away, for Josey had a habit of looking into things that made the doctor fear he might get into mischief, for Josey was a meddler. One day, however, Josey found himself alone, and began to look at every thing on the table. The electric battery pleased him most.

"Ho! I know how to fix this," he said. "If any man came in that wanted electric treatment, I could do it as well as Uncle Doctor. There! Now it's all right. Now you take hold of these handles."

The taking hold was easy enough, but letting go was quite another matter. Any little boy or girl who has ever tried it will know how Josey's arms tingled and ached, but he had to hold on; he could not let go; and there he was, tears running down his face, when his uncle heard his screams and came in.

"You got caught that time, Josey," said his uncle, when he had set him free. "Now, remember that bad habits hold fast to a boy worse than an electric battery does, and are harder to get rid of; and meddling is a very bad habit."

"I won't have any thing more to do with either of them," said Josey.

Searching for Water.

Now that the population of our state is increasing so rapidly, the unsettled land that is watered from running streams is seen to be of very limited area. As a natural consequence, it is steadily appreciating in value, and property-owners are using every means to increase their supply of water. This is notably true in Southern California, all along the line of the Santa Ana River; at the mouth of the Canyon, where the underground flow has been appropriated to water a portion of Redlands; at the Riverside point of diversion, where the something has been done; and at Bedrock Canyon, where a pile dam is being constructed to secure additional water for the settlements of Orange and Santa Ana; also, at the mouth of San Gabriel Canyon, and in the bed of the Los Angeles River. In this connection we print an article taken from the Herald, of Los Angeles, bearing date 22d of September:

The Good Work Begun.

Only a few months ago the Herald contained an argument in favor of tunneling the Sierra Madre Mountains for water, and repeated the necessity of the project in several issues, with suggestions of a location where such a tunnel could be made with success.

To-day we have the pleasure to announce that the good work has been begun in several places. Mr. James Noel, who has a fine body of land between Cucamonga and Etiwanda, has begun a tunnel six and a half feet high and five feet wide, in the mountains at the upper side of his land. Mr. Clark, who is making the same, was in town yesterday for giant-powder, tools and provisions, and reports a length of about fifty feet. About ten miles to the west of this tunnel the Chaffey Brothers are preparing to make another tunnel, to water a part of the Ontario Colony. In the rear of Sunny Slope, Mr. C. C. Hastings has begun a tunnel, on the upper side of his tract. Mr. Abbott Kinney has made a short tunnel that is yielding a fine stream of water for his ranch. Next west of the Kinney tunnel, Hon. J. F. Crank, Wm. Allen and Mr. A. Bridgen have commenced a tunnel on the west side of Precipice Canyon, and have completed about forty feet of the same. It is yielding water quite freely already. About three miles west of this tunnel Messrs. Graham, Lowell, Gano and Jewett have run a tunnel into the mountains about fifty feet, and secured a beautiful stream ten inches wide and an inch and a half deep, which is carried into a reservoir near the mouth of the tunnel. The water in this tunnel comes up out of the bottom of the tunnel and in from the sides. The present supply is ample for all their needs, so that work for the present has been suspended. It was found that the water increased steadily as the tunnel was lengthened. If more water should be needed they will extend their work further into the mountain. Another recommendation in favor of this water supply is the clear and pure condition of the water as it merges from the tunnel, and the further fact that the riparian rights, as enunciated by the Supreme Court of California, can not apply to these precious streams.

When the tunnel was made for the Southern Pacific railroad at San Fernando, quite a stream of water was found where there had been no surface indications, and this stream is still steadily flowing. Every inch of water thus secured and carried to hitherto unproductive land is adding its quota to the wealth of our state; every additional acre that can be brought under cultivation is so much towards the prosperity of all; and those who are engaged in these enterprises, and carry them forward to a successful issue, certainly merit the thanks of the community.

A MANUFACTORY of vegetable oils, starch and bluing is being erected in Los Angeles.

A second medicinal time, with red meat, is Brown's Iron Bitters, small druggists say.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be part-takers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

WATCHMAN PUBLISHING CO.,
212 Market Street, S. F., Cal.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the first and third Saturdays of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following, the first six mentioned, however, being more fully represented in the organs of their own which we have established:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS,
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS AND LADIES OF HONOR,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN RULE,
ORDER OF MUTUAL COMPANIONS.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

RECORD PUBLISHING CO.,
252 Market St., S. F.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this the oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinion of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time they intend to pay for it, let them not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Successful Patent Solicitors.

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is new and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That is this understood and appreciated is evidenced by the number of patents issued through their agency. DEWEY & CO. PATENT AGENCY (S. F.) from week to week and year to year.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through DEWEY & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

RAILWAY SWITCH.—Geo. Chalmers, San Juan, San Benito Co., Cal. No. 286,682. Dated Oct. 16, 1883. This new railway switch consists in the arrangement of levers operated by suitable devices on the locomotive, from which, through intermediate mechanism, motion is transmitted to the switch, or throw-rails, to connect them with the side or main track, this arrangement being for the purpose of operating all the levers upon one side to keep a straight or main track, and all the levers on the other side to connect the throw-rails with the sidings. The object is to provide a switch in the operation of which the greatest simplicity exists, thereby lessening the liability of accidents, both on account of construction and the difficulty of acquiring the knowledge of its operation.

FASTENING PAPER BAGS.—Albert W. Angier, S. F. No. 286,758. Dated Oct. 16, 1883. This is a device for securing the mouth of bags when closed; and it consists in the provision of a flexible metal plate secured to the inner part of one of the sides in such position as to lie within the mouth of the bag, the said plate being so formed as to permit the upper corners of the bag to be folded laterally against it, and then to be folded over upon itself, and upon the laterally folded corners, thereby securely closing the mouth of the bag.

SAFETY HOOKS.—Edward H. Smith, Rutherford, Napa Co., Cal. No. 286,739. Dated Oct. 16, 1883. This is a novel hook, which may be opened to connect or attach to any object, and afterwards closed, so as to prevent its becoming detached.

CARE-WORN persons, students, weak and over-worked mothers will find in Brown's Iron Bitters a complete tonic, which gives strength and tone to the whole system.

Oh, My Back!

That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.

The singular thing about it is, that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, consumption, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.

Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.

Wm. P. Marshall, of Logansport, Indiana, writes: "My wife has for many years been troubled from pain in her back and general debility incident to her sex. She has taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, and I can truthfully say that she has been so much benefited that she pronounces it the only remedy of many medicines she has tried."

Leading physicians and clergymen use and recommend BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It has cured others suffering as you are, and it will cure you.

California Inventors

Should consult DEWEY & CO., AMERICAN AND FOREIGN PATENT SOLICITORS, for obtaining Patents and Caveats. Established in 1860. Their long experience as journalists and large practice as patent attorneys enables them to offer Pacific Coast inventors far better service than they can obtain elsewhere. Send for free circulars of information. Office of the MINING and SCIENTIFIC PRESS and PACIFIC RURAL PRESS, No. 252 Market St., S. F. Elevator, 12 Front St.

Dewey & Co., American and Foreign Patent Agents.

PATENTS obtained promptly; Caveats filed expeditiously; Patent Reissues taken out; Assignments made and recorded in legal form; Copies of Patents and Assignments procured; Examinations of Patents made here and at Washington; Examinations made of Assignments recorded in Washington; Examinations ordered and reported by Telegraph; Rejected cases taken up and Patents obtained; Interferences Prosecuted; Opinions rendered regarding the validity of Patents and Assignments; Every legitimate branch of Patent Soliciting promptly and thoroughly conducted.

Our intimate knowledge of the various inventions of this coast, and long practice in patent business, enable us to abundantly satisfy our patrons; and our success and business are constantly increasing.

The shrewdest and most experienced Inventors are found among our most steadfast friends and patrons, who fully appreciate our advantages in bringing valuable inventions to the notice of the public through the columns of our widely circulated, first-class journals—thereby facilitating their introduction, sale and popularity.

Foreign Patents.

In addition to American Patents, we secure, with the assistance of co-operative agents, claims in all foreign countries which grant Patents, including Great Britain, France, Belgium, Prussia, Austria, Baden, Peru, Russia, Spain, British India, Saxony, British Columbia, Canada, Norway, Sweden, Mexico, Victoria, Brazil, Bavaria, Holland, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, Cuba, Roman States, Wurtemberg, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Brazil, New Granada, Chile, Argentine Republic, AND EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD where Patents are obtainable.

No models are required in European countries, but the drawings and specifications should be prepared with thoroughness, by able persons who are familiar with the requirements and changes of foreign patent laws—agents who are reliable and thoroughly established.

Our schedule price for obtaining foreign patents, in all cases, will always be as low, and in some instances lower, than those of any other responsible agency.

We can and do get foreign patents for inventors in the Pacific States from two to six months (according to the location of the country) SOONER than other agents.

The principal portion of the patent business of this coast has been done, and is still being done, through our agency. We are familiar with, and have full records, of all former cases, and can more correctly judge of the value and patentability of most inventions discovered here than any other agents.

Situated so remote from the seat of Government, delays are even more dangerous to the inventors of the Pacific Coast than to applicants in the Eastern States. Valuable patents may be lost by extra time consumed in transmitting specifications from Eastern agencies back to this coast for the signature of the inventor.

Confidential.

We take great pains to preserve secrecy in all confidential matters, and applicants for patents can rest assured that their communications and business transactions will be held strictly confidential by us. Circulars of information to inventors, free.

Home Counsel.

Our long experience in obtaining patents for Inventors on this Coast has familiarized us with the character of most of the inventions already patented; hence we are frequently able to save our patrons the cost of a fruitless application by pointing to them the same thing already covered by a patent. We are always free to advise applicants of any knowledge we have of previous applicants which will interfere with their obtaining a patent.

We invite the acquaintance of all parties connected with inventions and patent right business, believing that the mutual conference of legitimate business and professional men is mutual gain. Parties in doubt in regard to their rights as assignees of patents or purchasers of patented articles, can often receive advice of importance to them from a short call at our office.

Remittances of money, made by individual inventors to the Government, sometimes miscarry, and it has repeatedly happened that applicants have not only lost their money, but their inventions also, from this cause and consequent delay. We hold ourselves responsible for all fees intrusted to our agency.

Engravings.

We have superior artists in our employ, and all facilities for producing fine and satisfactory illustrations of inventions and machinery, for newspaper, book, circular and other printed illustrations, and are always ready to assist patrons in bringing their valuable discoveries into practical and profitable use.

Aims, Objects and Regulations the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen is a general organization for the mutual benefit of its members and their families. It embraces in its membership men of every vocation, profession and occupation—employers and employees—workers of all classes, whether their labor be mental or physical. It has no connection with any religious sect, political party, or organization for affecting the price of labor or commodities, but is designed to promote fraternity, mental and social improvement, and mutual assistance.

BENEFICIARY FUND.

The most distinctive feature of the Order is what is designated as the Beneficiary Fund—a carefully devised, well-guarded, economical and beneficial system, by means of which the sum of

is secured to each member's family, or such person or persons as he may choose to designate. During the several years since the Order has been established this sum has been promptly paid in full in each case of death, to the persons entitled to receive it, within a few weeks, and without any litigation or troublesome formalities. A careful examination of the working of the system will satisfy any intelligent person that such will continue to be the case.

HOW ASSESSMENTS ARE PAID.

Each person who becomes a member of the Order pays to the Receiver of his Lodge one dollar for the Beneficiary Fund. Every Lodge has on hand, at the beginning of the month, ready for a call, one dollar of Beneficiary Fund for each member. When a death occurs, if there is a sufficient amount of the Fund in the Grand Lodge to meet the required payment of $2,000, no call is made upon the Subordinate Lodges, but if there is not a sufficient surplus from the last assessment, then the Lodges are notified at the first of the month to forward their portion of the Fund on hand ($1 for each member), and an assessment is made to replace the amount forwarded. By this means the Beneficiary Fund of the Lodge is again replenished, ready for a call at the first of the next month, if it should be made. Assessments are only made on the members at the first meeting night in each month, and a written and printed notice is sent to each member, bearing date of such meeting night. Twenty days time is given from that date to meet the payment. Thus the payments are made at such intervals, and are called for in such manner that they may be easily provided for and met without inconvenience even by persons of small income.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?

In the first year of the working of the Supreme Lodge (1873-4), the number of assessments made upon the members of the Lodges directly under its jurisdiction, was 20; second year, 14; third year, 15; fourth year, 16; fifth year, 14; sixth year, 16. Since that time, the average has remained about the same, and these figures will also apply to the Jurisdiction of California. It is probable that the future average will remain about the same. The average cost to each member, therefore, has been $15.66 per year; being a little more than four cents per day as the cost of a completely-secured guarantee of $2,000, to be paid on the death of a member. Can any man who is in circumstances to avail himself of this system be justifiable in neglecting to give to his family the security which it affords? Does not prudence and affection dictate that he should secure for them the protection thus offered? A number of States, having over 2,000 members in each, collect and disburse the Beneficiary Fund separately through their Grand Lodges, instead of through the Supreme Lodge. In these, the cost per year has been, in some cases less and in others greater than that given above, but the average has been about the same.

California was set apart as a separate Beneficiary Jurisdiction in July, 1878, and at the end of July, 1879, had levied and collected ten assessments for deaths occurring in the State, and for the months of August and September three more, making a total for 14 months of 13 assessments, or an average of a little less than 93 cents a month for each member. During 1880, 16 assessments were levied in California, and for 1881, it is estimated there will probably be 14 assessments.

ADVANTAGES OF THE SYSTEM.

The A. O. U. W. Beneficial system is simple, easily understood, economical in its workings, and in all its details come under the direct observation and care of the members who meet weekly in their Lodges, where the business is transacted, and where they enjoy the advantages of social and fraternal intercourse, and of mental improvement. These Lodges are governed by officers regularly elected by the members—the financial affairs are under the proper guards and restrictions, and a careful system of checks prevents fraud or betrayal of trust.

PROTECTION AT NET COST.

All money paid on assessments for the Beneficiary Fund goes to the payment of death benefits without reduction even for expenses, these being provided for out of a General Fund raised in each Lodge. This fund is made up from initiation fees (usually about $15 for each member, with sometimes an advanced rate, according to age), and weekly dues of not less than 25 cents per month. The advantage which each member derives from the social, fraternal and educational features of the Order, and the good which is accomplished by it in these respects, afford a more than ample return for the sum he pays into the General Fund, which meets all the expenses of the Order, leaving the entire Beneficiary Fund intact for the beneficent purpose for which it is intended. There are no commissions, fees or salaries to be paid out of it, but the entire amount paid in goes to the widows, orphans and other heirs of deceased brethren. Thus the Beneficiary system may be fairly said to be carried on absolutely without any working expenses, and, at the same time, to be more closely under the observation of those interested in it, and more carefully guarded than any other method adopted for similar purposes.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION.

A medical examination is required under such rules as are generally adopted by life insurance companies. The character of the applicant must also be investigated, and the Lodge pass upon his application by ballot. Persons between the ages of 21 and 50 only are admitted.

BENEFITS OF SICK OR DISABLED MEMBERS.

The payment of weekly sick benefits to members is a matter left to the control of each Subordinate Lodge. Some provide in their By-Laws for such benefits—others do not. If sick benefits are to be paid, the initiation fees and weekly dues are fixed at an amount sufficient to cover the expense—each Lodge having the power to fix the fees and dues at such sums (not below $15 for initiation and degrees, and $2 for Beneficiary Fund and certificate, and 25 cents per month for dues) as may be determined upon.

GENERAL FEATURES OF THE ORDER.

The A. O. U. W. is a secret Order, having two degrees, with appropriate initiation ceremonies. These are simple, but impressive. The teachings are calculated to strengthen the character and elevate the moral principles of the members.

The Order is composed of Subordinate Lodges, Grand Lodges and a Supreme Lodge. Subordinate Lodges in States or Territories where no Grand Lodge has been established, are under the immediate jurisdiction of and report to the Supreme Lodge, until a Grand Lodge is established.

When a Grand Lodge has over 2,000 members under its jurisdiction, it can be set apart as a separate Beneficiary district if desired. In this case the members are assessed for the deaths which occur within such district or jurisdiction, and the Grand Lodge collects the assessments and pays the death benefits under the laws and regulations adopted by the Supreme Lodge. The Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, California, Wisconsin, Kansas, Oregon and Ontario have been thus set apart as to the Beneficiary Fund. In all other respects they remain integral parts of the Order.

PROGRESS OF THE ORDER.

The A. O. U. W. was started in Pennsylvania in 1868 but was not sufficiently established to pay the $2,000 benefit until 1873, from which time up to the 1st of January, 1880, the Grand Lodge of that State alone has paid over $546,000 of Beneficiary Fund.

The Supreme Lodge, up to June, 1881 had paid out $919,172.90 on deaths of members of Lodges under its immediate jurisdiction. The amount paid by the Order during the year 1880, was $1,805,887.00.

The membership reported on the first of March, 1881, was 97,179, with Grand Lodges established in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, New York, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Michigan, California, Georgia, Kansas, Ontario (Canada), Oregon and Washington Territories, Massachusetts, Nevada, and Subordinate Lodges in a number of other States. In all these States the Order is steadily and rapidly growing. With the increase already since the above date, it is safe to say that before the close of the year 1881 it will number over 125,000 members.

The Order was founded by a few earnest, honest men, for fraternal and beneficent purposes. Its sphere of usefulness has been enlarged, and it has been faithfully conducted as its founders designed it to be—not to subserve the selfish interest of a few, but for the mutual benefit of all. Thoughtful and prudent men join it because they can thus provide, without present embarrassment, for the contingencies arising from the uncertainties of life, and at the same time aid each other in mutual improvement and the elevation of humanity.

CHARITY, HOPE AND PROTECTION.

To every loyal brother of the A. O. U. W. these words symbolize the greatness of an organization which, to-day, is doing good commensurate with the loftiness of its mission. Charity, hope and protection are the three cardinal principles of our Order. By a combination in the character of each member of these three attributes, we have men of noble mind working together for a common good. Our field is a world-wide philanthropy, where the merits so combine as to make of every member a true man. Selfishness is no part of the A. O. U. W. system. It is a departure from it as much as is possible. The true Workman has none other than charity for a brother, hope for the good of the future, and protection for the helpless in time of sore trial and distress. These are the three talismanic words and objects of the Order, and he who cannot affiliate with those whose aims are embraced in these, cannot be, in word and deed, a true Workman.

ADVANTAGES OF THE A. O. U. W. SYSTEM.

Some one has epitomized the prominent reasons for joining the Ancient Order of United Workmen about as follows:

1. Because insurance benefits are furnished to all the members at cost. Having had 14 years or more of practical experience and trial, during which hundreds of thousands of dollars have been paid to widows and orphans at less than half cost of insurance in stock companies, it is worth more than a trial.
2. The A. O. U. W. offers more benefits than any other Order.
3. Because the cost of all the above large benefits is less than one-half of a corresponding insurance in the ordinary insurance companies.
4. Because the assessments are based on the "Actuarial Table of Costs of Risks."
5. Because the Order is steadily and rapidly growing.
6. Because the whole membership is taken into full confidence as to the management, and in the monthly published reports of the officers every member can see what has been done with every dollar received by the Order, and the financial officers have given adequate bonds; and lastly, because.

The Supreme Court of the A. O. U. W. will not take advantage of any technicalities, but will pay all claims promptly, whenever they arise.

Further information cheerfully given by applying to H. G. PRATT, Grand Recorder, S. F., Cal.

The Farmer's Life and Opportunities.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The labors and anxiety of months is now required by well filled bins, cribs and storehouses. Farmers rejoice in the abundance they possess, which maintains the civilized social fabric, whose necessities render producers masters of the situation. Why is it that with such opportunities, such possibilities, so many young men quit the country for towns and cities, where they are forced to accept and remain in subordinate positions? Agriculture, from an intellectual standpoint, rises above all other callings or pursuits. The duties of a wide-awake, progressive farmer bring him into daily contact with the wonderful and marvelous operations of nature—grander, more perfect and satisfactory than all else, to the thinker, the poet, the lover of truth and scientific facts. The stereotyped excuses offered that opportunities are wanting for development mentally, that socially farmers are less respected than professional men, that the life is one of hardship and continuous toil, that ignorance and stupidity are a consequence of a life away from the marts of trade and aggregated humanity, are without foundation or truth.

The American farmer should rank with the nobility of any land. Politically each individual is a sovereign in his own right. The portals of the future are wide open to the sons of farmers who will seek and improve the opportunities offering. Let them strive to excel in farming by increasing the yield of the great staples, be able to account intelligently for pursuing certain courses in selecting and crossing breeds of animals to secure certain results; in fine, to utilize to a reasonable extent the divine element they possess rather than main strength and animalism.

Growth of the Country.

If we are to rely upon figures there can be no doubt of our increasing wealth. The United States Treasury reports show that the trade of the year 1873 was, exports, $522,470,922; for 1883, $823,805,810. Imports, $642,136,210; for 1883, $723,122,660. An increase for 1883 of $301,325,897 in exports, and $80,986,450 in imports, over 1873. The increase of exports for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, over those of the year preceding, are equally favorable. The leading articles are as given:

News in Brief.

LOS ANGELES talks of having a paper mill. J. C. BANCROFT DAVIS has been appointed of ficial reporter of the United States Supreme Court.

TWELVE brigands have captured the Duke of Castellmore, at Tripoli. The brigands demand a high ransom for the body of the prisoner. THE Marysville levee system has been strengthened, and should be able to stand a flood several feet higher than the highest that has ever visited the city.

THE Czar has decided to have a Russian army with repeating rifles of the latest American pattern. He has just ordered 200,000 of these arms through London firms.

JOHN W. MACKAY, the San Francisco millionaire, has gone into mining in Colorado, having bought the Hukill mines near Georgetown.—N. Y. Graphic.

THE Utah Sulphur Refinery, in Southern Utah, has started up on native sulphur, and is turning out fifteen tons of first-class commercial sulphur daily.

A SHIP-LOAD of California redwood will soon be sent to Scotland from this port, a 1500 ton ship having been chartered for the purpose. The lumber is from Humboldt County.

THE OVERLAND RAILWAY GUIDE, published by the Western Passenger Department, Overland Short Line, has been issued. It will be published weekly, at No. 2 New Montgomery street, under the Palace Hotel; and Bro. J. Meredith Davies, editor, has brought out a fine readable and illustrated journal. This paper will contain the latest official information pertaining to rates, time-cards of overland travel, and furnish information regarding the development of railways on the Pacific Coast.

BRO. ROBERT MATTHEY is proprietor of the Palace Bakery, 1523 Mission street, between 11th and 12th. The various kinds of bread, cakes, pies and confectionery made at this particular bakery are used by the best families of this city. He has a large number of wagons running, being the second largest establishment in this city. Experimental knowledge of his goods warrants us in recommending them.

THE City Transit Company and T. C. P. D. have consolidated, and opened their headquarters at 32 Second street, near Market. Baggage to and from all trains and steamers. Shipping promptly attended to, and furniture and pianos moved. Any business intrusted to this firm, all of whom are Workmen, will be carefully and promptly fulfilled.

BROS. DAKIN & LIBBEY are the managers of the Commercial Soap Co.'s office, 223 Sacramento street. The several brands manufactured for domestic and laundry purposes, as also their fine toilet soap, have a reputation for excellence, purity and cleansing properties second to none, either domestic or imported.

BRO. GEO. A. DEAN, proprietor of the Pacific Straw Works, No. 16 Fourth street, manufactures all the latest styles in hat and bonnet frames. His experience and skill in this business is well known, and persons wishing any goods in his line will be sure to get the latest style.

BRO. PAUL KEYSER, 206 Clay street, is a member of San Francisco Produce Exchange, and commission merchant. He is also dealer in produce, wool, hides and pelts. Consignments or purchasing orders will be carefully, judiciously and intelligently attended to.

THE Central Pacific Railroad Company has paid the $300,000 compromise taxes over to San Joaquin County, and that amount, less $75,000 paid to the lawyers, is now in the County Treasury. The Stockton Independent says it will pay off all outstanding debts of the county, and leave $65,000, or nearly enough to build a new court-house.

Electric Furnace—Interesting Experiments.

The electric furnace possesses two great advantages—the temperature which can be produced is only limited by the refractory resistance of the crucible, and the heat is developed in the materials which are to be melted, without first traversing the recipient.

An interesting series of experiments was recently made with one of these furnaces in Paris, which are referred to by L'Electricien, as follows:

Six pounds of forged iron were submitted for twenty minutes to the action of the arc, and the metal was then poured into a mold. It was found to be crystalline, and could not be forged. This difficulty may be remedied by adding a little manganese before pouring out;
but the reason of this action is not understood.
Three-quarters of a pound of copper were melted in charcoal dust for an hour, at the end of which time all but three-quarters of an ounce had been vaporized. The persons who were present did not perceive any disagreeable effects from the atmosphere which they were obliged to breathe. Eight pounds of platinum were entirely melted in about a quarter of an hour. A half pound of powdered tungsten was submitted to the action of the electric arc, in a clay cru-cible. Very dense fumes escaped, and a cavity about a half inch deep formed at the summit.
The metal appeared to have been melted to only a very slight depth below the cavity. The unmelted portion was covered with very beautiful crystals, which, when examined by a microscope, were found to be prismatic, but they were not very uniform. The crystals were evidently formed by the slow cooling of the distilled vapor.
Experiments were tried with various other metals, showing that the quantity of any given metal which can be completely melted in an electric furnace, and the time required for the fusion, depend upon the interval between the point of fusion and the point of vaporizing, as well as upon the thermal conductivity of the metal. Thus it happens that platinum is melted much more easily than steel, and in a much greater quantity for the same expenditure of energy.

POSSIBILITIES OF MACHINERY.—Those who think, if there are any such, that the possibilities of labor-saving machinery, says the Manufacturers' Gazette, are nearly exhausted, and that the whole field of art and industry in which it may be advantageously employed has been already covered by inventive genius, are greatly mistaken. Wonderful as have already been the achievements of human ingenuity in this direction, there is no reason to doubt that it is destined to continual progress in the future as in the past, or that the coming triumphs of mind over matter will be greater and more fruitful of grand results than any which have been consummated. Reasoning from analogy and precedent, we can come to no other conclusion. Twenty, or even ten years ago, who could have guessed or believed that the difficult and complicated processes which are now every day being wrought out by machinery, in various branches of manufacture, would ever be possible? Thus it is that the unsolved problems of one generation of men become the accomplished facts of the next. And who shall say that the objects which now seem to us beyond the range of probability may not be successfully attained by those who are to come after us?

MESSRS. HAGGIN AND CARR have raised this year 100 bales of cotton, in Kern County. They are satisfied with the result, and intend experimenting with sugar cane also this year.

The Pacific Rural Press.

[Established in San Francisco in 1870.]

This is the leading farming journal on the western half of the continent, and second to none in America. It is well printed and illustrated weekly. Contains an unusual amount of fresh, original farm, household and family circle literature. Careful attention is paid to giving full and reliable weekly market reports. The following are among its ably conducted departments: Editorials on agricultural and other timely and important subjects of live interest to farmers and their families; agricultural, and other useful and ornamental illustrations; correspondence from various quarters of our new and rich developing fields of agriculture on the Pacific coast, embracing new hints and ideas from progressive men and women in all branches of rural industry;
Horticulture; Floriculture; The Garden; The Home Circle;
The Grange; Young Folks; Domestic Economy; Good Health; Entomological; Sheep and Wool; The Dairy; The Stock Yard; Poultry Yard; The Swine Yard; The Apiary; The Vineyard; Queries and Replies; New Inventions (and illustrations of new and improved machinery); Agricultural Notes; Items of General News, etc. Its columns are studiously filled with chaste, interesting, fresh and useful reading, devoid of questionable literature for old or young and faithfully alluring clasp-trap advertisements. Send for sample copies.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold
fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and shareholders
on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practica-
miners in this country.

The Press gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.
New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

Ancient Order United Workmen.

Excelsior, No. 126.

Laying a Memorial-Stone.—The Ritual Used. Banquet at the Palace

Monday, November the 12th, 1883, was a red-letter day in the history of Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, of this city; for then was laid by it the memorial-stone of the first Lodge hall built expressly for and by any Lodge of the A. O. U. W. in the Jurisdiction of California, or indeed on this side of the Rockies.

At 3 o'clock P. M. the invited guests and friends assembled at the old meeting place of the Lodge, at Blair's Hall, on Mission street, between 17th and 18th streets. Here Lodge was opened in due form, and under the head "Good of the Order" short congratulatory addresses were delivered by all the Grand Officers present as well as by several other prominent Workmen. Samuel Booth, P. M. W., was then formally invested with the position of Master of Ceremonies, and after adjournment marshalled those present into line, when they marched two abreast to the new hall, two blocks above, in the following order: Second Artillery Band (which kindly volunteered its services and discoursed excellent music, both on the march to and from the hall, and at appropriate intervals throughout the ceremonies); members of Excelsior Lodge; Grand Lodge Officers; Past Masters of other Lodges; members of other Lodges; making in all a very good sized procession. Arriving at the hall, and marching with uncovered heads through the open ranks of Excelsior's men, the Grand Officers took their respective stations around the stone, as in Grand Lodge, and were surrounded by a double circle of the remaining brethren. Already there were gathered and in waiting a good sized audience, consisting chiefly of the families of Workmen. Calling the assemblage to order, by rapping with the gavel upon the cap stone that swung ready to be lowered to its resting place upon the lower stone just below the floor in the center of the building, Grand Master J. T. Rogers, in response to an invitation to proceed with the ceremonies addressed the assemblage as follows:

Brethren:—In response to your courteous invitation the Grand Lodge is officially present, and desires to assist Excelsior Lodge in this solemn yet joyous hour. And in the performance of the duty thus accepted, it may be appropriate for me to say that throughout all time the architecture of a land has been a true index to the character of its people. Men build houses first for use; but—though unconsciously perhaps to themselves, a philosophical spirit, a love of creation and perpetuity prompts them. The boy with his blocks tries to imitate our most wonderful temples, and man under the same instinct erects his most magnificent domes. Because he looks on the eternal hills and the ever-bending sky and sees in them a type of permanence, he catches an inspiration from nature and seeks to give

W., and which we publish in full, bracketing any explanations interpolated therein. Other Grand Lodges will find it a good model for their use in similar cases. All the Grand Officers were present, with the exception of Grand Foreman and Grand Guide, whose positions were filled pro tem. respectively by Past Masters Reading and Booth.

shall officiate as master of ceremonies), responding for the Grand Officers, who, as their names are called, will take their positions as in the Grand Lodge.

Formula, when all are in position.

G. M. W.—"The Past Grand Master Workman will offer prayer."

P. G. M. W.—"Almighty Father, the Architect and Builder of the universe: We thank thee that the curse entailed on labor by man's disobedience has been so mitigated by that brotherly affection which prompts us to bear one another's burdens, that its evil effects are obliterated by the blessings by which it is alleviated. We pray that this building, whose memorial-stone we lay this day, may be devoted only to good and useful purposes; that in it may be taught and perpetuated those principles of good and true Workmanship which shall elevate and ennoble all who labor therein; and that from it may be spread abroad an influence which shall be for the benefit of man and the glory of God.—Amen."

G. M. W.—"Grand Recorder, you will now deposit the records and memorials in the place provided to receive them."

G. R.—(Advancing and placing the memorials and records in the casket). "Within this casket, to be inclosed in this memorial-stone, we deposit these records and memorials of (Excelsior) Lodge. And when this building shall have realized all our hopes concerning it, and it shall be taken down, perhaps to be replaced by a nobler structure, and when we who participate in these ceremonies shall have been removed from our sphere of labor, and these tokens shall have been discovered by a worthier generation who shall take our place, may they bear witness to the exalted hopes and the pure motives which govern us as we now consign them to their resting place."

[Within the copper casket placed in the stone were deposited copies of the WATCHMAN, a pamphlet history of the Lodge, as formerly published in this paper, a cut of the hall, San Francisco dailies of the date of ceremony, coins, etc.]

G. M. W.—"Grand Overseer, you will now perform your part in the ceremony."

G. O.—(Advancing and spreading the mortar under the stone.) "We spread the mortar under this stone so that it may be so firmly cemented to its fellow that neither raging storm nor earthquake shock nor the corroding tooth of time itself shall be able to disjoin them. May it be emblematic of the fraternal affection which shall ever unite the brethren of this Lodge and the whole Order, that neither misfortune within nor disorder without, nor lapse of years, shall be able to disunite them."

(The G. M. W. will now place the stone in position.)

G. M. W.—"Grand Foreman, you will now discharge the duty allotted to you in the ceremony."

G. F.—(Advancing and adjusting the stone with plumb and square and level.) "As this stone is plumb and square and level, may it symbolize the characteristics of a good Workman. May our conduct towards each other and our fellow-men be upright; may all our dealings with each other and the world be honest; and may no consideration swerve us from the plane of moral rectitude."

G. M. W.—(Advancing and striking the stone on each corner with his gavel.) "I now declare this stone to be well and truly laid. May the structure that shall rise hereon be a lasting monument to the wisdom, skill and energy of (Excelsior) Lodge, No. (126). May peace and charity be ever found his thoughts "a local habitation and a name." The dream of the sculptor is realized in marble. The statesman builds his monument in wise legislation. Each desires to perpetuate his thought. Acting primarily from necessity, but at the same time true to this universal wish for immortality, we find in this building that the brothers of Excelsior have erected their monument. To them it shall be a home, a school, and a temple. And let us hope that around this shrine your best thoughts may be garnered up and transmitted to coming time.

The laying of the memorial-stone then proceeded, in accordance with the following ceremonial devised by Sam Booth, P. M.

The Ceremonies to be Observed by Grand Lodges of the A. O. U. W., on Laying the Corner or Memorial Stone of a Hall Dedicated to Lodge Purposes.

The brethren shall assemble around the place where the stone is to be laid, wearing the badges or regalia of the Order, and if in sufficient numbers, members of the Grand Lodge and those eligible thereto shall form an inner circle, and members of Subordinate Lodges an outer one; and if not in sufficient numbers, then all but the Grand Officers and those actively participating in the ceremonies shall form in one circle. The Grand Master shall then direct the Grand Recorder to call the roll, the Grand Guide (who

Good-By.

The interlacing verdurous screen
Of the staunch woodbine still is green.
And thickly set with milk-white blooms,
Gold-anthered, breathing out perfumes.
The clematis on trellis-bars
Still flaunts with white and purple stars;
No missing leaf has thinner made
The obelisks of maple shade;
Fresh beech boughs flutter in the breeze,
Which, warm as summer, stirs the trees;
The sun is clear, the skies are blue;
But still a sadness filters through
The beauty and the bloom, and we,
Touched by some mournful prophecy,
Whisper each day, "Delay, delay!
Make not such haste to fly away!"
And they, with silent lips, reply,
"Summer is gone; we may not stay.
Summer is gone. Good-by, good-by."

Roses may be as fragrant, fair,
As in the sweet June days they were;
No hint of frost may daunt as yet
The clustering brown nignonette,
Nor chilly wind forbid to ope
The odorous, fragile heliotrope.
The sun may be as warm as May,
The night forbear to chase the day,
And hushed in false security
All the sweet realm of nature be—
But the south-loving birds have fled,
By their mysterious instinct led;
The butterflies their nests have spun,
And donned their silken shrouds each one;
The bees have hived them fast, while we Whisper each day, "Delay, delay!
Make not such haste to fly away!"
And all, with pitying looks reply,
"Summer is fled; we may not stay.
Summer is gone. Good by, good-by."

Kindergartens and Industrial Education.

WRITTEN FOR THE WATCHMAN, BY JEANNE C. CARL.

"The most effective means to dispel wretchedness is to let the light of knowledge and the love of use penetrate every strata of the social organism."

The "love of use" can only be taught by practice in uses. A very large proportion of the children of California are growing up without this practice, and their natural activity and desire to be practically useful is checked by an unnatural and one-sided education. "Does education educate" has been negatively answered by thousands of parents who understand education to mean only schooling of the usual sort, and who feel that which they are scarcely able to express, much less to explain, with regard to its defects. "My children seem to lose all interest in things about home," said a mother to me; "the more they go to school the less capable and helpful they are." The number of boys who grow up without aptitude for any employment, whose knowledge is a mass of unapplied and therefore half understood facts or principles, is appalling when we think of the public interest in which they must take a part, however unfit for those or for private duties.

Margaret Fuller said, "Knowledge that is not realized is not knowledge, but only knowledge's shadow." The most progressive and enlightened educators have arrived at the conclusion that vast sums contributed by the people of the United States to public education can be made to go further—to accomplish more, can be actually doubled in value, by an indissoluble union of knowing and doing during all the formative years. All there is of the much praised Quincy method is simply turning the self-activity of the pupils to the satisfaction of their natural curiosity, and interest in every thing about them. Their studies being made delightful, effort on their part is easy, because the application of what they know to some immediate use gives increasing satisfaction and strength.

Froebel's wonderful mastery of the secrets of child-nature, the harmonious development of physical, moral and spiritual being, through self-originated plays and exercises, under the guidance of instructed mothers and teachers, has revolutionized the practice of our best primary schools. Shenstone's school mistress, with her rod and ferrule, represents an educational era not quite outgrown; the blessed Kindergarten, turning the sour crabs and thorny wildlings of humanity into sweet and gracious fruit, represents another era not quite realized. Nearly all our public educational work belongs to the old regime. The establishment and maintenance of two Kindergartens in San Francisco, and of a training school for Kindergartens at Berkeley, is the point of departure from that regime for the Pacific Coast.

The beneficial results of Kindergarten work are most admirably stated by Prof. W. T. Harris, of St. Louis, in a masterly address before the National Teachers' Association. "The Kindergarten," he says, "cultivates skill of hand and accuracy of eye by all its groups of gifts. Not only is this training of great importance, by reason of the fact that most children must depend largely upon manual skill for their future livelihood, but, from a broader point of view, we must value skill as the great potency which is emancipating the human race from drudgery by the aid of machinery. Inventions will free men from the thrallions of time and space. The short training of the muscles of the infant will make it right-handed for life; and two and a half years of the child's life in the Kindergarten will start into development activities of muscle and brain which will secure deftness and delicacy of industrial power in all afterlife. The rationale of this is, that it is a pleasure to use the muscles already inured to use; in fact, a much used muscle demands daily exercise as much as the stomach demands food. But an unused or rarely used muscle gives pain in its first exercise, and the body naturally shrinks from employing it. Hence, in a thousand ways unconscious to ourselves, we manage to keep in exercise muscles already trained, and thus to preserve physical aptitudes for skill in any direction.

"The instruction in manners and polite habits is of great value, and better provided for in Froebel's plan than elsewhere. Moreover, there is a cultivation of imagination and of the inventive power which possesses great significance for the future intellectual growth of the individual.

"There is a gentle insinuation of habits of attention, of self-control, of concert of action, of considerateness towards others, of desire to participate in the common result of the school, that succeeds in accomplishing that change of heart in the child from selfishness to self-renunciation, without sacrificing his spontaneity as much as is done in an old-fashioned primary school.

"It is a part of the system as an adjunct to the public schools to educate the young women in valuable matters pertaining to the early training of children. I have thought that the benefit derived by the 200 young women at work in the St. Louis Kindergartens from the lectures of Miss Blow to be of sufficient value to compensate the city for the entire cost of the Kindergartens. A nobler and more enlightened womanhood will result, and the family will prove a better nurture to the child."

The experience of St. Louis, with 8,000 children enrolled in the Kindergarten schools, gives great encouragement to those who have seen this blessing as afar off, nor counted it among near possibilities that the entering wedge of a great educational reform was already opening the pondrous strata of precedent in those of the Pacific Coast. The heaven of the Kindergarten principles must leaven the whole lump before the monstrous and growing evils of the present system are eradicated.

Within the last two years the influence of more than one of our leading colleges and universities have been temporarily paralyzed by the disgraceful conduct of students, and the newspapers of to-day are full of a barbarity so monstrous, unmanly and brutal that the very flag waving over the turrets of West Point might blush for shame. We need no proofs that large numbers of youths have reached the higher levels of education provided by the munificence of the state and nation, without true culture.

Over against the exclusive intellectual training to which our school system is mainly devoted, put Froebel's principle, "the moral regeneration of the race is the end of education;" imagine that to be the leading idea from the primary school to the university; notice what other great principles of industrial training, i. e., application of knowledge to uses, is involved here, and the correction of many crying abuses is clearly indicated. Our present system is anti-social, making competition one of the main springs of activity. The love of use can not be developed under this influence.

Ignorance at one end of the social ladder and indifference at the other can only be corrected, and society itself made harmoniously progressive, by unifying and giving moral strength to our entire system of public education. The strong and enduring impulse to self-education should be secured in the elementary schools. The largest experience and best mental and spiritual qualifications are indispensable for their teachers. Of the entire school population a very large proportion go no higher; less than one per cent reach the college or university. For the ninety-nine we ask not only that they be not brought up in ignorance, but that they be not brought up in idleness. The sophistry which has denied that the state might educate in and for the industries is giving way to a more enlightened public opinion. It was much for the people to deny by their enactments the right of parents to leave their children in ignorance, on the ground of danger to republican institutions. Where parental self-interest failed the state has interfered, and where parental self-interest leaves the child to the pity of the charitable, or in a condition to become a burden upon the industrious and a ready prey to every lurking temptation, the state should interfere on the same ground. The state has not provided literary employments for those whom it has educated through the University, even, but the opponents of public industrial education have frequently urged that the obligation to provide work would follow training for work at the public expense. This reasoning is as applicable to head training as to that of the hand.

Every organization of workmen in the United States holds within itself a great responsibility, inasmuch as it has the power to accomplish an educational reform in its own locality. The influence of the Grange has been felt in many states, and that of other bodies of workmen might be of immense value in determining the direction of education in our cities towards practical ends. No more suitable subject of discussion in their bodies could be chosen than that of our public schools—how to elevate and make them more directly useful.

Boys Here and Elsewhere.

MESSES EDITORS:—In your last issue an article appeared as an editorial reflecting severely upon California boys. Now, my dear editor, you touched a chord of pride, which I feel whenever thought turns towards the young generation of California boys who have reached manhood or individualized boyhood, and my observations have extended from the first district school established in our midst. Being a trustee, off and on, for nearly thirty years, I have watched with much interest the development of the boys, their aspirations, pursuits and present prospects, not forgetting their habits and general character and standing. With all these advantages of observation, I give a very large percentage in favor of the California boys, who are largely the peer of your ideal English boys, who are all good, all honest, well cudgeled into the traces, worthy of filling the place of our boys, while they should be sent to Old England for correction and instruction. That was the gist of your article.

Fortunately for the writer, I spent twenty-six years in the Mother Country. I spent my boyhood there, and know that the cudgeled of boys is true. But is it correct logic? I say it is not. It makes the boy live an unnatural life, ready to break out when free from paternal fear.

When English boys are called upon to act the part of a man, this dread of paternal frowns follows their footsteps like a dark shadow. Not allowed to speak a word in company except by special favor, all honest impulse is stifled, crushed, and killed by a relic of barbarism, handed down from father to son, and is still the boys' "nightmare," except, it may be, in our own freed and loving land, where some sense of the fitness of things exist. Many a time I look with pride upon our boys and their present blessings and attainments, compared with what I beheld at home and experience. You certainly know not of what you speak when you would export our boys and import English ones to fill their places. Let us follow some of California's boys, now men, and filling a place in public affairs of life. Go with me, in spirit, to that lawyer's office; watch the young blood effused into its details; go home to the cultivated fireside—wife and child enjoying life's sunny side—and then return to the Old Country stock, to the old homestead. You will there find whisky sold, cards common, and all the adjuncts of a mill for grinding out misery. Again, look in upon that engineer who is a trusted employee, where life and limb are at stake; merchants, butchers, farmer, etc., can be resurrected from the scholars of our free school experiment, and I feel proud of the record, and of

Our Boys.

Scarcely a day passes but what I see young men from fourteen to twenty guiding and managing a team of eight or fourteen mules or horses with a single line, delivering goods and transacting business far in advance of their parents, many of them broken down by stimulants, etc. Just watch that keen eye and steady hand as the long train approaches around a curve just wide enough for one team. Could you make your cudgeled English boy manage, morning, noon and night, such an institution as the above? Again, go with me to the Lodge of Good Templars. Do you find the aged or middle-aged occupying seats of honor? No; you will find that lodge composed of California young men and women, earnestly engaged devising ways and means of saving these cudgeled boys from intemperance, etc. I glory in the boys, hard though it be for them to find proper employment among cudgeled men. There is a native talent peculiar to California boys nowhere else to be found, and it only requires the adoption of proper means to give their young ambition a proper outlet; for manly, expansive love, kindness, proper instruction, and religion, is all our boys require to make them our pride and joy.

JOHN TAYLOR.
Chinese Camp, Cal.

[We have no issue with these statements. The class of boys which our correspondent knows warrants him in his eulogy. He evidently knows the worst of England and the best of California. In all that has been advanced on the boy subject reference has been made to the available or floating class of boys in our large towns, until Mr. Taylor brought in his country boys. We have as high regard as he for well trained boys; those of whom we wrote were those who had not been trained, and who sadly need it.—EDITORS WATCHMAN.]

TEA.—In the London Medical Times appears the following paragraph: "Dr. Heath, of Newcastle, has been the last to raise his voice against tea. But it has long been a fact familiar to us that tea is a most fruitful source of dyspepsia. Among the vast numbers of poor women who frequent the patient-rooms of our London hospitals, we should not be far wrong in saying that two-thirds are suffering from dyspepsia. This dyspepsia almost invariably arises from two causes—the want of proper food, and the abuse of articles like tea, which stay the craving for food, but which aggravate the consequent conditions of the digestion.

Wetting Lead-Pencils.

The act of putting a lead-pencil to the tongue to wet it just before writing, is one of the oddities for which it is hard to give any reason, unless it began in the days when pencils were poorer than now, and was continued by example to the next generation.

A lead-pencil should never be wet. It hardens the lead and ruins the pencil. This fact is known to newspaper men and stenographers. But nearly every one else does wet a pencil before using it. The fact was definitely settled by a newspaper clerk away down East.

Being of a mathematical turn of mind, he ascertained by actual count that of fifty persons who came into his office to write an advertisement or a church notice, forty-nine wet a pencil in their mouths before using it. Now this clerk always uses the best pencils, cherishing a good one with something of the pride a soldier feels in his gun or his sword, and it hurts his feelings to have his pencils spoiled. But politeness and business considerations require him to lend his pencil scores of times a day. And often, after it had been wet till it was hard and brittle and refused to mark, his feelings would overpower him. Finally he got some cheap pencils and sharpened them, and kept them to lend. The first person who took up the stock pencil was a drayman, whose breath smelt of onions and whisky. He held the point in his mouth and soaked it several minutes, while he was torturing himself in the effort to write an advertisement for a missing bull-dog. Then a sweet-looking young lady came into the office, with kid gloves that buttoned half the length of her arm. She picked up the same old pencil and pressed it to her dainty lips preparatory to writing an advertisement for a lost bracelet. The clerk would have stayed her hand, even at the risk of a box of the best Faber pencils, but he was too late. And thus that pencil passed from mouth to mouth for a week. It was sucked by people of all ranks and stations, and all degrees of cleanliness and uncleanness. But 'twere well to forbear. Surely no one who reads this will ever again wet a lead pencil.

A QUAKER WEDDING.—The marriage procession started from a second floor sitting room and wended its way silently down into the parlor. The ushers went first, then the bride and groom, then the families of each of the contracting parties, and lastly the guests and a committee from the Race street meeting, who were present to see that every thing was done in proper form. The bride and groom took chairs which had been specially placed for them at the head of the parlor. After they had been seated, all the company sat down, and for a few minutes there was silence. Then the bride and groom arose, and the groom, taking the bride's hand, declared that "in the presence of the Lord and this assembly" he took the lady to be his wife, and promised, "with the Divine assistance, to be unto her a faithful and loving husband" until death should part them. The bride responded in kind, and everybody sat down again. A religious silence of three or four minutes was broken by the voice of Dillwyn Parish, the head of the Friend's Committee, reading the marriage certificate. After some more silence the groom signed his name to the paper in a strong hand, then the bride appended her flowing signature; then all the rest of the company signed their names. There was just a little more silence, and then the new-made husband and wife received the good wishes of their families and friends.

RICH WOMEN.—The New York World prints a list of 70 New York widows and 15 unmarried female legatees, whose united wealth is about $123,000,000. The wealthiest are Mrs. A. T. Stewart, $10,000,000; Mrs. E. D. Morgan, $5,000,000; Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts, $5,000,000; Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens, $7,000,000; Mrs. Paron Stevens, $3,000,000, Mrs. Moses Taylor, $6,000,000; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, $5,000,000; Mrs. James Brown, $3,000,000. The richest unmarried lady is Catharine Wolfe, $2,000,000, who also leads the entire list in noble and unostentatious charities. A fashionable Broadway diamond dealer says New York is foremost among the leading diamond cities of the world. At least one million dollars' worth glittered on the persons of ladies at the Metropolitan opera opening, one lady wearing forty thousand dollars' worth. Probably two hundred ladies have fifteen thousand dollars' worth of personal jewelry. I can name ten like Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Gould, whose individual property in diamonds, sapphires, rubies and emeralds exceed $100,000. More than forty New York ladies can each lay claim to fifty thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, and plenty of them have $25,000 invested.

AN IRON THEATER.—A company is said to have been formed to carry out a "reformed theater," a model of which has recently been exhibited. Every thing possible about this theater (says the Pall-Mall Gazette) is of iron. All the scenes and curtains are lifted and lowered by hydraulic machinery, so that only about one-sixth the number of men usually required suffice to "work" every thing, and the scenes can be changed in a surprisingly short time. The stage floor is in a number of rectangular sections, each of which can be raised and lowered independently, by hydraulic power. This, it is said, gives power to produce many very remarkable and picturesque effects which are impossible with ordinary stage machinery.

Carmelita.

[Written by JEANNE C. CARR.]

Carmelita is a Hebrew word with a Spanish termination, and means simply "a little orchard or vineyard." Thus our home had named itself before the house "with many windows" enlarged for us the ever beautiful and varied landscape of Pasadena. The house, a trap to catch the winter sunshine and every passing summer breeze, is planned for living in the open air. Every room in the two main stories opens upon a veranda or balcony, while the spacious deck upon the roof invites to star-gazing, and commands a glorious view of eighty miles of mountain range, and a glimpse of the peaceful sea.

It may be a useful study for some of the readers of this journal, this house plan of ours, which is little more than the old-fashioned square house of four rooms on each floor, and a central hall or vestibule, into which all the rooms open. Two modifications of this very common style give all the picturesque effect, viz., making an entrance in the corner of a room, out of which a veranda has been taken, and breaking the too formal outline of the roof by throwing up a very simple tower. A veranda around a house of the size required for our purposes was too expensive both to build and keep in order. We find the plan we adopted gives us every advantage, with the additional one of leaving our views more unobstructed. The reception-room, divided by a portico from the natural color of the redwood; the main story is painted olive-green; the concrete walls of the basement Indian red. When our Bermuda grass carpet covers the lawn, and the ivy and clematis drape porch and window, we shall be satisfied with the effect. Most housekeepers hate a basement; but every one who sees ours is loud in praise of its convenience and pleasantness. The east side, which contains dining-room, kitchen and lobby, is on the ground level. All the windows command beautiful views. Pushing the excavation back into the hill we got an excellent cellar, light and well ventilated. This story is the most elaborately furnished. The lobby under the reception-room is furnished as an office for our fruit business. An outside door leads into the garden; another door opens directly into the cellar, where we have a large table for the exhibition of our dried and preserved fruits. During the Conclave week scores of Eastern visitors sampled the raisins, prunes and varieties of crystallized fruits. In the office we have a collection of cones and natural curiosities of the coast, and a standing exhibit of cocoons and silk of our own raising.

Those who have visited Woodward's Gardens will not fail to remember a picture opening from the pavilion into the tropic conservatory. Through a single plate of glass set in a gilt frame one sees into a wonderful miniature fernery, where beauty of form and grace of habit seem to reach perfection. Remembering this charming device, we incorporated it into the sideboard on the north wall of our dining room. When the ferns are grown, and we use of plantation ending in the village of Pasadena. The morning side of the house at this season is the western, commanding a view into the picturesque valley of the Arroyo Seco and its rugged hills. We have had no vain ambition to satisfy in this matter of house-building, but have simply endeavored to fit the dwelling to its environment; a different site would have called for a quite different treatment.

INCOMBUSTIBLE PAPER.—At the recent meeting of the French Societe d'Encouragement pour l'Industrie Nationale, M. G. Meyer, of Paris, submitted specimens of paper specially manufactured to resist fire. It was stated by him that the papers and documents shown had been for four hours in a retort in a pottery furnace, and it is further affirmed those present were unable to distinguish, either by appearance or texture, the papers so treated from others which had not undergone the ordeal of fire. From experiments made with a specimen of wall paper sent us, we are enabled to say that, although the appearance of the paper does not change, the fire resisting properties claimed for it are undoubted; the paper certainly does not ignite. The paper, we are informed, can be made of a quality suitable for deeds and other important documents, or of a quality suitable for wall paper, theatrical decorations, or in fact for any purpose for which paper is used. M. Meyer has also invented an incombustible ink and incombustible colors. Artists using those colors

Fireside Chats.

[Written by HILDA DELESTHER.]

Kerosene is something nearly every one has in the house, and it may be well to consider what good things are claimed for it besides the one great good with which we all are so familiar. One lady says:

"I keep a small bottle of it in a convenient place, and when my children complain of sore throat, I turn out just a little on a rag or on my fingers and rub over the outside, and the soreness generally disappears with two or three applications."

"I have just heard that taking two or three drops of kerosene on a lump of sugar, before meals and at bedtime, would cure a severe cough," said another lady.

But about using kerosene in the suds you boil your clothes in; oh, ever so many ladies have told me about that; still there may be hundreds of other ladies who never heard of this use for it, so I will tell you just what was told me, and what I have tried myself: Put your clothes to soak over night. In the morning put your wash-boiler on the stove with enough water to boil them in, or a portion of them, cut about half a bar of soap into the water, add three table-spoonfuls of kerosene, and then let the water come to a boil—be sure it boils, so the oil will mix with the suds—then put in your white clothes wrung from tub, let them boil the usual time, then suds and rinse them. If your men folks wear white shirts about the farm work, you may have to rub the sleeves before going in or after coming out of the boil. If you make the water they are soaked in a little warm in the morning, your children could wring them out for you if the wringer is not screwed down too tightly, so as to make it hard for the arms and shoulders. They can wring out of the sudsing also. Don't scold them if they drop a piece or meet with some little accident that might happen to your self. When they are big enough to help you, make it as pleasant for them as possible—so they will like it. If they are good at helping you, it will give you time to do something for them—dress a doll or cover a ball. Then won't their eyes shine!

Don't use turpentine in washing, as it will take the strength out of your hands. I know of one young woman, who, after using it a year, could not wring her clothes or carry a pile of dishes to the table. The turpentine is even poisonous to some people, as painters can testify. I have washed many times without boiling my clothes at all when I had very nice soap. But whoever has the quickest and most efficient way, that way I shall be glad to try.

Nearly every one who has had Chinamen wash for them complain that their clothes are torn and worn out so quickly. A lad from Oakland has just told me how he has seen them wash there. "We boys used to look through a knot-hole in the fence and see how they did it," said he. "They had a post by the side of a long tub, and one Chinaman would stir the clothes about in the tub and the other would take up the pieces and strike them against the post till they were clean; then he would throw them into another tub to rinse." I do not accuse other Celestials of washing in that way, as I do not know as they do; but I am sure they wear clothes out very fast, especially if they are very nice and fine.

DRIVING MACHINERY BY SAND.—An American paper gives an interesting account of the method recently adopted by Mr. J. Townsend, of Virginia City, to run a number of arrastras by sand. The arrastras are placed in a light sandy field, where only sufficient water for drinking purposes and to moisten the ore to be operated upon can be obtained. The sand drives a large overshot wheel, taking the place of water. It was at first Mr. Townsend's intention to run the arrastras by means of a large windmill, but as the speed was naturally irregular, he adopted the present method. The windmill now runs a belt containing a number of buckets, and these carry sand up to a large tank, somewhat in the way that grain elevators carry wheat. A stream of sand being let out upon the overshot wheel causes it to revolve, just as it would under the weight of a stream of water, and thus far the method is said to have been found very successful. When there is a considerable wind, sand is stored up for use when calms prevail, and in this manner the mills may run continuously.

The steamer Otter has brought to Victoria $1,600 in gold dust, which was obtained from McDame and party, which they discovered on a new creek, a tributary of the Skeena. The party panned out from eight to twenty dollars per day by hand, and they will winter in the new diggings, expecting great results.

staircase hall, is a cozy apartment. Its balcony or veranda is made to serve three stories, as it gives a balcony to the three chambers, and covers one entrance to the basement. One of the most difficult problems in home-building is the placing of bath-rooms, water-closets, wood-houses and sculleries, so as to meet the demands of convenience, good taste and sanitary science. Luckily for us, we are set on a hill; thereby the question of thorough drainage was not troublesome, but, on the other hand, the sightliness of the location forbade a "lean-to," or backyard, and not even a clothes-line was admissible here; hence the conservatory, with tank-house over the bath-room, seen on the right of the picture. The broad steps leading from the east veranda cover a woodhouse and water-closet, which are entirely concealed from sight, either from within or the outside. By placing the main story bath-room and closets in the end of the conservatory protection, perfect drainage was secured, and the necessity of having any soil or water pipe running under or within the dwelling obviated.

We could afford only one bay window, but have the full interior effect of seven others, by placing the windows in the corners of the rooms wherever practicable. This plan greatly improves the appearance of the rooms, and gives better space for furniture. Poles and simple brackets hold the curtains, which make cozy alcoves of all these window corners. Wooden mantels and brick fireplaces help to keep the expression of a country home, which marble or artificial stone would have spoiled. All woodwork of the interior is oiled or shellacked. The vertical boarding of the upper story is the hardier native species, one may see over their fronds the magnificent contour of the Sierra Madre, a living picture of priceless beauty, yet of trifling actual cost.

This dining-room is exactly a reproduction in most of its details of the Spanish adobe house. The square hearth tiles were once before the altar of the Mission Church at San Gabriel, and were many years since replaced by a wooden floor. Thus we have truly a consecrated hearth, worn by use of hundreds of worshippers, who have left no other trace of their existence.

We have a crane, too, in the capacious fireplace, and the seat in the corner window has hinged covers, the space below holding the newspapers and other rubbish which is in the housekeeper's way. In another corner we have a large wood-box. The kitchen and laundry are supplied with hot and cold water.

There are no fixed washstands in the house, except in the bath-rooms. The tank supplying the chamber story receives the water from the roof, and also from the main reservoir which supplies Pasadena, the overflow passing into a hopper communicating directly with the principal drain. This, it was believed, would secure the best sanitary conditions. It will be noticed that the plan of the three stories is very much the same, which is an economical arrangement. The space over the library is converted into two apartments, en suite, with a side hall, which opens by a sash-door upon the large balcony roof of the east veranda. This balcony commands a magnificent view; the Villa Madre, Kinneyloa, and a score of charming mansions in the foothills seem almost within speaking distance. The orange avenue and vineyard of Carmelita are in the foreground, the long lines may preserve their works to a certain extent; but the invention would appear to be of the greatest value to theatrical managers. By using thick cardboard of M. Meyer's material, together with his paints, they are able to render their scenery unflammable. At the same time, for documents of importance, deeds, wills and agreements, the invention should come into universal use.

ADULTERATIONS OF TEA.—In the Sanitary Engineer of June 1, 1880, is the statement that 7,000 chests of adulterated tea have been recently burned by order of the British government. An analysis of many samples, taken at random, showed 65 per cent of adulteration. In each 100 pounds of tea there were 65 pounds of poisonous adulterations. Eleven different poisons were detected, some of them deadly. Probably the worst of the Chinese teas come to America. The Chinese know that the British government watches and analyzes, while we Americans ask no questions. A large percentage of the stomach pain and indigestion among American women may be traced to tea.

The United States Supreme Court has decided that self-killing by an insane person understanding the physical nature and consequences of his act, but not its moral aspect, is not death by suicide within the meaning of the condition in the policy of insurance upon his life; that the policy shall be void in case he should die by suicide.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also find suitable reading here for "Good of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

San Francisco, No. 4

The first monthly entertainment of this old pioneer was consummated at their Lodge room on Wednesday evening, 14th inst. The programme was made up from the best talent in this city, which was rendered as follows: Opening remarks by the M. W., Thos. Murray, who acted as master of ceremonies; piano duet, G. E. and C. E. Ehmann; grand aria, "Robert le Diable," Mrs. J. Forcade, accompanied by Miss Partridge; recitation, "Baseball," P. M. Ed. Carlson, well rendered and brought forth marked appreciation; piano duet, "Elisir d'Amour," Misses Lulu and Frida Blumenthal; reading, Bro. Frazer Smith; piano duet, "Hungarian Airs," Master S. and Miss K. Gruenbaum; trio, prison scene from "Il Trovatore," Mrs. J. Forcade, Miss Lena Partridge, and Mr. A. Loeb; piano solo, "Fra Diavolo," Miss Alice Tischler; recitation (by request), "The Theater," Mr. Milton Philbrook; piano solo, "Home, Sweet Home," with variations, Mrs. J. Forcade; piano and violin cavatina from "Robert le Diable," Mr. A. Loeb; tenor solo, Frazer Smith; selections for violin, "Maritana," Master J. and Miss K. Gruenbaum.

Golden Dawn, No. 13, D. of H.

This Lodge, at its regular meeting, Saturday evening, the 9th inst., initiated Grand Master Rogers and his wife. After the meeting, remarks were made by Grand Master Rogers, Deputies F. S. Poland, E. Danforth, W. J. McKay, C. E. Carroll, P. M. W. Reading, and Brother S. A. White. After this, the doors were opened and the following programme was presented: Instrumental trio, by the Golden Dawn Band; piano solo, Mrs. C. H. Steele; vocal solo, Sam Booth; instrumental duet, cornet and piano, Mr. and Mrs. Payson; piano solo, Miss Fanny Danforth; comic song, Sam Booth. Refreshments were then partaken of. This Lodge is growing rapidly, and will move into the new hall of Excelsior Lodge as soon as completed.

Valley, No. 30.

The members of Valley, No. 30, have started in to make their membership reach 1,000 during this term. Seven candidates received the J. W. Degree on the 21st of November, making 972 now upon the roll. There is little doubt but that their anticipated celebration will take place at the end of this term.

Spartan, No. 36.

The brethren of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, are making steps for the 200 mark in membership. On Friday evening, November 9th, the J. W. and M. W. Degree were each conferred on six candidates. In the absence of Bro. Smith, M. W., the Foreman, Bro. Clements, filled the position of M. W., and rendered the work, under the supervision of District Deputy Danforth. It would seem to be almost superfluous to mention the manner in which the work was done, as it is generally known and conceded that the officers of Spartan Lodge are letter-perfect, and perform the ceremony with dignity and exactness. A noticeable feature of the evening was the excellent personnel of the gentlemen who received the M. W. Degree. At the close of the work it was quite a season for congratulation on the good prospect of Old Spartan, and the fact that their Foreman, Bro. Clement, had performed the duty of M. W. in a masterly and perfect manner. Brother Workmen who will visit this thrifty Lodge will always find a royal welcome and spend a pleasant evening.

Burns, No. 68.

Burns Lodge, No. 68, will celebrate their fifth anniversary on Wednesday evening, Dec. 5th, by a grand ball at B'nai B'rith building. These brethren never do things by halves, and we may expect a very enjoyable affair.

Olympic, No. 127.

Olympic Lodge, No. 127, will receive its friends on Tuesday evening, December 11th, at Washington Hall, No. 35 Eddy street.

Bay View, No. 159.

A delegation from our City Lodges made a visit to Bay View, No. 159, on Friday evening, the 17th inst. Deputies Lemont, Carroll and McKay were of the company, and Bro. Lask, P. M. W., Thompson, P. M. W., and a small number representing several Lodges made up the delegation. One petition was received, and the M. W. Degree was conferred on one candidate. By request of the M. W., Bro. Giles, Deputy Carroll conferred the Degree, with the assistance of a very efficient corps of officers, Deputy Lemont having the honor of presenting the candidate his beneficiary certificate. After the congratulations, that are a part of the work on these occasions, speeches were made by Bros. Thompson, Lask, Lemont, Carroll, Jensen, McKay and others. This worthy subordinate is in a prosperous condition, and is about to adopt and incorporate into the Lodge regulations the system of sick benefits of $10 per week. The happy hours flew swiftly by, and as the dial of the clock indicated 11 o'clock, it was impressed on the minds of the San Francisco delegation that a season of pedestrian exercise was in store for them. This dilemma was bridged over by the generous brethren of Bay View, as they had provided carriages to carry their guests over the bridge and land them on Market street.

Memorial, No. 174.

Memorial Lodge, No. 174, will have a public installation and literary entertainment in their hall in Shields' building, on Monday, the 14th of January. It is expected to be a very enjoyable affair.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Occidental, No. 6.

A visit to Oakland's "old stand-by" on the 9th inst. found every thing running on as usual. You can never surprise Occidental. She is one of the kind that is always ready to receive company. Among the visitors present on that evening we noticed Brother Thomas Bedard, M. W., of Newark, No. 169, who had come down accompanying one of his members, who deposited his card with Occidental that evening. Occidental was largely instrumental in securing the success of the big anniversary entertainment recently held in Oakland.

Pacific, No. 7.

This progressive Lodge is making good plans to while away the hours and draw a good attendance these long winter evenings. At its last meeting a debate was held on the subject of a property qualification for suffrage to the amount of $150. The appointed disputants were Bro. Craven, principal of one of the grammar schools, and Grand Lecturer Vrooman on the affirmative, and Past Grand Master Jordan on the negative. A plan was also submitted whereby a committee of 26 members were appointed to furnish entertainment, as follows: taking the names alphabetically, each member of the committee is to prepare an address on paper upon some subject of general interest which he is to deliver, and which will then, if suitable be open for discussion. So Pacific has something of interest insured for each Lodge night for the next coming 26 weeks or half year. At this meeting also, resolutions of regard were adopted to their retiring Receiver, Bro. A. A. Guernsey, who has faithfully filled that position since the institution of the Lodge, but a change in whose business will now necessitate his absence from Lodge for a greater part of the time.

Mission, No. 56.

On Saturday, the 10th inst., the WATCHMAN editor took a respite from office cares and spent a day in the country with the brethren of Mission Lodge, No. 156, at the old Mission of San Jose. The location and history of this quaint old town makes it an interesting place to spend a short vacation. Beautifully situated back two miles from the railroad, with steep hills immediately in the background, and at the head of a long gentle slope, it commands a view of the beautiful Alameda Valley clear to the bay, and on a clear day the shipping and spires of the metropolis may easily be seen scattered before the eye. At brief intervals appear several villages situated but two or three miles from each other, and reminding one by their proximity of the famed New England towns. Immediately north is the pleasant town of Washington Corners, with its well advanced educational interests. Further on appears Niles, Decoto, Centerville and Newark. The old Mission was founded over a century ago by the ancient Spanish padres, and their memory is strongly marked by the numerous old abode buildings still in use, roofed over with baked earthen tiles. Also the efforts of their labors may yet be seen in the mammoth specimens of fruit trees, vines and olives yet standing and bearing. The old abode formerly used by them as a home, church and school, has been razed to the ground, and a large and handsome modern brick structure was erected in its place during the past year, at a cost of some $40,000. This is used as a theological seminary for the graduation of priests. Your representative was cordially received by the warm hearted brethren of the town, and many courtesies were extended to him. Gathered at the Lodge room in the evening we found a larger percentage of attendance out of the 100 and odd members belonging, than will often be found in any of our city Lodges. Bro. Thomas Scott is the M. W., and Bro. E. F. Calkin of the Alameda County Reporter, published at Washington Corners, is the Recorder. The business of the Lodge was transacted with dispatch. Under "Good of the Order," interesting remarks were made by several brothers, including County Superintendent P. M. Fisher, Bro. Huxley of the legal fraternity of that section, Bro. Wamsley, R. R. station agent at the Corners, and Bro. Bedard, M. W. of Newark, No. 169. Mission, No. 56, is said to be known as the "blackballing Lodge," so closely do they scrutinize their candidates, and the result is as fine a looking lot of men as one may often see in a Lodge room. One thing somewhat unusual among his class, and yet praiseworthy, as indicating his independence of mind, is the attitude of the parish priest toward the Lodge. While not favoring secret societies in general he says that he has studied the aims and objects of the A. O. U. W. and finds no objection thereto, and as a consequence a goodly number of parishioners belong here, and the Lodge was permitted by him to attend in a body and in their regalia the funeral ceremonies of a deceased brother who had been a member of his congregation. The new Lodge hall which is being erected by Past Master Ehrman is fast approaching completion, and the Lodge expects to occupy it by January. It is quite a handsome building, the lower story of which will be used as a store. The following morning Bro. D. W. Baker the enterprising livery man of the town carried us back to the train in one of his fine rigs. Since writing the foregoing, we read of an accidental fire that occurred in the Lodge room of Mission on the following Lodge night, caused by the capsizing of the chandelier, which caused considerable consternation, but was finally put out with but nominal damage.

Bay District, No. 226.

A visit to this young Lodge situated at Emery Station, better known as The Stockyards, between Oakland and Berkeley, last Tuesday night found them with their organization completed, and affairs beginning to run like an old Lodge. The candidate initiated at the last meeting makes the membership 22. A number of them are old members of Hearts of Oak, No. 61, of West Berkeley. Following is a list of their officers: James Potts, P. M. W.; Francis E. Corder, M. W.; T. Ayden, F.; H. Kurze, O; Fred H. Pendleton, Rdr.; John McCarty, Fin.; J. F. Bohrer, Rvr.; A. Leonard, G.; W. Engelhart, I. W.; M. Haggerty, O. W.

FRESNO COUNTY.

The Grand Master's Visit to Yosemite, 171.

From a note from Bro. A. J. Pedlar, Recorder of Yosemite, No. 171, we extract some notes of interest concerning the visit of Grand Master Rogers to that Lodge. We hope that other Recorders and members in general will furnish us news of the Grand Master's southern tour, so that we may be able to publish accounts from every Lodge so visited. Bro. Pedlar says: Last night was a most pleasant one so far as Yosemite is concerned. After a most practical and eloquent address by G. M. W. Rogers, delivered to the public in general, we assembled in the Lodge room and conferred both degrees upon Bro. Chas. J. Hobler. Bro. Rogers is doing a very good work and doing it unostentatiously. His tour will certainly be of great benefit to the Order. With fraternal regard, Yours Truly, A. J. PEDLAR, Recorder.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Los Angeles, No. 55, and Southern California, No. 191.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—As it has been some time since I have noticed any thing from this county, please allow me to use a small space in your valuable paper. The A. O. U. W. in this county is in the most prosperous condition at the present time that it ever has been since the Order was instituted here. All of the Lodges in the county are steadily increasing in membership, and are doing great good for our beloved Order. We expect to have Bro. J. T. Rogers, Grand Master, with us on the evening of the 23rd and 24th. The evening of the 23rd will be the Lodge night of Los Angeles, No. 55, at which time Southern California, No. 191, will meet in conjunction with No. 55; also, the Recorders of both Lodges have sent a cordial invitation to all the Lodges in the county to be with us on that evening, as the order of business will be initiations, etc. On the following evening (24th), the two Lodges will tender a grand reception to Grand Master Rogers, at Turn Verein Hall, and will have the public at large to hear our most worthy Grand Master on the "Good of the Order." The exercises for that evening will be: Opening ode; quartet; recitation; solo; address of welcome; address by G. M. W. J. T. Rogers; closing ode. There is more fraternal feeling showed here now with the A. O. U. W. than has ever been before. We all have the good of the Order at heart. The A. O. U. W. does not stand second to any Order in this city socially or fraternally.

Last evening a Legion of the Select Knights was instituted here by Supreme Deputy W. A. Fox. The name of the Legion is California Legion, No. 1, being the first instituted in the state, and it is my opinion that the Supreme Lodge in its session of 1882 did one of the grandest things for the good of the Order when it passed upon and recognized the Select Knights, a report of which may be found on the Journal, page 644, of that session. California Legion, I think, will close its charter with 65 or 75 Master Workmen in good standing. Thirty-two signed the roll-book last Friday evening, and were instructed in the work. The following are the officers elected and installed: Select Commander, Al. Cobler; Vice-Commander, W. Deveraux; Lieut. Commander, W. H. H. Russell; Re-cordier, C. H. White; Treasurer, Albert Brown; Recording Treasurer, A. C. Doan; Chaplain, S. A. Widney; Standard-bearer, M. V. Biscaluz; Senior Workman, J. R. Fletcher; Junior Workman, E. C. Glidden; Marshal, M. L. Gilman, Guard of the Legion, A. B. Chapman; Trustees, E. C. Glidden, A. Norton, J. C. Judson. The Legion starts off in the most flourishing condition, and I hope that other parts of the state will do likewise.

Our Degree of Honor Lodges in this county are also doing a good work. Fidelity, No. 14, has a membership of 78, and at Oak Grove, No. 27, of Newhall, almost the entire membership of Workmen and their families are with them. With my sincere best wishes for our beloved Order wherever it exists, I remain, fraternally,

Fortuna, No. 13.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Several weeks ago George R. Walden, P. M. W. of Fortuna Lodge, No. 13, at Napa, addressed a letter to each Past Master Workman who was either a member or a resident of Napa District, stating that it had been suggested that the Past Master Workmen of that District form an association for the purpose of observing and celebrating in an appropriate manner the anniversaries of our distinguished Order, and requesting each to attend a meeting in Napa, on Saturday evening, October 27, 1883, the fifteenth anniversary of the founding and naming of the Order. A majority of the Past Masters favored the suggestion, and accordingly there met together, in the Revere House parlor, the following seven Past Master Workmen: Dr. J. W. Hostetler, of Valley, No. 30, C. R. Gritman, J. W. Ward, Jr., Wm. West, E. S. Gridley, G. R. Walden, and T. N. Mount, of Fortuna, No. 13.

Bro. Gritman was chosen Chairman and Bro. Mount Secretary. Bro. Walden was called upon to present the objects of the proposed society, when he stated that the observance of our anniversaries would benefit, encourage and inspire us in our labor for the Order; that the Past Masters, because of their experience, long service and deep interest, ought to convene together and commemorate the historical occasions of the Order; that the idea was yet in a crude form, but was given for others to develop if it was deemed worthy. Bro. Ward enlarged upon the idea, and presented the advantages of a free exchange of opinions upon our works, and spoke of the possible growth of such an association. Bro. Hostetler favored the proposed society because of its increasing sociability and fraternal friendship. Bros. Ward, Hostetler and West were appointed a committee to report on officers and rules necessary for organization. The report was presented and adopted, and the following brothers were elected: C. R. Gritman, President; J. W. Ward, Vice-President; T. N. Mount, Secretary. The name adopted for the society was "The Upchurch Association of Past Master Workmen of Napa County."

Bros. Gridley and West then read Supreme Recorder Sackett's report to the Supreme Lodge on the origin of the A. O. U. W. and its original constitution. This was very interesting and appropriate. The brothers then partook of bountiful refreshments generously provided by President Gritman. A merry good time followed. President Gritman spoke earnestly in reply to the toast, "The prosperity of our Association." Bro. Ward made an eloquent speech upon "The health, long life and happiness of Father Upchurch, Past Supreme Master Workman of the A. O. U. W." This toast was drunk by the brothers all standing. "The prosperity of the life insurance feature of our Order" was replied to in a very happy manner by Bro. Hostetler, who presented a convincing argument based upon the historical facts in the life of the insurance companies and of the fraternal societies for the past 20 years, proving the greater safety and smaller cost of the latter. Bro. Ward gave great praise to this protective feature, as a means of bringing many families out of the dangers of distress caused by the loss of their only support. After many happy remarks about the wonderful growth of the Order in its 15 years of life, and many earnest suggestions for the good of Fortuna Lodge, the Association adjourned its joyful celebration to meet Dec. 22d, 1883, to observe the anniversary of Fortuna Lodge, No. 13, and to receive the report of Bros. Hostetler, Ward and Mount, the committee appointed to draft resolutions for the government of the Association. GAREW.

A Calamity to Dixon, No. 50.

A dispatch from Bros. Frizzell and Davidson, M. W. and Recorder of this Lodge, says that their hall and the entire paraphernalia, and everything belonging to the Lodge were totally destroyed in the great quarter-of-a-million-dollar fire which recently occurred there. The Dixon Brethren have the profound sympathy of all Workmen, and their best wishes for a rapid recovery.

VENTURA COUNTY.

A New Lodge—Colonia, No. 227.

Deputy R. H. Witherow organized Colonia Lodge, No. 227, at Hueneme, Ventura County, on the 9th inst., with the following officers: T. B. Perkins, P. M. W.; H. W. Olds, M. W.; George Parrott, F.; James Rasmussen, O.; M. O. Anderson, R.; W. H. Jewitt, F.; Joseph Dunn, R.; E. B. Fairhaws, G.; Robert Bell, J. W.; A. Hutching, O. W. The new Lodge starts off with fine prospects, and we hope to hear favorable reports there right along.

YUBA COUNTY.

Sharon, No. 142.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—By a friendly and fraternal feeling of the brethren of Sharon Lodge, we concluded to celebrate our fourth anniversary by giving a public ball on the evening of Nov. 8th, at Mr. William Howell's hotel, at Brownsville, with the understanding that intoxicating liquors were not to be sold. We looked forward to the event with joyous anticipations of having a general good time, but the day before the dance it began to rain and kept it up till nearly night of the next day. But we were kindly treated by Mr. and Mrs. Howell. The crowd was rather small. The hall was large and spacious for the number of persons assembled, and well lighted. The accommodations were ample and comfortable, and the music splendid. The dance commenced at 7 o'clock, and every thing went lively as a marriage bell. Everybody was sociable and friendly, the ladies in particular, but I do not feel master of words to express my appreciation and thanks to them for the noble part they performed. With some little exceptions all express themselves well pleased, and say they had a splendid time. But this letter would not be complete without I said a word for our Guide and brother, J. S. Iler, who had charge of selling the tickets and settling up the affairs of the dance. I think he deserves the thanks of all the brothers of this Lodge for the faithful way he did his part. Respectfully, A. D. ARNETT, Recorder, pro tem.

Brownsville, Cal., Nov. 12th.

IN his response to the toast, "Officers and Members of the Grand Lodge, Past and Present," at the Excelsior banquet, Past Grand Master Brewer paid the WATCHMAN a handsome compliment, saying that by its ex officio position as a member of that body it had proved itself an indispensable and invaluable ally and friend.

exerting their salutary influence within its walls, and may that influence be so diffused that it shall be a blessing to the Lodge, the Order, and humanity. The brethren will join hands while the Past Grand Master invokes the Divine blessing."

P. G. M. W.—"Our Heavenly Father, without whose aid the builder's work is vain, we pray thy blessing on the work this day begun, and as it shall progress grant unto it thy continued favor and protection, that no untoward accident nor incident may hinder its successful completion. We pray thy blessing on all the brethren here assembled, on the officers and members of every Lodge, Supreme, Grand and Subordinate. Bind us together in the performance of every good work, to the honor and upbuilding of our Order and the glory of thy name. Amen."

The Excelsior quartet then sang the following "Ode to Fraternity," to the tune of "Hollingside":

From the cold and silent earth
Hail we now our temple's birth;
Beam and rafter here we raise,
In our Order's lasting praise,
Spire and dome, behold them rise,
Towering grandly to the skies,
While we sing in ecstasy
In thy praise, Fraternity.

Here, may every grace abound,
Here, sweet peace be ever found;
Here, may love our spirits bind,
Weakness here Protection find.
All our hopes rejoice this day,
As in Faith this stone we lay,
And we sing exultingly
In thy praise, sweet Charity.—Amen.

The brethren then marched back to their old hall, in the order before noted, and regalia being laid aside, a goodly number went and inspected the architectural features of the hall, which is fast approaching completion. A pleasing feature of the occasion was the distribution by Bro. A. K. Hollis, of the Mission Journal, of pamphlet copies of the history of Excelsior Lodge, as heretofore printed in the WATCHMAN, and pictures of the Lodge, on card board, the cut being substantially the same as the one published herewith, which we are able to produce through the courtesy of said brother. The description of the hall and its manner of erection have been fully noticed in previous numbers of the WATCHMAN.

The Banquet.

Gathering at the reception rooms of the Palace Hotel at about 8 o'clock in the evening, the members of Excelsior Lodge and their invited guests, to the number of over one hundred, and including the Grand Lodge Officers and other prominent Workmen, were escorted to the grand dining hall of the Palace, where across the upper end were ranged two long tables parallel to each other and within such close proximity that conversation could be carried on between them. Seated here, the hearts of all warmed to each other, under the genial and inspiring influence of a sumptuous spread. When, accordingly, Bro. Booth, Master of Ceremonies, opened the programme, all were in the most receptive and responsive mood for intellectual enjoyment, and none were disappointed. Preceding the announcement of the toasts, the company were entertained by a piano solo, from Bro. Hahn, the talented Organist of Excelsior. The responses to the toasts were invariably happy and to the point, and few if any exceeded five minutes in length. The following is a list of

The Toasts, Responses, Music, Etc.

Music, quartet, "The Toast"—Bros. Clark, White, Booth and Parent.

Toast, "Our Order, the Ancient Order of United Workman—May its usefulness be equal to its perpetuity, and may the one be infinite and the other eternal." Response by Supreme Master Workman M. W. Fish.

"The Grand Lodge of California—May its endeavors be equal to its ambition, and may its achievements surpass both." Response by Grand Master Workman J. T. Rogers.

"The Subordinate Lodges—United we stand, divided we fall." Response by Grand Lecturer Henry Vrooman.

"The City Lodges—May they be schools whose graduates shall be examples of the best citizenship and the most exalted patriotism." Response by Past Deputy Grand Master Loud.

Trio, "Mynheer Van Dunk"—Bros. Clark, Booth and Parent.

"Our Sister Lodges in the Country—Country cousins whom we are always glad to see in town." Response by Grand Overseer Duncan McPherson, of Santa Cruz.

"Our brethren over the Bay—Who planted the seeds of the noble tree under whose hospitable branches we so securely rest." Response by Grand Recorder Horace G. Pratt.

"The Officers and members of the Grand Lodge, past and present—

"The old guard of veterans, none wiser or truer, From Pratt, Haile and Jordan, Fish, Taylor and Brewer, To Rogers, McPherson, Davis, Barnes and McClure."

Response by Past Grand Master Brewer.

"The District Deputy Grand Masters—Trusty lieutenants in the grand army of the A. O. U. W." Response by District Deputy Grand Master Danforth.

"The Degree of Honor—A help-mate of our noble Order." Response by Past Grand Master Barnes.

Glee, "Here's a Health to all Good Lasses"—Bros. Clark, Booth and Parent.

"Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, A. O. U. W."

"A noble band of loving brothers,
The best and truest we have known,
The Lodge we love above all others,
Because, forsooth, it is our own."

Response by Master Workman J. W. Howard.

"Our New Lodge Hall—Where we shall always be at home to our friends, and never in dread of the rent day." Response by Bro. T. V. O'Brien.

"C., H. and P.—Charity, Hope and Protection—Three guardian angels, ever ready to minister to the needy, the despairing, and the helpless of our Order." Response by Past Grand Master W. H. Jordan.

"The Board of Relief—The good Samaritans of our Order, whose oil and wine are ever ready for the destitute and distressed." Response by Past Master Workman E. M. Reading.

Quartet (original), "Charity"—Bros. Clark, White, Booth and Parent.

"The Press—The WATCHMAN and Sentinel on the walls of our citadel, warning us alike of danger from without and anarchy within." Response by Bro. W. B. Turner, of the WATCHMAN.

Finale, "Our Country—The land of our birth, the land of our adoption, the land of our love." Response by all present, to music, "America."

Shortly after 11 o'clock the party dispersed, with three cheers for Excelsior, which were returned by the members of that Lodge with a hearty good will.

JAMES S. CLUFF.—This esteemed brother, and a member of one of the leading mercantile firms of this city, was suddenly stricken down lately by acute inflammation. At the time of his death he was a member of Hercules Lodge, No. 53, A. O. U. W., a member of King Solomon's Lodge, F. and A. M., and a Knight of Honor. At the time of his death he was only 33 years of age, a leading merchant and citizen, and highly esteemed by all who knew him. The obsequies were conducted by F. J. Kremple, of the firm of Kremple & Halsted, and under the auspices of his brethren of King Solomon's Lodge, F. and A. M. The services and ceremonies were performed in the Masonic Temple, in King Solomon's Hall, which was too small to hold the large concourse of friends in attendance. Rev. F. F. Jewell delivered a short and affecting address, and large delegations of brethren of the A. O. U. W. and K. of H. were present. The floral decorations were costly and appropriate.

DISTRICT ENTERTAINMENT.—District No. 1, of which E. Danforth is Deputy, are making preparations to give a grand entertainment, social and ball at Platt's Hall, on the 29th inst. Elaborate preparations have been made and steps taken to make this an affair that will be notable in our history. Quite a number are in high expectations concerning the event.

EVENING STAR LODGE, No. 23, D. of H., has removed to No. 18 Eddy street,

The Distant Sierra.

(Written by J. W. A. WRIGHT.)

No quality of the air of California, and of the Pacific Coast generally, is more marked than its transparent clearness, especially during the greater part of winter and spring. In this regard our Pacific atmosphere quite equals the noted Italian skies. One result of this peculiar transparency is a wonderfully distinct view, at times, of our most distant mountain ranges, and the clear-cut outlines of the foothills. The distant view of the grand cone of Mt. Shasta, from many points in the Sacramento Valley, is a noted illustration of this fact. But it is neither boasting nor exaggeration to say that there is no part of California where so distinct and extended a view can be obtained, on our clearest days, of the snowy peaks, ridges and crests of

Our Higher Sierra.

As throughout Fresno and Tulare counties, particularly along the line of the railway, from Madera on the north to Tipton on the south. From the whole Mussel Slough district this entire view is peculiarly fine, for three reasons: 1. The regions around Hanford, Lemoore and Grangeville are a little south of west, or directly opposite the highest masses of the Sierra Nevada—the Mt. Whitney and Mt. Kaweah groups; 2. These grand mountain masses rise much more abruptly—from the Tulare and Fresno plains, and are nearer to them—in any other part of California; 3. Mussel Slough, like Wild-as seen from our broad plains, aided by every possible source of information, including conferences with such mountaineers as Mr. Frank Dusy, Prof. Gustav Eisen, and Judge W. B. Wallace, has enabled the writer to fix with certainty most of the localities and peaks named with the engraving.

Looking slightly north of east from Hanford or vicinity, any clear winter day, one sees, through a deep notch or gorge in the foothills, two huge white cone-shaped mountain masses. The larger and higher one is to the left, and is undoubtedly

Mount Lyell.

Named after Sir Charles Lyell, the eminent English geologist. That to the right is Mt. Ritter, named in honor of the noted German geographer Carl Ritter. The depression through which they are seen is the canyon through which the San Joaquin enters our plains near Millerton. Mt. Lyell is interesting as a landmark, for there the county lines of Fresno, Merced and Mono meet. It is interesting as a river-source, the main San Joaquin and its north fork having their extreme sources on its eastern and southern slopes, while the Merced rises on its northern and western sides. It is interesting for its living glaciers, discovered there by John Muir at least ten years ago. And, by the way, the living glaciers announced as discovered recently by an explorer west of Mono Lake, are most likely those well known glaciers of Mt. Lyell, for these are just west of Mono Lake. The white peaks and ridges, some ten miles west or to the left of Mt. Lyell, are the United States officer in command of the Signal Service and scientific expedition to Mt. Whitney, in August and September, 1881.

The second peak southward from Mt. Hazen is Milestone Mountain, long known in this valley by the tall granite obelisk surmounting it. It is also called "The Old Man." On a very clear day this obelisk can be distinguished by the naked eye, but it is more readily seen with a good glass. Immediately to the right and left of Milestone Mountain, and about equidistant from it, are two prominent peaks. The one north was named, in 1881, Mt. Michaelis; the one south, Mt. Langley, after the commander and scientist of the expedition above named. These names, with a number of others, were given from the summit of Mt. Whitney, on the morning of September 6th, 1881, when the writer, with his friends, Judge W. B. Wallace of Visalia, and Rev. F. H. Wales of Tulare City, enjoyed the treat of being in that grand region with the government expedition, whose work was then described in the public journals.

No. 10 is Mt. Michaelis, and No. 12 Mt. Langley. We have now reached that part of our vast mountain range which presents in winter far the grandest view to be had from our plains of any portion of the Sierra Nevada. The artist has so well represented this part of the view that it will be readily recognized by any who have seen it. Through a deep depression in the foothills this most Arctic-looking region of the Sierras shows most conspicuously; the great mountain masses, their ridges, can-vicinity a distant group of peaks in the great eastern divide is readily seen with a good glass, especially from the Court-house dome, one of which has the noted helmet-shape of Mt. Whitney, and other marks, that make it quite certain that we can see Mt. Whitney from there, looking through the deep gorge of King's River. It assuredly has much the same appearance that Mt. Whitney presented to our party of three in the summer of 1881, after we became familiar with it, and saw it and its attendant peaks, Mts. Young, Hitchcock, Guyot, and Agassiz, day after day, as we moved with our pack animals northwest and west across the huge table-lands and ridges of the Kern and Kaweah rivers. It is also a fact worthy of record here, that, looking westward from the towering summit of Mt. Whitney, all the peaks and crests from Mt. Brewer (No. 6) to Bullion Peak (No. 21) presented very much the same outline against the western horizon as does this magnificent mountain profile present in reverse on the eastern horizon, when we look eastward from the plains of Tulare County. It is for this reason that we can so readily identify the several peaks named in 1881 and previously, as they appear in the original engraving herewith presented—the first attempt of the kind to represent with any accuracy an extended profile of our truly grand Sierra Nevada. We next come to

The Kaweah Buttes.

A peculiarly isolated, distinct group of peaks—the culminating peaks of the great western divide already mentioned. These were first explored, and their locality and surroundings accurately fixed by our party of three, in '81. Some half dozen of these sharp, high, precipitous peaks, evidently from a later and more direct volcanic action than the Whitney group, rise abruptly to altitudes 4,000 feet and more, from the extensive pine-clad table-land between Kern Canyon, on the main Kern, and Jenny Lind Canyon, through which flows Crabtree Creek, one of the chief tributaries of the Kern. Mt. Kaweah, No. 17, was the only one of these fine peaks named before our party visited them. This we ascended September 16th, and built a monument on its summit, which we found to be at least 14,000 feet above sea level. Just as Mt. Whitney had been first named by Clarence King, from the summit of Mt. Brewer, on the Fourth of July, 1864, so we by common agreement named the three high peaks in the group just northwest of Mt. Kaweah, from north to south, Mts. Abert, Henry, and Le Conte. The first, from Col. John J. Abert, who for thirty years or more was chief of the Topographical Engineers, U. S. A., and who fitted out the Fremont expedition, that first opened up California to American enterprise; the second, for Prof. Joseph Henry, who was so long the honored Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington; the third, for Prof. Joseph Le Conte, of our State University, who has done so much for the geology of California. These are numbered 14, 15 and 16, in the engraving, and are each 14,000 feet in height or upwards.

These magnificent peaks form the most conspicuous landmarks of our Sierra Nevada, as seen from the plains of Tulare and Fresno counties.

Next come 18, 19 and 20—Empire Mountain, Miners' Peak, and

Mount Garfield.

These belong to the Mineral King District, which was for some years the chief mining district of Tulare County, and is situated about eighty miles, by road, slightly north of east, from Hanford. Its wide metal-bearing ledges abound in silver, combined with lead, zinc, copper, and antimony.

The noted Empire mine of Hon. Thomas Fowler is in the western face of this Empire Mountain, the mouth of its great cave and tunnel being about 10,000 feet above the sea. At the base of this mountain the little mining town of Mineral King nestles cozily, at an altitude of nearly 8,000 feet. Nineteen and twenty appear as two great saw-teeth. The one to the left is Miners' Peak, also called by the miners "Half-Potato Hill." That to the right is Mt. Garfield, named under the following circumstances: September 21, 1881, the day after our party returned from exploring the upper Kern, Mr. Wales, Joseph Palmer, Mr. Lavelle, and others of us, made the ascent of Miners' Peak, which lies about four miles east of the town of Mineral King. While on its summit, we learned, by careful leveling, that the fine unnamed peak some four miles southeast of us was several hundred feet higher than Miners' Peak, which till then had been sup-flower, in Fresno County, lies so far west upon our broad plains that more of the snow-covered crests and peaks become visible than to an observer stationed nearer the foothills.

In the original sketch of the distant outlines of the Sierra herewith presented to the public, the artist has selected Hanford as a central point, noted for the superb view it offers of the snowy Sierras under a brilliant winter sky, when, so clear-cut are their contours, mountain masses and peaks from 60 to 80 miles distant in a straight line really appear not more than 10 or 15 miles from us. The view is from nature, and is true to nature. It is a wood-cut, from a pencil sketch by C. P. Cook, artist for W. W. Elliott & Co.* For vantage ground, the sketch was made from the tower of the water-works, at a height of 40 feet from the surface, looking eastward. In the foreground it represents, faithfully, the tops of buildings and trees in Hanford, the level plains beyond dotted with ranches; then the dark-colored foothills; and, crowning the background of the broad and enchanting scene, comes the continuous line of the snow-capped ridges and towering peaks of the highest Sierra of California.

View from Hanford.

For convenience in representing so long an outline as 120 miles of our truly magnificent mountain range, the sketch is divided into three parts. No. 1, above, begins on the left, at a point nearly north of Hanford, and No. 3, below, ends on the right at a point a little south of east from Hanford. A close study of this very grand and impressive scenery of nature for several years, among its splendid peaks, and elevations around Yosemite Valley. Mt. Lyell is 13,327 feet high, and is about 95 miles in a direct line from Hanford.

The eye, following the long, white crest to the southward, and passing over a number of minor peaks, comes to a high, sharp, regular cone, very conspicuous in its locality. This is

Mount Goddard.

Named after a civil engineer and mountain surveyor. From its northeastern slopes the south fork of the San Joaquin takes its rise, and on its south side numerous lakes form the sources of the middle fork of King's River. This handsome peak is No. 4 in the sketch. Its height is fully 14,000 feet.

Next, the letter "A" marks the location of Paradise Valley, or the canyon of the south fork of King's River, described by our mountain explorers as a "second Yosemite." No. 5 marks a handsome "saw-tooth," named after Prof. Silliman. It is 11,625 feet high, and is on the great western divide of the Sierra Nevada. Between this and a long, flat, table mountain, three high peaks are seen. These are the only ones marked in the engraving of which identification from our plains is at all uncertain. But that to the left, or north, is most likely Mt. Brewer, 13,886 feet high; the second, Mt. Williamson, about 14,400 feet; and Mt. Tyndall, 14,386 feet. These are numbered 6, 7, and 8. They were named after distinguished scientists, by Prof. Whitney's geological survey party, in 1864. The long, flat mountain immediately south of these is called on some of our older maps Table Mountain; but as there is a Table Mountain in Tuolumne County, and another near Millerton, a more distinguishing name for this mountain was needed. Hence, it was named Mt. Hazen, in honor of General Hazen, Chief Signal Officer, by Capt. Michaelis, the sons, seams, crests, and sharp-cut peaks, covered with virgin snow, and glittering in the sunshine.

The better to understand this portion of the Sierra Nevada, we must remember that from King's River Canyon, southward, for 60 miles or more, there are two great divides, or back-bones,—the western, on which are Mts. Silliman, Hazen, Milestone, and all from No. 14 to 21; and the eastern, on which are Mts. Kearsarge, at Kearsarge Pass, near Independence (not marked here), Mts. Tyndall, Williamson and Whitney. The latter divide is from 10 to 12 miles east of the former, and is the grand and precipitous western wall of Owen's River valley. From the neighborhood of Mt. Hazen is a lofty transverse wall running nearly due east to Mt. Williamson. This wall is the almost impassable divide between the headwaters of the south and middle forks of King's River, north of it, and the Kern and its tributaries, south of it.

Mount Whitney.

The highest and grandest of some half dozen comparatively isolated peaks, lies fully eight miles south of this dividing ridge, between King's and Kern rivers, and the only river that is fed by its melting snows, from its northern, western, or southern sides, is the Kern, merely a few insignificant streams flowing from its eastern face into Owen's River. Its position is marked, as nearly as can be, in the engraving, at No. 13. It so happens that the highest peaks in the western divide (the Kaweah Buttes) come directly between us and the Mt. Whitney group, so that Mt. Whitney is perhaps not visible from any part of Tulare County, unless it be from its most westerly portions, where we may, so to speak, overlook the high peaks intervening. It is true, however, that from Fresno City and

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSEMENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

The above was adopted by the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., April 5, 1883.

Favorable to Advertisers.

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

Interesting Statistics.

The following statistical death rate of Workmen under the several administrations was published by our efficient Deputy Grand Recorder, J. W. Watson. It is a subject that is worthy of close consideration, and establishes the fact that in the ratio of death rate the pioneers, or first 2,000 members, were better risks than the average membership admitted since, fewer dying in proportion to the time belonging:

"Looking from the beginning of the Order in California, Aug. 25, 1875, up to July 16, 1877, when California became a separate Jurisdiction with 2,000 members, we find that up to Nov. 1, 1883, averaging 6½ years, only 98 of this first or original 2,000 have died, or per year 7½ to 1,000. From this time to the closing of Bro. Jordan's administration as Grand Master, 7,000 members were added. Of this number, for a space of 4½ years, 210 have died, or per year 7 to 1,000. Under Bro. Taylor's administration 3,460 were added, of whom, for a space of 3¾ years, 82 have died, or per year of 6½ to 1,000. Under Bro. Barnes' first year's work, 3,500 were added, of whom, for a space of 2¾ years, 52 died, or 5½ to 1,000. His second year's work brought in 2,524, of whom for 1¾ years, 16 have died, or at the ratio of 1 8-9ths to 1,000. Under the administration of our present Grand Master, Bro. Rogers, about 900 have been added for the past 7 months, and of this 900 no deaths have been reported."

AN interesting communication from Bro. John Strickley, M. W. of West Mountain Lodge, No. 4, of Utah, is unavoidably crowded over until next issue.

A. O. U. W. Relief Committee.

This auxiliary, that has been created by the humanitarian and benevolent principles of our Order, has headquarters in a cozy suite of rooms in Shiels' Building, No. 32 O'Farrell street. The General Committee is composed of Sub-Committees appointed from each of our city Lodges. Under their rules and regulations one member is in attendance on each week-day night from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock, whose duty is to receive applications for relief, and generally to give any information in procuring employment. It was anticipated by many that this would be a lonesome task. As a result of the demands and for assistance and information, these headquarters have become quite a popular place of resort among Workmen. A large number of the leading periodicals have donated papers of their daily and weekly issue. And a number of our prominent business men and Workmen have donated pictures and fixtures to ornament the rooms, among whom are Geo. Jordan, P. M. W., of 433 Montgomery street, jeweler; Taber, photographer, of 8 Montgomery street; C. W. Decker, dentist, Phelan's Building; Louis Dampf, dealer in frames and pictures, 727 Market street; Hermann the hatter, of 336 Kearny street; Hardie & Darling, carpets and wall-paper, 729 Market street; Terry & Co., furniture dealers; Kraker & Israel, dealers in fancy goods on Market street; Frank J. Symmes, P. M. W., dealer in gas fixtures; Thos. Day & Co., Sutter street; Geo. Curtis, with O. Lawton & Co., crockery dealers on Post street; H. Schaffner, with Crocker & Co.; Schultz & Fisher, manufacturing jewelers, Market street; R. Herring, with West Coast Furniture Co.; S. M. Cox, with Hawley Hardware Co.; J. S. Thomson, P. M. W., sign painter; T. Vice, carpenter, and others. The A. O. U. W. Relief Committee are doing good and commendable work, and are giving their time and best efforts to help our brother Workman. We commend their efforts and hope our city Lodges will continue to do as they have done in the past.

Since the foregoing was put in type we have received the following circular which has been issued by the General Relief Committee for the City and County of San Francisco, and speaks for itself:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Nov., 1883.

To Members of Subordinate Lodges, A. O. U. W., wherever existing:—DEAR SIRS AND BROS:—Permanent headquarters have been established by the General Relief Committee, A. O. U. W., City and County of San Francisco, in Shiels' Building, 32 O'Farrell street, rooms 6 and 7.

A member of the committee will be in attendance every evening (Sunday excepted) from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and on Sunday from 11 A. M. to 12 M., for the purpose of receiving and granting applications for relief, and the procurement of places for those in search of employment.

Besides the two objects for which the committee is organized, as above referred to, the rooms are intended as a bureau of information relative to matters appertaining to the Order, and for the purpose of affording brothers from the far and distant Lodges a place where they can mingle and meet with members of the Order, both socially and fraternally.

The daily press of this city kindly furnish the morning and evening papers for the use of members of the Order.

Writing material is convenient for those desirous of corresponding, and all means will be taken to make a visit as pleasant and agreeable as one could wish for.

To this end we cordially invite you, whenever you visit our city, to make these rooms your "headquarters." We are fraternal, and intend to carry out fraternity and good feeling to the utmost in our power; and no one, whether from our own jurisdiction or from another, shall go away displeased, but will bear with him the knowledge that "California Workmen" are brothers in every sense of the word and mean to build up and continue our beloved organization.

Come one, come all, and make yourselves at home. Fraternally,

HARRY J. LASK, of No. 8, President.

A. F. BELL, of No. 53, Vice-President.

C. C. GILMORE, of No. 42, Secretary.

C. W. NEVIN, of No. 174, Treasurer.

D. C. Breed, of No. 4; Z. T. Whitten, of No. 9; J. W. Blake, of No. 14; R. P. Sanches, of No. 19; J. M. Baird, of No. 27; C. W. Decker, of No. 30; M. A. Smith, of No. 36; Caleb Brind, of No. 41; M. S. Cox, of No. 44; Isaac Birnbaum, of No. 60; Gustave Pohlmann, of No. 68; H. S. Gray, of No. 73; Richard Herring, of No. 126; Geo. W. Dixon, of No. 127; N. T. James, of No. 136; Thos. Brown, of No. 159; Bernard Sherry, of No. 179; W. I. McKay, of No. 180; Frederick Luhrs, of No. 185.

OFFICE OF GRAND MASTER WORKMAN OF CAL., UTAH CITY, MENDOCINO COUNTY, November 6, 1883.

Harry J. Lask, President General Relief Committee:—DEAR SIR AND BRO:—Consent is hereby granted to send out the above circular. May your anticipations be fully realized in the manifest appreciation of our brothers for your good work.

God grant that fraternity sanctify each dollar you so liberally give.

Yours in C., H. and P.,

J. T. ROGERS, G. M. W.

Financial Statement of the Order.

The monthly report of the Supreme Recorder shows that in the five funds—General, Relief, Beneficiary and Contributed Beneficiary—the Supreme Receiver had in his hands $2,423.34 on Oct. 1st, and received up to Nov. 1st, $21,541.45, making a total of $23,964.79. He paid out warrants for $21,967.01, leaving a balance of $1,997.78. The Supreme Recorder furnishes the following summary for the month of September, 1883:

Grand Lodges.	Total Beneficiary Received.	Total Beneficiary Disbursed.	Total Membership

* No report. Membership estimated by Supreme Recorder.

† The amount disbursed by the Supreme Lodge includes also the disbursements of Grand Lodges under the immediate jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge, viz: Ohio, Ky., Ga., Ala., Miss., N. Car., S. Car. and Fla., Texas, Nev. and Col., N. M. and Ariz.
‡ Includes $3,900 Relief Fund.

Comparing this with last month's statement, we find that of the two leading states New York increased 55 and California 62 during the month. Total increase for six months ending October 1, 1883, 7,185, of which New York has gained 503 and California 428. The total payments for September compared with the membership in good standing shows that it cost each member $1.18 to carry his guarantee of $2,000 for the month, and to send $2,000 to each of the homes of 75 deceased brethren. And in the language of P. G. M. Barnes, "This is the Order in its 16th year of which it was written in 1871 'could not possibly exist over 10 years before its own weight would crush it, as it was based upon principles entirely antagonistic to well known standard expectancies.' But it still lives, and its death rate is not so high now as it was then."

JAMES SIMPSON, M. D.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always inclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

NEXT month we will send out, with our usual reports, blanks for semi-annual reports, ritual receipts and Representatives' certificates. The semi-annual reports are to be made by all Lodges, whether meeting weekly or semi-monthly, and should be forwarded by the Recorder at once, after the first week in January. In case officers should not be installed on the first meeting night in January, the report should be sent and the duplicate shown to the Deputy that he may collect the correct amount of per capita tax and then leave the paper with the Lodge. The Deputy should in no case retain the report, but after inspection return it to the Recorder. It is the duty of the Recorder to forward the semi-annual report, and of the Deputy to collect and forward the tax. All Lodges elect officers in December, except where instituted in the last half of the present term; Lodges meeting semi-monthly form no exception to the rule. Immediately after the election of Representatives, in the second week in January, one of the blanks sent should be filled and forwarded to this office, and the others handed to the Representatives, or to one of them as the case may be. The blanks themselves contain full instructions, but some people have a fashion of being forgetful.

OUR deceased brother John A. Watson, whose obituary notice from his Lodge appears elsewhere, took by mistake carbolic acid for cough medicine, on the evening of the 9th instant, and died in a few minutes. At the time of his death he was Wells, Fargo & Co.'s agent at Eureka, and formerly had been County Clerk of Humboldt County and Collector of Customs for the port of Eureka. The flags of the Masonic, Odd Fellows, Pioneers, Grand Army of the Republic, and United Workman Orders, to which deceased belonged, were at half-mast the following day.

WE acknowledge the receipt of a copy of a new octavo work entitled "Law of Fraternities and Societies," by A. J. Hirschl, of the Davenport (Iowa) bar, and published by Wm. H. Stevenson, of the Central Law Journal. The price per volume in cloth is $1. This book is especially adapted to the use of officers and members of the different Orders who desire to know their legal rights. It comes strongly indorsed by men of the highest standing in the various fraternal Orders.

THE banquets reported elsewhere in this paper are glorious contradictions of the idea entertained by many, that good fellowship, and the best of good cheer and hearty, warm enjoyment may not exist unless wives are present. The prohibition by constitutional law of the use of any intoxicants at the banquets, or other gatherings connected with, and held in the name of the A. O. U. W. is one of the wisest provisions that exist in that law.

W. B. TURNER, for four years principal of the Pescadero public schools, is now on the editorial staff of the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN and FRATERNAL RECORD, two of Dewey & Co.'s San Francisco publications, and most acceptably is Mr. Turner performing his work.—Santa Cruz Sentinel.

GRAND RECORDER PRATT and Past Grand Overseer Allen were both charter members of Washington Lodge, No. 2, mentioned in the historical allusion in the report of the Oakland anniversary entertainment.

Oakland's Anniversary Celebration.

Addresses by Past Grand Overseer Allen, Past Grand Master Barnes and Grand Lecturer Vrooman—Music and Literary Programme and Grand Ball.

In the city of Oakland the Ancient Order of United Workmen was first planted in this state, and there the first Grand Lodge was formed. To celebrate this, the Sixth Anniversary, our brethren of Alameda County, with their friends, met in full force in Germania Hall, on the evening of the 13th inst., where a most excellent programme was rendered, and a social, good time observed.

After an overture by the Oakland City Band, E. J. Thomas, P. M. W. of Occidental, No. 6, introduced the Chairman of the meeting, Truman H. Allen, Past Grand Overseer, who in a few appropriate remarks, welcomed the audience and presented the programme. Col. Allen said:

It is with no small degree of pride that I accept the honor conferred. I am, however, not quite so egotistic as to think I have been selected to preside over the exercises to-night on account of any particular fitness or ability that I possess, but rather out of respect for old age. Not that I have lived so many more years than my brethren, but the circumstances of accident or chance hath made me the oldest Workman on the Pacific Coast, and one of seventy of the oldest in the world, having been an early member of Washington Lodge, No. 2, organized at Corry, Pennsylvania, in March, 1869. And now allow me to exhibit what I consider a very rare document. It is a paper that should be kept and preserved with the archives of the Order, either in this Jurisdiction or returned to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, there to be forever kept as a souvenir. It is to me a reminder of the terrible struggle for existence this Order once passed through. From the year 1869 to 1872 the Order had a hard struggle to live. There was a total membership of less than 400, and only about one-half of that number in good standing. There was a great lack of confidence even among the members of the Order as well as outside. It was generally thought to be a sort of a humbug, and that in case of the death of a member the widow or heirs would never get one cent. So the Order was losing ground instead of gaining, and in order to restore confidence it was necessary for some brother to die; it was necessary to establish the fact that the insurance money would be paid promptly. Matters ran along in this condition until about the first of August, 1871, a member of Washington Lodge, No. 2, died—the first death that occurred in the A. O. U. W. This receipt is for the money paid the widow, and was the first money ever paid for a death. I will read the receipt, which is as follows:

CORRY, PENN., Aug. 12, 1871.

Received of H. G. Pratt, Grand Recorder, A. O. U. W., one hundred and fifty-six dollars insurance money in case of Clarence Robinson, deceased.

A. KIBLING, Recorder.

This receipt showed that at said date there were but 156 Workmen in good standing then in the United States. Twelve years have passed and 130,000 members are now on the roll.

After a song by the A. O. U. W. Quartet, composed of W. R. Thomas, Charles Reed, W. E. Morris and Washington Elliott, the Chairman announced that, owing to the fact that Grand Recorder Pratt was compelled to take the train before his name was reached on the programme, he would introduce a brother who would make the Grand Recorder's speech and one also for himself, and presented William H. Barnes, P. G. M., who was received with enthusiastic applause. In his twenty-minute speech he fairly electrified his large audience. The following is an outline of his remarks.

Address of P. G. M. Wm. H. Barnes.

He said that it was meet and proper that here, in good old Alameda County, where the well-spring of California Workmanship had been dug, an assemblage should be gathered to-night to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the founding of the Grand Lodge, an institution which had in that brief period, from ten feeble Lodges and 325 members, leaped up into grandeur and prominence with 220 Lodges and 16,000 true men beneath their roof-trees, with a payment, annually, to afford comfort and sustenance to the widow and orphan, of more than a quarter of a million dollars in this state alone, and of two millions in the National Jurisdiction. He was aware that in other localities to-night these celebrations were taking place, and to which he had been invited, but from a grateful recollection of the past he felt it to be his present duty as well as an honor to respond to the invitation of his brethren from Oakland also.

He then rapidly but clearly sketched the rise and progress of the Order, the objections and obstacles it had encountered, the antagonism it had met with, and the assertions that had been made against it, and, in logical and telling arguments based upon experience in fraternal matters, showed why and how the A. O. U. W. would be self-sustaining and permanent. His reference to the history of Oddfellowship for fifty-two years illustrated that during that period 1,273,368 men had joined said Order, and that 101,451 deaths of members in good standing had occurred, or in other words that of all the members initiated less than one in twelve was in the Order at the time of his death, and that the inexorable law of suspension had relieved the Order of responsibility in regard to the other eleven. He also conclusively proved that this percentage of suspension was applicable to all institutions, by stating that while there had been 150,665 certificates issued by the A. O. U. W. up to June, 1883, only 3,588 of whom had died; that there were at said date only 111,378 certificates in force, thus showing that there had been a loss by suspension of 35,699 members, and that said members had paid in not less than $100 each to the Order, or $3,569,900, and then of their own volition relieved the Order of all responsibility or indebtedness to them. He alluded to the total number of deaths, 3,588, and the amount paid, $7,176,000; drew a beautiful word-picture of the practical relief this vast amount had afforded, and concluded with an elegant appeal to the husband and father, son or brother, who had not their loved ones protected to throw above their heads the protecting shield of the A. O. U. W.

The orator of the evening, Grand Lecturer Henry Vrooman, was then introduced and warmly received. We append a synopsis of his able discourse.

Oration by Grand Lecturer Vrooman.

We have assembled here this evening under the auspices of the Oakland Lodges of the A. O. U. W. of California, to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the institution of the Grand Lodge of the Order of California. As that Lodge was instituted in this city, it is quite appropriate that its anniversary should also be celebrated here. As I look over this audience, I am led, Mr. Chairman, to congratulate you, and through you the Committee of Arrangements, upon the success (numerically speaking, at least) of your undertaking. It affords another striking illustration of what I have always observed since I became a member of this Order, that there is a vein of quiet, aggressive determination running through the Order which is an earnest of success of any enterprise for which the Order is sponsor. I propose to refer to the origin of our Order, briefly to review its history and point out its leading characteristics, to the end that those of you who have never met with us in the Lodge room, who have never taken our obligations, and have never joined hands with us around our altar, may know something of our purposes and the work we are doing, so that you may determine for yourselves as to whether we are engaged in a praiseworthy undertaking, and are worthy of the confidence and support of the community.

The speaker then clearly reviewed the history of our Order, which through frequent publication in the WATCHMAN is not new to our readers, and need not be dwelt upon here. Commenting thereon he said:

The attempt to extend the organization met with varying success until there had been one or two deaths, when the prompt payment of the amount due to the representatives of the deceased brothers called especial attention to that feature of the Workmen's organization, and inspired people with the confidence in its stability, with faith in its promises, and with a desire to be taken within its protecting arms. I have thus gone somewhat into detail, concerning the origin of this Order, because it points a moral. It teaches that in the case of organizations, as in that of individuals, the grandest, the greatest and the noblest may have the most humble origin.

It is peculiarly emblematic of the underlying principles of this great free government of ours, namely, that the highest, best and most honorable positions within the domain of business pursuits, of the sciences, of the professions, are within reach of those who would aspire to them, however humble and obscure their birth may have been. Again, I believe it is a duty which we as an organization and individuals owe to ourselves to stop occasionally and look back to the source from which we came, to the end that if we started in life surrounded by all that wealth and all that power e'er gave, amidst the plaudits and followed by the favorable prophecies of admiring friends, we may determine whether we have profited by the advantages bestowed upon us by a bountiful nature; whether we have fulfilled the expectations of those who gave us birth; and if we have not, that our grief and shame may be commensurate with our falling short thereof, so much that we may thereby be stimulated to redeem ourselves and take our proper station in life.

On the other hand our origin was obscure and surrounded by poverty, the outlook dark and foreboding, and nature had withheld from us those natural advantages so bountifully bestowed upon others, but notwithstanding all this we have succeeded in gaining a commanding position in the fraternal and individual world, wrought out and depending upon the immutable principles of the organization in one case, and the inexhaustible industry and energy of the individual in the other, that we may from our past success take new courage and push on to greater, grander and nobler achievements.

The representatives to and organizers of the Grand Lodge in our own state were numerically weak, their constituency being small, but they represented a world of faith in the justness of their cause and a world of strength and determination of purpose, and soon placed California in the front rank of the grand army of Workmen. There has been no diminution in enthusiasm, in numbers, or in the acquisition of new members, and to-day we stand before the people 15,800 strong in this state, and as having fulfilled every promise made.

Time will not permit me to dwell upon the good that has been done by this Order, or to those it has assisted materially by relieving their wants and alleviating their sufferings, nor to dwell upon the benefits that have been derived by the members of the Order and through them the community at large by inculcating and promulgating the great principles of charity.

The speaker closed with a glowing tribute to the Order and was warmly applauded. Following this the programme was: humorous reading, W. R. Thomas; vocal solo, Wm. Stevens; recitation, J. A. Britton; original A. O. U. W. song, P. G. M. Barnes; recitation, J. M. J. Kane; recitation, J. W. Osborne; vocal solo, W. R. Thomas. The foregoing were all given in the best style. Mrs. M. A. Hinton acted as piano accompanist for the various vocal selections.

At the close of the entertainment, a sufficient number of the immense audience departed to let those who remained indulge in joys terpsichorean. The floor was soon cleared of seats, and a list of fourteen dances and a number of extra sufficed to give every one a chance to utilize the fine music to heart's content. The following are the various committees to whom much credit is due for the successful management of this long-to-be remembered entertainment:

Committee of Arrangements: John Harris, E. J. Thomas, E. S. Finch, T. H. Allen, D. S. Hirshberg.

Reception Committee: A. Z. T. Barker, E. K. Russell, H. L. Farrier, D. S. Moulton, J. C. Fielding, A. Donaldson, Thomas Hann, C. H. Haile.

Floor Manager: F. R. Weigle.

Floor Committee: W. G. Hawket, W. H. Wilkenson, W. T. Hamilton, Frank Zimmerman, J. S. Gilmore, J. J. Schultz, H. T. Smith, Chas. E. Alden, W. J. Wilkenson, J. A. C. MacDonald.

MISS L. SONORA WITHERELL, one of our favorite elocutionists, has opened a school, and will give private lessons in reading and elocution. This branch of education is fast becoming very popular, and our socials, Lodge meetings and entertainments are becoming more attractive, enjoyable and instructive by superior recitations and readings. Miss Witherell has the reputation of being a master in her profession as a teacher. As she is well known to be one of the best elocutionists on the Pacific Coast, parents wishing to give their children the benefit of this ornamental and useful branch of education can not do better than secure the services of Miss Witherell. Her address is 913 Polk street, San Francisco.

The Anniversary Banquet.

One of the most pleasant and soul-satisfying assemblages that it has been our lot to attend for many a day was the banquet and reunion given by Past Grand Master W. H. Jordan, at the Baldwin, Tuesday evening, November 13th, on the sixth anniversary of the organization of the Grand Lodge of California. About one hundred were in attendance; in that number being comprised the former associates in office and the deputies of Bro. Jordan, besides the present Grand Officers and a goodly number of representative Workmen.

The arrivals began about eight o'clock, and a pleasant hour was spent in social converse and renewal of old acquaintances in one of the elegant parlors of this modern caravansary. A fine string band was in attendance, which helped beguile the pleasant moments with sweet strains of melody until the feast was called on, and which then adjourned, with the rest, to the beautiful dining room, and filled all the unoccupied chinks of time as before, both during the banquet and between the speeches.

The spread was a most sumptuous one, and was discussed with much satisfaction. The tables were elegantly decorated, and all reflected much credit on mine host, Pierson. The following was the

The menu cards were most tastefully gotten up, the first page being ornamented with a raised picture of the old fireside with tiled mantle, grandfather's clock and a spinning wheel, with the announcement of the banquet. The third page contained the list of toasts, etc., and names of respondents, and the last page the menu.

Bro. E. M. Reading, P. M. W., acted as Master of Ceremonies, announcing the members and introducing the participants on the programme. After the proverbial physical man was satisfied, the first on the programme was the Address of Welcome, by P. G. M. Jordan.

Bro. Jordan said:

Brother Workmen:—In the entire lexicon of language it would be difficult for me to select fitting words with which to express to you my gratification at seeing once again about me those who, in the days gone by, were my co-workers in planting the banners of the Ancient Order of United Workmen upon these golden shores. For more than two years past it has been the earnest desire of my heart to be able again to look upon your faces; to clasp again "with cordial grasp" your kindly hands, and to feel once more that thrill which the soul alone can know when brought in contact with warm fraternal hearts.

Six years ago to-night we were but a feeble folk. Ten small Lodges with 325 devoted members comprised all that was known of Workmanship west of the Missouri River. Linked by an unfortunate similarity of names with that political host that, like a heated cyclone was swooping over our commonwealth, it was no easy matter to gain the attention and co-operation of the better elements of society. But one by one the bolts of opposition fell, until at length our muster roll, leaping first to 2,600, then to 4,500, and at length to 9,000, we forced admission to the bright fraternal realms and gained the approbation of all thoughtful people.

Six years ago to-day, in the faint unsteady light of Kohler's Hall, at West Oakland, a posed to be the highest in that district. When we returned to camp that night we received, by mail, from Visalia, the news of President Garfield's death, which occurred on the 19th. At your correspondent's suggestion, this handsome peak was named after our worthy President, who had fallen by the hand of a dastardly assassin. We trust the mountain will ever retain the name. It is very distinctly recognized from our prairies. The altitude of Miners' Peak is approximately 12,800 feet, and of Mt. Garfield, 13,100.

Bullion Peak is a regular, snow-capped cone, near Farewell Gap and the head of Little Kern River, which, though a stream twenty-five miles long, does not appear on any map of California yet prepared.

Every point marked in the accompanying engraving has now been explained except the letter "B." This represents the locality of the great and celebrated canyon of the main Kern, at about its middle point.

The Main Kern.

Rising near the base of Mt. Benet, along the steep southern slopes of the high divide between it and King's River, runs almost due south for at least 40 miles, through the longest and grandest canyon of all the Sierra Nevada. Its perpendicular walls are from 2,000 to 4,000 feet high, and scarcely a mile apart; its waterfalls are from 1,500 to 3,000 feet high; and it is fed on the east by Tyndall Creek, Moraine Creek, Whitney Creek, Loomis Creek, and Volcano Creek, in succession, from north to south; and on the west by Cone Creek, Shagopah Creek, and Falls, and Crabtree Creek, having but two possible trails for entrance and exit over its east face, and two on its west face, for its length of 40 miles. The Little Kern empties into it from the west, still farther south. The Kern and its tributaries abound with the golden, or rainbow, trout.

Here, among our highest mountains, the curious and beautiful red-snow occurs, identical with that of the Arctic regions and the Alps, caused by that microscopic fuoid plant, Protophylla nivalis. From July to September it is found in the Mineral King district, near the White Chief ledge, and in Farewell Gap; also, just north of Mt. Albert, the Old Mexican mine in the head of Jenny Lind Canyon, and along the high ridges and gorges near Mt. Whitney, at altitudes from 10,000 to 12,000 feet.

Errors Corrected.

Having now reviewed with this 120 miles, or thereabouts, of the grand panorama of our California Alps, I shall close this sketch by correcting three important errors in vogue about the mountain region we have been discussing.

The expeditions of 1881, already referred to, decided these matters conclusively. 1st. It has been stated in many ways that the snows of Mt. Whitney feed the San Joaquin and King's rivers as well as the Kern. This is all a mistake. As pointed out above, of these three large rivers only the Kern is fed by it. The sources of Bull's Creek and Roaring River, the extreme southern tributaries of King's River, are fully eight miles north of Mt. Whitney, with a lofty rocky barrier between them, while the south fork of the San Joaquin does not come nearer than 40 miles to Mt. Whitney, its extreme sources being on the northeastern slope of Mt. Goddard, between it and the Palisades. 2d. By some the main Kaweah River is supposed to flow from Mt. Kaweah. The fact is that the whole of the Kaweah Buttes furnish water to no stream but the Kern, and that through Cone Creek, Crabtree Creek, and the small creeks which form the high falls on the west face of Kern Canyon. 3d. The height of Mt. Whitney has heretofore been overestimated.

Altitude of Mt. Whitney.

During five days of careful observations by Prof. Langley's party, from Sept. 1st to 6th, 1881, the mercurial barometer varied from 17.50 to 17.60 inches, while the aneroid of your correspondent gave 17.55 to 17.60 on Sept. 6th. Prof. George Davidson did me the favor to have these elements worked out at the Coast Survey Office, by the formula for the mercurial barometer, comparing the reading on Whitney with the corresponding readings of the Signal Service instruments at San Francisco on the same dates. These figures gave the altitude about 14,700 feet. I worked out the same by the formula for aneroids, using the readings of corresponding dates in the Signal Office at Visalia. This gave 14,800 feet. Hence, 14,750 feet is no doubt more nearly correct for the altitude of Mt. Whitney than 15,000 feet. Even at these figures, Mt. Whitney is still the highest mountain in the United States except Mt. St. Elias in Alaska, with its 19,500 feet of altitude. An interesting point in our Tulare Sierras is a ridge where the sources of King's, Kaweah and Kern rivers are within a stone's throw of each other. This point is immediately north of Mt. Albert, the most northerly peak of the Kaweah Buttes, and about ten miles due west from Mt. Whitney. From there the main Kaweah runs nearly west, Roaring River runs northwest, into King's River, while Cone and Crabtree creeks run southeast to the Kern.

A Moonlight View

Of our distant Sierras is a phenomenon peculiar to this locality. What! See mountains 70 miles distant by moonlight? Yes, incredible as it may seem to those who have never witnessed this weird and mysterious view of our snowclad mountains, they are sometimes seen by moonlight, under two conditions: Just as the moon is rising behind them, and a little before, a narrow waving line of pale golden light marks the profile of the Sierras, as the snow on the summit line is illuminated by the moon's rays. But the most peculiar sight is when the moon, near the full, has reached the zenith on our clear, cold winter nights. Look then to the eastern horizon, and there, dimly but surely, you see the vast snow fields of our Sierra Nevada reflecting the soft light of the moonbeams. At first you think it is white, fleecy clouds, but as you gaze steadily you see there is no motion, no change, as there would be if it were clouds. It remains there as calm and unchanging as the solid mountains themselves appear in the sunshine. You are really viewing by moonlight the perpetual, Arctic-like snow-masses of our California Alps.

Conclusion.

Having now examined together somewhat in detail this wonderfully grand panorama of our higher Sierra, we must take leave of them just as the writer of this sketch will soon do of all the scenes of our beloved California; but the memory of these grand views, once seen, will always remain with a sincere admirer of nature, and of these grandest achievements of nature's Architect. Just as these everlasting mountains appear to us now, they have appeared to man's eye for at least forty centuries—from the time when the giant redwoods of our mountain meadows first began to burst through their tiny seed shells. There they have stood, so little changed by the frosts of succeeding winters as to appear ever the same,—standing, poetically, as the sentries of this great and fertile valley; practically as its ventilators and air purifiers, and as a rich storehouse of waters, metals, building-stones and timber. We see them today just as the forefathers of the American races saw them many centuries ago, when they came from Asia by way of Behring's Straits and the Aleutian Islands, along our Pacific Coast, and through Tulare Valley—the Toltecs and the Aztecs—on their way to the table-lands of Mexico. There they stand, just as they have been seen and venerated for ages by the wild Indians, for whom a large part of them, no doubt, were ever shrouded in mystery.

As we see them, they are likely to remain till the end of time, as one of the most tangible proofs of the unchanging nature of God's laws, and among the noblest monuments of his handiwork.

Successful Patent Solicitors.

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is new and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That is this understood and appreciated is evidenced by the number of patents issued through their PATENT PRESS Patent Agency (S. F.) from week to week and year to year.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the first and third Saturdays of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following, the first six mentioned, however, being more fully represented in the organs of their own which we have established:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS AND LADIES OF HONOR,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN RULE,
ORDER OF MUTUAL COMPANIONS.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

RECORD PUBLISHING CO.,

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time they intend to pay for it, let them not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

CAISSON GATE.—George F. Schild, Vallejo, Cal. No. 287,178. Dated, Oct. 23, 1883. This is an improved caisson or floating gate for harbors, canals, river locks, deep-water basins, and the different kinds of drydocks. It consists in a gate formed of a plate shaped like and adapted to fit the entrance of locks, harbors, or docks, on a peculiar boat-like structure or buoy, connected with it, to keep it afloat and upright, and in means for sinking or floating said gate and buoy, consisting of certain water tanks and peculiar valves. The gates which are ordinarily used consist of two leaves swinging on parts below, and in straps above water. A great amount of mechanical force is necessary to operate them, causing much wear. Repairs are costly. The caisson gates which are generally used are boat-like, floating structures, the keel and stems of which fit into grooves at the entrance of harbors or docks, and prevent the water flowing out or in. These caisson gates are very heavy. The object of this invention is to provide a floating gate or caisson gate which will be light and easily handled, requiring no stationary ballast to lower it and keep it steady, and no pumps to raise it.

INCUBATOR.—Chas. F. Winkler, Bakersfield, Cal. No. 286,756. Dated Oct. 16, 1883. This invention relates to certain new and useful improvements in that class of incubators employing an endless traveling conveyor for receiving and advancing the eggs. The object is to overcome certain difficulties now existing in this class of machines. It is so constructed as to allow the introduction of a fresh lot of eggs at short intervals, and gives to each lot its own required temperature. The machine hatches the eggs in small batches, removed from the unhatched eggs, so the temperature is not lowered in removing them, nor are they injured. The machine provides for the different temperatures necessary to hatch out all kinds of eggs—goose, duck, turkey and chicken, giving each its required time and temperature.

LOOM FOR WEAVING BAGS.—John Laird, Jr., Forfar, Scotland, assignor to Wm. Rutherford, S. F. No. 286,711. Dated October 16, 1883. The invention has special reference to looms for weaving fabrics in which the cloth has at definite intervals or spaces to be woven into rough cloth for the purpose of forming the bottoms or sides of such bags, sacks or similar articles, according as the said articles are woven with their length lying longitudinally or transversely with the web or warp of the cloth. The object is more especially to render the whole of the operation in connection with the weaving of such goods or fabrics, and especially the bottoming and weaving operations, automatic.

CAR TRUCK.—Thomas J. Furbee, Bishop Creek, Inyo Co., Cal. No. 287,374. Dated Oct. 23, 1883. The truck is intended to be adjusted to narrow or wide gauge tracks; and it consists in a truck, the sides of which are connected by telescoping plates, to which suitable power is applied to force its sides apart or draw them closer together. The wheeled axles are centrally divided, their inner ends being mounted on sliding boxes, which are connected with the sides of the truck, whereby their expansion or contraction effects the wheels similarly to fit them to broad or narrow track.

FIFTH WHEEL FOR VEHICLES.—Jno. S. Klapperich, S. F. No. 287,550. Dated Oct. 30. This improvement in running gear consists of a means for connecting the front axle and bolster so that they can be turned about a central point without the use of a kingbolt to extend through and weaken the axle.

CONTAINING all the essentials of a true tonic, and sure to give satisfaction, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

SUFFER

no longer from Dyspepsia, Indigestion, want of Appetite, loss of Strength, lack of Energy, Malaria, Intermittent Fevers, &c. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS never fails to cure all these diseases.

Boston, November 26, 1881. BROWN CHEMICAL CO. Gentlemen: For years I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and could get no relief (having tried everything which was recommended) until, acting on the advice of a friend, who had been benefited by BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, I tried a bottle, with most surprising results. Previous to taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, my food had distressed me, and I suffered greatly from a burning sensation in the stomach, which was unbearable. Since taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, all my troubles are at an end. Cannot any time without my disagreeable results. I am, practically, another person. Mrs. W. J. FLYNN, 30 Maverick St., E. Boston.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS acts like a charm on the digestive organs, removing all dyspeptic symptoms, such as tasting the food, Belching, Heat in the Stomach, Heartburn, etc. The only Iron Preparation that will not blacken the teeth or give headache.

Sold by all Druggists.

California Inventors

Should consult DEWEY & CO., AMERICAN AND FOREIGN PATENT SOLICITORS, for obtaining Patents and Caveats. Established in 1860. Their long experience as journalists and large practice as patent attorneys enables them to offer Pacific Coast inventors far better service than they can obtain elsewhere. Send for free circulars of information. Office of the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS and PACIFIC RURAL PRESS, No. 252 Market St., S. F. Elevator, 12 Front St.

Dewey & Co., American and Foreign Patent Agents.

PATENTS obtained promptly; Caveats filed expeditiously; Patent Reissues taken out; Assignments made and recorded in legal form; Copies of Patents and Assignments procured; Examinations of Patents made here and at Washington; Examinations made of Assignments recorded in Washington; Examinations ordered and reported by Telegraph; Rejected cases taken up and Patents obtained; Interferences Prosecuted; Opinions rendered regarding the validity of Patents and Assignments; Every legitimate branch of Patent Soliciting promptly and thoroughly conducted.

Our intimate knowledge of the various inventions of this coast, and long practice in patent business, enable us to abundantly satisfy our patrons; and our success and business are constantly increasing.

The shrewdest and most experienced Inventors are found among our most steadfast friends and patrons, who fully appreciate our advantages in bringing valuable inventions to the notice of the public through the columns of our widely circulated, first-class journals—thereby facilitating their introduction, sale and popularity.

Foreign Patents.

In addition to American Patents, we secure, with the assistance of co-operative agents, claims in all foreign countries which grant Patents, including Great Britain, France, Belgium, Prussia, Austria, Baden, Peru, Russia, Spain, British India, Saxony, British Columbia, Canada, Norway, Sweden, Mexico, Victoria, Brazil, Bavaria, Holland, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, Cuba, Roman States, Wurtemberg, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, Brazil, New Granada, Chile, Argentine Republic, AND EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD where Patents are obtainable.

No models are required in European countries, but the drawings and specifications should be prepared with thoroughness, by able persons who are familiar with the requirements and changes of foreign patent laws—agents who are reliable and thoroughly established.

Our schedule price for obtaining foreign patents, in all cases, will always be as low, and in some instances lower, than those of any other responsible agency.

We can and do get foreign patents for inventors in the Pacific States from two to six months (according to the location of the country) SOONER than other agents.

The principal portion of the patent business of this coast has been done, and is still being done, through our agency. We are familiar with, and have full records, of all former cases, and can more correctly judge of the value and patentability of most inventions discovered here than any other agents. Situated so remote from the seat of Government, delays are even more dangerous to the inventors of the Pacific Coast than to applicants in the Eastern States. Valuable patents may be lost by extra time consumed in transmitting specifications from Eastern agencies back to this coast for the signature of the inventor.

Confidential.

We take great pains to preserve secrecy in all confidential matters, and applicants for patents can rest assured that their communications and business transactions will be held strictly confidential by us. Circulars of information to inventors, free.

Home Counsel.

Our long experience in obtaining patents for Inventors on this Coast has familiarized us with the character of most of the inventions already patented; hence we are frequently able to save our patrons the cost of a fruitless application by pointing to them the same thing already covered by a patent. We are always free to advise applicants of any knowledge we have of previous applicants which will interfere with their obtaining a patent.

We invite the acquaintance of all parties connected with inventions and patent right business, believing that the mutual conference of legitimate business and professional men is mutual gain. Parties in doubt in regard to their rights as assignees of patents or purchasers of patented articles, can often receive advice of importance to them from a short call at our office.

Remittances of money, made by individual inventors to the Government, sometimes mislaid, and it has repeatedly happened that applicants have not only lost their money, but their inventions also, from this cause and consequent delay. We hold ourselves responsible for all fees intrusted to our agency.

Engravings.

We have superior artists in our employ, and all facilities for producing fine and satisfactory illustrations of inventions and machinery, for newspapers, book, circular and other printed illustrations, and are always ready to assist patrons in bringing their valuable discoveries into practical and profitable use.

In Memoriam.

Hall of Bay City Lodge, No. 111, A. O. U. W.

A shadow deep and dark has fallen across the threshold of our Lodge. BRO. JOHN A. WATSON, our first Master Workman, and a worthy exemplar of the teachings of Charity, Hope and Protection, beloved and cherished for his virtues and good deeds, has been suddenly summoned to that higher Lodge in which every true Workman hopes to find a refuge when the storms of life are past. It is meet that we mourn—that we mingle our tears with those to whom he was bound by nearer and dearer ties, for a steadfast brother, a loving husband and wise counselor, a true friend, and an earnest worker for the welfare of his fellow-men, has fallen in the prime of life and usefulness. It is a source of real sorrow that one who in all the walks of life was the exponent of justice and goodness should be so suddenly torn from a loving family, a devoted brotherhood, and the good works in which he was continually engaged. Your committee feel fully assured that they utter the heartfelt sentiments of this entire membership in saying that a calamity has befallen our Lodge and Order. BRO. WATSON was a charter member of Bay City Lodge, and first to be stricken by the insatiable Reaper in its existence of four and one-half years. True to pledges, just in dealings, liberal in all things, his memory will be a balm to those who were so lately his associates in the Lodge room and in the walks of private life.

Thirty years of our departed brother's life has been spent in California, and the record of those thirty years shows no stain or dishonor, no departure from the Golden Rule, but an unceasing effort to help forward every good and worthy work, and to aid in ameliorating the condition of his fellow-men.

To the stricken family of our departed brother this Lodge sends its heartfelt sympathy and condolence. That the over-watching, all-wise God in whom they trusted and found consolation during the trying ordeal of parting may be an ever-present guardian and guide to the end of life's journey, is the hope and prayer of every member of Bay City Lodge of United Workmen. May the memory of the good and kind protector of whom they have been deprived stimulate them to meet bravely the cares and vicissitudes of life's journey.

Your committee recommend that a certified copy of this tribute of respect be forwarded to the widow of our deceased brother, to the journals of this city and county, and to the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

FRED W. BELL,
DAVID E. GORDON,
A. LEVENTHAL, Committee.

Unanimously adopted at a regular meeting of Bay City Lodge, No. 111, A. O. U. W., Eureka, Cal., Nov. 14, 1883, and ordered spread in full on the minutes of the Lodge. It was further ordered that the charter of the Lodge be draped, and that members wear the customary badge of mourning for thirty days.

The Anniversary Banquet.

little band of scarce thirty Workmen met to organize the Grand Lodge of California. Without, the air was heavy with the chill and damp of a coming storm. Within there reigned, as if by the law of sympathy, an uncertain feeling as to what might be the issue of our day's procedure. There was no rejoicing, no warm congratulations, but rather the chill of doubt seemed to reign supreme in every heart.

Of the thirty then assembled we have tonight about this joyous board ten whose lives and hearts are spared to honor and grace this festive scene. Of the others some are gone by the golden stair into that Lodge divine, where the Father reigns as Master over all. Some are scattered in distant lands and some have drifted from our Order, caring more for other things and forgetting of the ties of Workmanship.

As your host, however, I must be brief; but ere I close let me urge you each and all to watch with jealous care the future of our Order. No longer captains we yet may aid our Grand Master here by keeping watch upon the outer walls, and like the Roman in ancient story, who stood upon the ramparts of the famous castle on the Campagna, watching the ebb and flow of battle, counting by the light of the rising sun the serried ranks of the Vandal hosts, and by the red glow of declining day telling the number of the dead; so may we, standing upon the ramparts of our grand fraternal fortress, mark not the number of our dead, but the first appearance of evil influences and bear to the captain of our host full timely warning of approaching Goth or Vandal.

To-night, my brethren, I bid you welcome, yea thrice welcome. Within this hall forget the outer world. If any heart has harbored evil thoughts of any brother here, forget those thoughts and in the fullness of fraternal love let this "Night be filled with music,

And the cares that infest the day Shall fold their tents like Arabs
And as silently steal away."

Bro. Jordan's glowing words caught the sympathy of all present, and were greeted by hearty applause. He was followed by Past Master Sam. Booth in an original comic song, recounting the adventures of a Granger from Siskiyou, who came to town and joined the Order, and what came of it. We hope to present our readers the text of the song in a future issue. Brother Booth was lustily encored, whereupon he gave "Hunting a New Lodge Hall."

Grand Recorder Pratt's Address

Was then given, in response to the toast, "Planting the Banner of the A. O. U. W. on the Pacific Shore." He said: "Most of you know what it is to go to work and organize a Subordinate Lodge. The difficulty usually incident to such a case is possibly enhanced by attempting the same thing on a grander scale. This was a new thing, never before heard of with us. On August 21st, '75, with fourteen charter members, was instituted the first Lodge of the State—"California, No. 1." From that time on the progress was slow, but sure, until "Berkeley, No. 10," was instituted. I will tell you what you may not all know, and that is that it was a matter of great difficulty to persuade these Lodges that a Grand Lodge organization would be of any benefit to them, but finally they all acceded. We all agree that (myself excepted) the Grand Lodge on that occasion was wise in the choice of its officers, especially of their Past Grand Master, who is now Supreme Master Workman. (Applause.) We are satisfied that on that occasion all things were well and properly done, and our record is one that any Jurisdiction might be proud of. But it was no small effort to so found this institution here that it should so soon carry itself along by its own inherent strength."

Bro. Pratt then referred to the establishment of the office of Grand Medical Examiner as a wise piece of early legislation, and paid a deserved compliment to the present incumbent. After briefly reviewing the noticeable features of other Grand Lodges since the first, he closed amid applause.

Address of Sup. Master Workman Fish.

Supreme Master Workman Fish was then introduced, and responded as follows to the toast, "Our Supreme Lodge:"

It is with deep sense of my inability to do justice to this toast that I rise to my feet. A careful perusal of the history of the A. O. U. W., as contained in its printed proceedings, can but impress one with the idea that prudence and judgment, combined with purity of heart and honesty of purpose, were present in those who founded the A. O. U. W. and shaped its first legislation. There have been many imitations of their methods, but few of them, I fear, as large hearted, unselfish and benevolent; and the marvelous growth of the Order bears witness to the hold it has upon the affection of the people. In 1873, in Cincinnati, Ohio, 15 delegates from three Grand Lodges (Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky), met and formed the Supreme Lodge. At that time one assessment was required to pay each death loss. In June, 1883, one decade after, 68 Representatives from 22 Grand Lodges, with a membership of 125,000, met in Buffalo. In that time over seven million dollars have been paid to the widows and orphans of deceased Workmen. At the first session much of the distinctive legislation of the Order was formed. The use of intoxicating liquors at all banquets or any other meetings of the A. O. U. W. was forever prohibited by unanimous vote. A provision authorizing the setting apart of separate Beneficiary Jurisdictions was made; also, a provision allowing each Grand Lodge to provide for increased beneficiary, and the formation of the Degree of Honor, all were provided for at that session. Since the first session of the Supreme Lodge, 20 Grand Lodges having attained the requisite numerical strength, have been set apart as separate Beneficiary Jurisdictions, with the proviso that should misfortune overtake them they could at once return to a mother's sheltering care and home until again able to meet the storms and battles of life by themselves. Two only have been obliged to seek again this protection and assistance, and one of these has just now gone back a second time to do battle under her own banners. At the risk, Mr. Chairman, of traveling outside the subject of my toast, allow me to say what every member of the Supreme Lodge feels to be true—that of all the fair daughters that have left the shelter of her roof, none is fairer, or better or nobler, or better loved than she who, all radiant in the fullness of womanly strength and beauty, sits enthroned on the golden shores of a great continent. The sun as it rose this morning above the pine-clad crests of the Sierras was not clearer or brighter than her garments of purity and love; and the same sun, as it drops to-night into the great ocean of the West, lingering lovingly in golden glory upon the summits of the Coast Range, was not more beautiful than the halo of her good name.

To you, Mr. Chairman, and to us brothers, it is a proud distinction to have witnessed the birth of this fair being, and to have seen her wedded to honesty and worth, and reigning in a home of contentment and peace. To this home the cry of distress has never come in vain, and time and again has the hand of succor been extended to those less fortunate, and especially to the mother who bore her and the sisters who had shared with her that mother's love, until the grateful prayers from many hearthstones have risen to heaven in her behalf, and are daily asking blessings on her name. (Applause.)

Address of Grand Lecturer Vrooman.

Grand Lecturer Henry Vrooman then responded to the toast, "Kohler's Hall, West Oakland, November 10, 1877, and our band of 325."

He said that he had just come from Oakland where they were celebrating at least 1,000 strong, and owing to his previous speech there, and his traveling in the night fog, his voice admonished him to be brief. It seemed impossible for us now to realize the difficulties that surrounded that band of 30 Workmen representing a constituency of 325 members. But although numerically weak, their principles were strong. He referred to the debt of $200 incurred by that Grand Lodge at that time, and what a mountain it seemed to them, and how their hearts were lightened when it was provided for. But the one bright spot, the redeeming feature of their smallness of numbers was that every one got an office. (Laughter.) Encouraged by this, they started out determined to place California in the front rank of the jurisdictions. Their selections of officers has been heartily vindicated as has the choice of each succeeding Grand Lodge. We should remember that while the office of Grand Master incurs no small responsibility, the offices of Grand Recorder and Grand Receiver are not a whit behind it in requirements of responsibility or ability. We congratulate the old pioneers upon their foresight and good judgment. But even with that "they builded better than they knew." So long as the Grand Officers emulate the examples of those of the past the success of the future is assured.

Address of Bro. J. G. Severance, P. M. W.

The next toast on the list was "Cosmopolitan Hotel, San Francisco, July 16, 1878.

First appearance of the star 'California' in the Fraternal Heavens of the A. O. U. W." The respondent named on the programme was Grand Foreman David McClure, but he being unavoidably absent in Petaluma on legal business, his place was happily filled in short notice by Bro. J. G. Severance, who in a number of well turned witticisms made his audience laugh heartily. He said:

"Some years ago I remember attending a Republican State Convention, to electioneer for a friend. They all said that they knew my friend was a good fellow, and that they would be glad to vote for him but for the fact that his name was not on the slate. I also remember once calling likewise on an editor to get him to aid me in booming an enterprise of a friend which was running counter to one of some moneyed interests elsewhere. The editor said that he would be glad to puff my friend, if possible, but could not because my friend's name did not appear in the syndicate. Now, when I am hastily called upon as a substitute for the eminent name of Bro. McClure, how am I to receive your attention and appreciation when my name does not appear on the programme? But touching upon the subject of the occasion referred to at the second meeting of our Grand Lodge, how well we all remember the flashing of this glorious news to us, from across the continent, that California was a separate Beneficiary Jurisdiction. Although we rejoice in the grand and noble proportions our Order has attained to-night, yet many of us can not forbear casting retrospective glances over the way which was lined with few roses and many thorns. We had to gain strength by buffeting with the waves which on the one hand threatened to dash us upon the Scylla of public distrust, on the other hand, upon the Charybdis of financial embarrassment. Imitators of our methods sprang up thickly, and drew from us, and the insurance companies dealt us many a blow; but these in the end harmed us not, and we stand today not sustained alone by bolts of gold but cemented by fraternal love. Our noble host has through many of these scenes stood bravely at our head. Had I the poetic genius of Bro. Booth, I would celebrate his virtues in a song. But having it not, and still enjoying music, I here request the band to close my remarks with the selection entitled 'It's a hard road to trammel ober Jordan.'"

The band struck up the air with a good will, which was greeted with shouts of laughter and applause.

Address of Past Grand Master Brewer.

Bro. Brewer opened his remarks with a few pleasantries concerning an affected misunderstanding of the subject of his toast, as sent to him by letter. He said he understood it to be "My trip to San Jose, and what came of it;" but not having time to get the letter photographed, as seemed to be getting to be the custom of late when one wanted to prove any thing, he would have to give it up, and proceed with the regular toast, viz.: "Four thousand five hundred strong, and the Grand Lodge at San Jose, January 21st, 1879." He had never seen an assemblage that would compare any more favorably with the highest in the land than the one mentioned in the toast; and they deserved the more credit for being largely self-made men. Its leading officer, our present host, was a good example of this. The speaker had watched with pride his career from the "devil" of a printing office, climbing up of his own will and efforts through Yale, until he stood at the head of the A. O. U. W. in California. After using a beautiful illustration, showing how a Geneva sculptor allowed himself to be taught wise truths from a lisping child, and making the application from his foregoing remarks, he said: "Brethren, that Grand Lodge was composed of men who thought more of this Order than of themselves—like those almost divine examples from away down the ages, of men who cared more for humanity than for self, more for humanity than for office. Let us to-night catch the flame that may inspire each heart, that may set the fraternal fires burning stronger than ever, to the end that every true man may have his loved ones honored and protected for ever." (Applause.)

Address of Grand Master Rogers.

Grand Master Rogers responded to the toast "The Grand Jurisdiction of California." He began his remarks by referring to the origin and early struggles of the Order, paid a tribute to the pioneers in which he referred especially to the host of the evening, and then launched out into the subject of Workmanship in general. Here he eloquently referred to the first of our three watchwords, Charity, and dwelt upon the great blessing that the Order was proving itself to be especially to the middle classes.

Touching a personal point, he vindicated himself from the criticisms that had been made upon his own work and that of some of the other Grand Officers, in which it had been said that they were apathetic. He said that it was true in a measure only. So far as his time permitted he had carried out the work devolving upon him in Lodge visiting, etc., to the extent of two days out of every seven, and intended to do still more during the rest of his administration. But members must not expect to have everything done by the Grand Lodge officers. They must carry the work into their own camps, and each one take his own share of the burdens and responsibilities if they expect always to keep the cause of Workmanship at flood tide.

He then made reference to the fact that Workmanship was a labor of love, and illustrated by rehearsing the beautiful legend that tells how, when Prometheus desired to mould the soul of man, he kneaded it not with water, but with tears. So ours must be a work of sympathy and love. Grand Master Rogers closed with an energetic appeal to all members to help spread the good work and to individually come into the service. (Applause.)

(TO BE CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT ISSUE).

Notice to Members.

Brethren wishing Society Address Cards can be supplied by sending their orders to Cubery & Co., 415 Market street, San Francisco, sole agents for the Pacific Coast of Milton H. Smith & Co., Rochester, N. Y. These cards have the emblem of the Order on one corner, and are universally used in the East, which suggested the idea of establishing a Pacific Coast Depot. Remember the address: Cubery & Co., 415 Market street, San Francisco. Send for samples and price list.

BRO. W. J. HORNE'S electric belt is gaining in popularity as one of the great remedial agencies for the cure of disease and restoration of vitality to the system. Judging from the testimony of a number of prominent citizens in this city as to the benefits derived from using this improved electro-magnetic belt in chronic diseases, and in imparting vitality and vigor to the mind and body, it may be cordially recommended. He also manufactures an electro-magnetic truss that has cured a large number of cases of hernia.

A HOUSEHOLD TREASURE.—The improved Household Treasure of Bro. C. H. Townsend, of East Oakland, should be in every house. It is the handiest and most complete kitchen table and repository that we have ever seen. Bro. Townsend was the pateutee of the original Household Treasure, and now presents one greatly improved, with the price reduced to $8, delivered in San Francisco. Send postal to above address and learn more about this.

TAILORING PARLORS.—For goods among the best in design, style, fit and workmanship, we refer to the tailoring parlors of Bros. Reeve & Staab, corner Kearny and Geary, entrance No. 10 Geary street. Their fall and winter stock of cloths and cassimeres are large, well selected, and at bedrock prices. Call and examine and be convinced.

BRO. J. H. CONGDON, General Commission Merchant, at No. 34 California street, is sole agent for the celebrated Paradise Mills flour. It is a popular brand, and carload lots will be furnished at lowest rates.

The Largest Locomotive.

There is now a mammoth locomotive in process of construction at the Central Pacific shops at Sacramento. The name is "El Gobernador." The total length of the engine and tender is 65 feet and 5 inches; driving-wheel base, 19 feet and 7 inches, five pairs of drivers, 4 feet and 9 inches in diameter, with a four-wheel truck in front; water capacity of tender, 3,600 gallons; cylinders, 21 inches in diameter, with a 36-inch stroke; total weight of engine, 73 tons; weight on drivers, 64 tons; weight of tender (light) 50,650 pounds; total weight of engine and tender (light), 98 tons 650 pounds. There are two six-wheel trucks under the tender, making a total of 26 wheels under engine and tender. The valve gearing, designed by A. J. Stevens, is something entirely new, there being nothing like it in the country. It is said to be the largest engine in the world. It is for use on the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and it is expected will do more work than two of the engines now used, with less consumption of fuel. The heaviest engine now in use on the C. P. R. R. has hauled 19 cars, loaded, up a 116 foot grade. Its dimensions are: Weight of tender (light), 63,000 pounds; weight of engine, 123,000 pounds; water capacity of tender, 3,000 gallons. It has 8 drivers of 4 feet 8 inches each; driving wheel base, 15 feet 9 inches; total wheel base, 53 feet 1 1/2 inch.

RESULTS OF THE FISH COMMISSION'S WORK.—The results of the earlier efforts of the Fish Commission of California are becoming quite apparent. Shad from the Sacramento River are now being freely sold in the markets and on the streets, the fish averaging over a foot in length. The other day a seventeen-pound striped bass was caught in Monterey Bay, and shipped to this city, and placed on exhibition. They attain great weight on the Atlantic side.

IRON PAINT.—Iron paint, as it is termed a paint composed of pulverized iron and linseed oil varnish—is a recent German invention, and is intended for covering damp walls, outer walls, and in short any place or vessel exposed to the action of the open air and to the weather. Should the article to be painted be exposed to frequent changes of temperature, linseed oil varnish and amber varnish are mixed with the paint intended for the first two coats, without the addition of any artificial drying medium. The first coat is applied rather thin, the second a little thicker, and the last in a rather fluid state. The paint is equally adapted as weather-proof coating for wood, stone and iron; nor is it necessary to previously free the latter from rust, grease, etc., a superficial cleaning being sufficient.

A PROJECT is on foot to build three more rail-roads in this State, the survey for one having already been commenced. This one will be an extension of the road at present running from Marysville to Orville. It will be extended from the latter town to Big Meadows, Plumas County. The second road will extend from Rocklin, on the Central Pacific railroad, to what is known as The Bridge, thence to Cooperstown Ravine, then through Greenwood and George-town to Forney's, thus opening up a large fruit district. The third projected route will extend from Napa to Berryessa Valley, from which Lake County is easily reached. This road is to be constructed so as to connect Berryessa Valley with Napa, thus giving it an outlet to the bay.

THE assessment rolls in this city foot up as follows: City real estate, $112,219,377; improvements, $46,503,892; Total, $158,723,269; assessments of railroad, $229,442; Grand to-

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold
fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and shareholders
on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practi-
cians in this country.

The PRESS gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.
New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unvalued.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

OUR U. S. AND FOREIGN PATENT AGENCY presents many and important advantages as a Home Agency over all others, by reason of long establishment, great experience, thorough system, intimate acquaintance with the subjects of inventions in our own community, and our most extensive law and reference library, containing official American and foreign reports, files of scientific and mechanical publications, etc. All worthy inventions patented through our Agency will have the benefit of an illustration or a description in the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS. We transact every branch of Patent business, and obtain Patents in all countries which grant protection to inventors. The large majority of U. S. and Foreign Patents issued to inventors on the Pacific Coast have been obtained through our Agency. We can give the best and most reliable advice as to the patentability of new inventions. Our prices are as low as any first-class agencies in the Eastern States, while our advantages for Pacific Coast inventors are far superior. Advice and Circulars free.

A Progressive Firm.

Dewey & Co's Twentieth Anniversary.

Last Saturday marked the 20th anniversary of the firm of Dewey & Co., publishers of this journal. In a comparatively new country like California, and in these days of rapid changes, twenty years is a long period over which to look back on the existence of a business house. The firm of Dewey & Co., publishers and patent agents, had its starting in the first issue of the SCIENTIFIC PRESS in December, 1863; and under the name of the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS the paper has been prosperously continued until now. With very few exceptions it is the oldest journal in this city or on the coast, and is the oldest mining paper in the United States.

W. B. Ewer and A. T. Dewey, the present owners of the paper, became proprietors in 1862 and 1863 respectively. Mr. George H. Strong, partner in and manager of DEWEY & CO.'S MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS PATENT AGENCY, was then associated as chief draftsman and mechanical expert of the concern.

The Patent Department.

At the time of the organization of the firm the field in the patent business was very small indeed, most of the patents for this coast then being taken out by the Eastern agencies. It gradually became apparent to inventors, however, that there were decided advantages in being able to hold personal council with their agents and to examine the drawings and specifications before they were submitted to the Patent Office. It was, moreover, seen that a great saving of time was effected, there being no delay in the forwarding and return of papers for signatures, as was the case when dealing with distant agencies. Within a few years a steadily increasing business was built up, and the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS PATENT AGENCY became the leading agency of the kind on the coast, a position it has maintained ever since. This has been accomplished by careful attention to the wants of inventors and a well-earned reputation for reliability, honesty and fairness.

The clients of this department of the firm are scattered from one end of the coast to the other, and a great number of them have done their business with Dewey & Co. for years. Nearly every important patented device on this coast in the last twenty years has been obtained by us. The peculiar machinery of this coast, mining and metallurgical appliances, harvesting machinery, cable railroad mechanism, etc., have been specialties with which the firm has had more to do than other agencies, and the knowledge acquired in handling all this business has been of incalculable advantage to inventors. During the years of existence of the firm a very valuable library has been accumulated, including works of reference, Patent Office reports, volumes of complete specifications and drawings of all U. S. patents, etc., until it has assumed large dimensions.

The Publishing Department.

The publishing department of the firm has increased in importance from very small beginnings until now there are some 40 employees in all connected with it. When the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS was first published it consisted of eight small pages. For many years it has been a sixteen-page illustrated journal, known and admired in every camp and city in the West. As an exponent of the industrial, mechanical and mining resources of the coast it holds the first place, and is acknowledged an honest, upright and able journal.

In this fact lies the reason of its perpetuity while so many speculating mining and stock journals have fallen by the wayside. It has never lent its columns to the advancement of schemes calculated to harm the public, and has kept free from all stock-gambling transactions of every kind. It is devoted to the interests of legitimate mining in all its branches, and the advancement of manufactures and mechanical industry among us.

The PACIFIC RURAL PRESS was established by Dewey & Co. in 1871, and, being candidly and reliably edited, at once took rank as a first class agricultural journal. Its subscriptions and advertising patronage gradually and surely increased, and it has now the largest circulation of any weekly on the coast. At the time of its inception the office was well fitted with all facilities for such a publication, and it sprang full-fledged into being. For the previous year the SCIENTIFIC PRESS had each week devoted a large amount of space to agricultural matters in a special edition, so that when the PACIFIC RURAL began publication everything was prepared for it, and the journal began with good headway immediately. This was of great advantage, and had its result in a very rapid and healthy growth. By the publication of the farming edition of the SCIENTIFIC PRESS it was possible to gather 1,000 subscribers for the first number of the PACIFIC RURAL PRESS. So crowded have its columns become that for the past year an eight to sixteen-page supplement has been added to its pages nearly every week. Conducted in an able manner by men well versed in the various branches, it has become an authority on all matters pertaining to agriculture on this coast. It has collected around it a group of intelligent, practical correspondents, whose letters are of the greatest value to its readers. Its home departments and varied miscellaneous contents make it welcome at many a fireside in our valleys and mountains, and it is truly a representative farmers' paper. The peculiar climatic conditions of this coast necessitated a journal devoted specially to local agriculture, and this field the PACIFIC RURAL fills ably. It contains the full proceedings of the various societies devoted to horticulture, agriculture and kindred topics, and no effort has been spared to make the paper a pure representative of the farmers' interests. Upright, fearless and honest, its opinions are respected and its statements accepted. If the reputation of Dewey & Co. rested on this journal alone, there would be no cause to be ashamed of the record.

Fraternal Journals.

But, while the establishment of the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS and of the PACIFIC RURAL PRESS and their advancement to their present position have been accomplished, this work by no means represents all that has been done as publishers by the firm. A specialty has been made of fraternal publications. The Golden Gate Sentinel was purchased, and the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN established in its stead, this journal being devoted exclusively to the interests of the Ancient Order of United Workmen—an Order which has grown at a very remarkable rate, on this coast particularly. The State of New York alone exceeds in number the Workmen in California. The WATCHMAN is the official organ of the Order, having been officially indorsed by the Grand Lodge, and has done much to enhance and popularize the fraternity.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is another journal devoted, as its name indicates, to the interests of fraternal organizations. Some twelve of the best Orders are represented in its columns, and it has, like the WATCHMAN, certain features also which make it a favorite home paper. The MASONIC RECORD represents the interests of all branches of Masonry and the Order of the Eastern Star. Official recommendations have been given it by the Grand Secretaries of different branches, and by the last Grand Chapter of the O. E. S. The INDEPENDENT RECORD is the organ of the Independent Order of Chosen Friends of the Pacific Coast. The PYTHIAN RECORD is devoted to the large and growing Order of Knights of Pythias. The FRATERNAL RECORD, of which it is the out-growth, was officially indorsed by the last Grand Lodge at San Jose. The PYTHIAN RECORD has been indorsed by leading Grand Officers since. The AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR RECORD succeeds to the place formerly occupied by another journal, and represents the American Legion of Honor. It is heartily indorsed by the principal Grand Lodge officers. Each of these journals collect all items of local interest, as well as such matter as is of general value to members of the respective Orders. The official indorsements given them show the appreciation in which they are held, and prove, also, the confidence in which the firm which controls them is held. All of them are first-class journals, ably edited and conducted in a manner to reflect credit on the Orders they represent, as well as the publishers. It is proper here to remark that these fraternal journals, although published under fraternal publishing companies, are principally conducted by Dewey & Co., in connection with the most able and experienced writers in each separate organization.

The LADIES' HOME JOURNAL is devoted, as its name indicates, to the instruction, entertainment and advancement of women. Literature, art and fashion are represented in its columns. Other journals have been established and then merged into the present publications, and have helped strengthen and widen the circulation of the same.

A Thoroughly Established Firm.

The twenty years' experience has benefited the patrons of Dewey & Co. as well as the firm itself. It has now in its employment men specially fitted to take charge of its various departments and attend to its details, a number of whom have been with it for many years.

This is but a brief glance backward we have given. It would be difficult in a short space to recall the vicissitudes of so many years, or many details, important in themselves at the time, but merged now into the finished whole. The firm of Dewey & Co. may congratulate itself on having placed itself in the front rank with those established among the progressive people on this coast. The 20th anniversary of the firm was celebrated on the 1st inst., by a holiday given to the employees by the proprietors, and a social reunion and presentation in the evening, fuller reference to which is made in another column.

By the co-operation of the best talent procurable on the different departments and the dovetailing of one part to another, a strong, united feeling has existed, which has been of great value to the establishment. No firm could have succeeded so well in this business unless it had the facilities alluded to. The patent, publishing, engraving, advertising, and other departments have helped each other in such a manner as to make a strong whole.

All of the present publications of the firm are illustrated. Indeed, Dewey & Co. have made a specialty of illustrated periodicals, and have made thousands of engravings since their establishment in business.

Though in the earlier days of the existence of the firm a struggle was necessary to establish the journals on a firm foundation, of late years the reputation for energy, perseverance and honesty which it has attained has been of much benefit to it, that more recent attempts at enlargement have prospered well. The firm has long been established on a sound financial basis and its success has been continuous.

The editors assume responsibility for statements in the sketch, it having been prepared without asking consent of the publishers.

A Pleasant Reunion.

Appropos of the foregoing we notice briefly an enjoyable affair that occurred on this holiday for members and employees of the firm.

Some of the oldest of the employees had arranged a quiet little programme for a celebration of their own, aside from the holiday portion, not desiring to see the gifts all on one side. Mr. Charles C. Yale, editor of the MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS, who had been longest with the firm—some 13 years—had invited the married ones to dine at his residence, in Oakland, in the afternoon; and had arranged for the principal employees to come there later in the evening.

After dinner, when the ladies and gentlemen came into the parlor, to their surprise they found a number of acquaintances awaiting there ready to offer congratulations. Mr. E. J. Wickson, Editor of the PACIFIC RURAL PRESS, on behalf of his brother employees, made a few remarks on the history of the firm and the occasion of the gathering, concluding by presenting a silver tea service to each of the members of the firm as a mark of esteem from the employees.

Mr. W. B. Ewer responded to the sentiments expressed, in a happy manner, though somewhat "taken aback" with surprise. He reviewed the early difficulties the firm had labored under, and spoke of its present position, sketching briefly some of the events in its history, and thanking his friends for their interest in its fortunes. Mr. A. T. Dewey also thanked those present for their unsolicited good wishes and kindly feelings towards himself and partner. He spoke feelingly of the relation of employer and employed, and hoped that these friendly relations now existing would always be maintained.

Mr. J. C. Hoag, on being called upon, in a happy vein told those present of the estimation of the firm in the business world, and extended some complimentary remarks to its members. Mr. George H. Strong, manager of the Patent Department, and Mr. W. B. Turner, editor of the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, also made remarks.

The Fireside.

A Mother's Dreams.

[Written by MARY RIBBELL CORREY.]

The crimson curtains shut us in with all the evening's brightness.
The old cat purrs, in soft content, in ruddy coal-fire's glow.
The shaded lamplight gently falls upon the goodman's paper,
And through the dainty fabric goes my needle to and fro.
The heavy outside door is shut with brisk and hasty clanger.
A young man's step is on the walk, a girlish laugh sounds sweet.
And murmurs slowly die away and echo ever fainter
As youth and hope go gaily forth adown the city street.
A yellow glove, with gaping palm, is tossed upon the table,
A fan has been rejected as a useless, broken toy.
While up above, in cradle bed a baby girl is sleeping,
And still at last beside her is my happy, noisy boy.
The two go forth, with merry laugh, to seek the evening's pleasures
And two are folded soft beneath a watching angel's wing.
While I, with all a mother's hopes, look down the shadowy future
And dream of all the blessed gifts the coming year will bring.
I see the years of patient toil, and earnest, true endeavor,
The giant's grim my eldest born shall conquer, day by day;
And softly in the silence I hear a lover's whisper,
That, falling on a willing ear, shall lure my girl away.
I see the noisy boy a lad, the child a dainty maiden,
And youth's fair flowers shall bloom for them, and youth's blithe birds shall sing,
While I, with whitening hair, shall sit and dream as now I'm dreaming
Of all the many blessed gifts the coming year shall bring.
Of loving hearts and happy homes and hope's most fair fruition,
And spirits reaching ever on beyond these earthly years,
And steadfast souls to labor still, though skies shall lower and darken,
And eyes to see the heavenly light that shines on earthly tears.
And two low graves are greenly clad, and weary heads are resting,
But faithful hearts remember them through all the years to come;
And haply in a pleasant land, I'll dream, as now I'm dreaming,
Of a day when little children shall be safely gathered home.

Halloween.

[Written by FANNIE ISABELLE SHERRICK.]

Outside the autumn wind was sighing mournfully, and the tall maples made somber shadows as they swayed to and fro; but inside Grandma Welton's snug cottage all was bright and cheerful, and Eva Manning sang merrily as she laid the table for three, stopping now and then in her pleasant task to speak to Fido, who lay curled up on the hearth-rug, winking sleepily at the blazing coals, and wagging his tail affectionately at his young mistress whenever she stopped to notice him.
At last the table was laid, the toast nicely browned and the tea made. Then Eva went to the window, and, drawing aside the curtain, looked out; but the view evidently did not please her, for she shivered slightly and turned away.
"Such a dreary night," she said, "I do wish father would come."
"Why so impatient, dear?" asked grandma gently, "it is not time yet."
"Yes, but don't you know, grandma, I am going to a party to-night. This is Halloween, and we are going to have a real old-fashioned Halloween party. Jack Martindale is coming for me in an hour, and I must be ready."
A faint tinge of red came on her fair face as she made this explanation, but grandma seemed too absorbed in her own thoughts to notice it.
"A real old-fashioned Halloween party," grandma said, lingering over the words as though they brought back painful recollections. "Ah, yes; I remember one, too, as I hope you will not have cause to remember this one."
Eva looked at the calm, white face before her, crowned with its halo of snowy hair, and she wondered silently of the days so long gone by when Grandma Welton was a young girl like herself, and of the memories that must throng in the mind of one so old and feeble. It seemed strange to think that grandma had ever been young or girlish. She seemed always to have been the patient, white-haired saint that she was now.
Taking a low stool, Eva placed it beside her grandmother, and sitting down, laid her brown head on the arm of the easy chair. For a moment it rested there, and then grandma's hand stroked the heavy braids lovingly.
"Dear," she said, "shall I tell you a story? A little leaf out of the pages of my own girlhood. It will be soon told, and it will pass the time away."
"Oh, yes!" Eva lifted her head and looked up with eager, bright eyes. "A story of your own girlhood? Oh, how very, very long ago that must have been!"
"Yes, it was long ago, dear; yet it seems to me that it was only last night that I sat, a girl like you, Eva, before the huge log fire, watching with bright eyes the pictures that came and went, the visions of the future that every girlish heart sees—in the flames, in the shadows, everywhere."
"When I was eighteen—just your age, dear—I, too, was invited to a Halloween party. I am sorry to say I went, for the memory of that night saddens me always. But it is so many years ago I should have forgotten it—only it seems to me that these sad memories cling to us always and we can not forget them."

For a moment she was silent, and Eva did not disturb her, for she seemed to be dreaming of other scenes in that almost forgotten past, and the sad look on her softened features hushed the impatient words that rose to Eva's lips. With a sigh, Eva rested her flushed cheek on her dimpled hand, and patiently waited.
"We were all young," grandma continued, "and all bound on having a jolly time. So we sang, and played games, and tried all the mysterious arts of Halloween that we knew or could read of in our dream-books. Then we gathered in a group before the great log fire, and merrily roasted the glossy chestnuts and peeled the delicious rosy-cheeked apples that lay heaped up temptingly upon the table. Each one tried his fortune with the apple parings and with the chestnuts, and every one laughed at his neighbor's success or failure. The girls blushed and grew prettier as they pronounced the mysterious words, and many a shout of laughter rang through the old-fashioned house when some girl's blunder proclaimed to the little group the direction in which her thoughts wandered and the particular youth which her young fancy favored."
"Suddenly, Amy Devering, our hostess, clapped her hands, in a great state of excitement. 'Oh, girls, we have forgotten the most important ceremony of all! Shall I tell you what it is?'
"Yes!" we all exclaimed in a breath, eagerly crowding around the fair-haired girl, who was more like an imperious little princess than a sturdy country maiden.
"Listen!" She held up a small finger warningly, and we all waited with hushed breathing for her further mandates.
"At a quarter to 12 o'clock this night the most intrepid damsel in this assemblage will don her out-door garments and walk solemnly around this house three times. This must be done deliberately, slowly, not in haste; and she must think steadily of her future husband."
"In the meantime three of us will repair to the cellar, with a looking-glass and two candles. The mirror we will place upon a chair in the center of the room; the candles we will place upon the steps leading down into the cellar. When the maiden who chooses to perform this ceremony has completed the third circuit, she will descend these steps, taking with her the lighted candles; these she will place upon either side of the looking-glass upon the chair. When she will kneel in front of this Halloween shrine, closing her eyes and repeating these lines aloud:
"Husband, husband would I see,
Fair or dark is he to be?
Should I wed by maiden's grace?
Glass, I pray thee, show his face."
"Exactly at the first stroke of twelve she will open her eyes and look into the mirror in front of her. If she is to wed, the face of her future lord will appear in the glass beside her own before the last stroke of the hour."
"Splendid!" we all exclaimed, wondering at the amazing resources of this little witch of a blonde who always had some new or unthought-of ideas to rouse our youthful fancies to fever-heat. It was a capital idea, and we all hailed it with delight. This ceremony was just the thing to try on a night like that—a dismal sort of evening it was, with the wind moaning in the old elms, and sighing around the house-corners, and the weird shadows suggesting all kinds of uncanny spirits and invisible denizens of another sphere—just the night, indeed, for such an escapade, when the fates were surely waiting to bestow upon courageous mortals the mysterious signs of future events.
"But who would go?" We all shivered and drew closer to the cheerful fire, and the girls looked from one to the other with questioning glances. Evidently our curiosity to know what fate had in store for us was not strong enough to tempt any of us to go forth alone into the mysterious night.
"One after another declined to take advantage of this wonderful opportunity to see their future husband, until the proposition reached Stella Adams. She had been sitting quietly by herself for a few minutes, apparently lost in a brown-study, her dark eyes fixed upon the fire, and her rounded, dusky cheek made more beautiful by a warm, red glow.
"She electrified us all by leaping to her feet, saying, 'I will go. Who dares to say Stella Adams is afraid of anything?'
"I say so," Mark Andrews left his seat and looked the proud girl in the face: 'Stella Adams, this is folly. Surely, you would not risk your health or nerves for such nonsense as this.'
"Why not?" A proud disdain passed across her spirited face, and her dark eyes flashed. 'The time has not come yet when I have to ask permission of Mark Andrews to go or come. I shall go; and I hope the fates will be kind enough to show me the face of the husband I have never yet looked upon.'
"Only Mark Andrews understood the meaning of those last words. They had been lovers, these two. A hasty quarrel had partly separated them, and now these words widened the breach and stung to the quick the proud soul of Mark Andrews.
"A spirit of revenge took possession of him, and he resolved to show this girl her weakness and his power. He loved her, it is true; unselfishly it may be, but fiercely, jealously, as no man ought to love a woman, and his exacting affection had maddened her willful spirit and forced her into this open rupture.

"Somehow I seemed to feel that all was not well, and a presentiment of evil was upon me that I could not shake off. I tried to dissuade her from her purpose, but she only laughed at me for my fears, while Amy, that madcap girl who perfectly adored her friend Stella, stood by and gleefully applauded her courage.
"Stella—bright star indeed she was—donned her wraps and started forth on her pilgrimage. The pale moon peeped forth from the dark clouds and made strange fantastic shapes under the old elms, but Stella, peering out into the night, seemed to feel no fear of impending danger. Indeed, I almost fancy sometimes I can hear her musical laugh as it rang through the hallway and floated far up into the night. For one moment the moon shone upon her beautiful, lifted face as she waved her hand, and then the clouds drifted across the moon again, and Stella Adams walked away into the shadows.
"Come," said Amy, putting a candle into my hand and another into Mark Andrews'. Then, with a laugh, she took a small mirror hanging on the wall and led the way to the cellar. We obeyed the commands of our leader and left the candles, as directed, on the steps.
"Let me stay," I pleaded. 'Stella may be frightened, and I think one of us should remain within hearing.'
"No," Mark shook his head. 'Stella Adams wanted to see the man she is to marry; let her see him. I shall remain secreted, and when the proper moment arrives it will be my face she will see and no ghostly apparition.'
"Oh, capital!" Amy clasped her hands in a perfect transport of delight. 'How lovely of you, Mark. Why, that's just the proper finale; but you must make yourself look as much like a ghost as possible, and convince her that the fates have really sent her warning to marry you.'
"I'll see to that. In one year you will see Stella Adams my wife, and all because of the apparition she will behold this night. She will not dare to defy fate by wedding any one else."
"Somehow I mistrusted this handsome fellow, and I did not like this plan of frightening our brave Stella into a marriage with him. A feeling was upon me that all would not be well. Amy loved Stella passionately, but her love of frolic and fun would lead her into any folly, and I believed that I knew Stella better than she did. In spite of her fearless, undaunted ways, Stella Adams possessed a nervous, high-strung temperament, and she had always had a fear of any thing uncanny. Man or beast she was not afraid of, but she had a dread of death and the supernatural which had always struck me as most singular. I had never known her to enter a graveyard, and the mere recital of a ghost story would blanch her face and dilate her eyes with terror. What had possessed her to enter into this folly I could not imagine, and I felt a decided misgiving as to the consequences.
"I tried to dissuade Amy from her purpose, but she and Mark only laughed at me for my foolish notions.
"Do you suppose I would allow harm to come to Stella?" Mark said. 'Why, it's absurd. Stella will think it a good joke when I tell her afterwards.'
"And so I allowed them to proceed with their nonsense, though I have regretted it since every day of my life. But I was young and foolish as they, and I loved Stella and Mark so well that to end their estrangement I was willing this little farce should be played.
"Amy threw a large black shawl over Mark, completely covering him, except his face. Then she gave her orders.
"When you hear the clock in the kitchen strike the hour of midnight, you must come from your hiding-place and show your face in the mirror to the left of Stella's, so that when she opens her eyes she will immediately behold you. At the last stroke of the hour disappear noiselessly up the other stairway, and take your place among us; and when Stella takes her candle and comes back, appear as if nothing had happened. The fact of your being with us, and apparently unconscious of any thing unusual having occurred, will convince her that she has really beheld an apparition, and that this magic spell has revealed to her the face of her future lord.'
"Mark agreed to obey her commands implicitly, and we turned to leave him just as Stella was beginning her last circuit, walking slowly, with her head bent down and her hands clasped behind her.
"After all, I consoled myself with the thought that the cellar was not such a ghostly place as it might be, and that Stella was a brave girl. A cellar in those days did not mean a damp hole given up to mice and rats, but a cool, dark room, used generally as a dairy and pantry, with a clean floor nicely boarded over, and rows of swinging shelves upon which thrifty housewives set their shining pans of milk and stored rows of amber-colored jellies and jars of delicious pickles and preserves. On the whole, it was not a bad place to enter alone, even at midnight; and I almost smiled at my own foolish misgivings.
"But a sudden gust of wind blew our candle out, and I shivered and drew closer to Amy. The awful blackness was impenetrable, but a thousand eyes seemed staring at me out of the inky shadows. Then a ghostly glimmer came down the stairway, as if the moon were struggling through the clouds again. Mark hastily struck a light, but ere the candles were relit I had bounded up the stairway and was out of sight, Amy following me.

"The group in the sitting-room crowded around us, but Amy placed her forefinger on her lips and led the way to the kitchen, where the great old-fashioned clock on the mantel-piece was almost pointing to the midnight hour. 'Hush!' she said, 'and wait.'
"A solemn hush fell upon us all. We sat silently watching the clock. A mysterious awe was creeping over us, which seemed strange and out of place. A moment before we had been gay, reckless, daring. Now we were awed and silent. Was a presentiment coming to Amy, too, that she was so still, watching with fixed eyes the slow hands of the clock, or was it only the mysterious influence of the night that affected us all?
"I began to grow uneasy, wishing that Amy had never thought of this foolish ceremony. What if any harm should come to Stella. How we would regret our folly.
"Suddenly the old clock rang out the hour. One! Two! Not one of us moved. Three! Surely so silent were we all that we might have been expecting ghosts to leap out of the shadowy corner of the room. Four! An awful shriek resounded through the house that made my blood run cold.
"A thrill of horror ran through us all, and for a second we were speechless. Then I leaped from my seat and rushed through the door.
"At the head of the stairway I saw Stella. In the pale moonlight her face looked ghastly. Her black hair, unloosened from its coil, hung over her shoulders, and her eyes were opened wide with terror. The sight nearly paralyzed me. Behind her was Mark, and he tried to take hold of her, but she dashed him aside as if he had been a child, and fled past us both.
"In a few moments we caught her, and tried to bring her back, but she resisted all our efforts, raving in a strange, incoherent fashion. Her hands were cold like ice, and she shivered continually. Finally, by main force, we brought her to the house and placed her in a chair by the fire, but she looked at us with a blank, unmeaning gaze, and her white lips muttered strange words that we could not understand.
"My God!" Amy said, kneeling beside her. 'Don't you see, she's mad!'
"Mark Andrews grew whiter than Stella, and had we not caught him he would have fallen to the floor.
"Amy's words were only too true. The light of reason had faded from Stella Adams's eyes, and as we afterwards knew, it had faded forever. It was a sad night for all of us, but all the bitter tears that Amy shed could not atone for that night's folly. As long as she lived her life was embittered by its remembrance.
"Poor Stella! She was so bright, so beautiful, so fearless, we never dreamed that such a shadow could fall upon her. Her sad fate broke her father's heart, and we learned afterwards what we had not known before, that Stella's mother had died in a madhouse.
"Poor Stella! Bright star that went out into darkness; bitterly indeed did she pay for her foolish defiance. I would rather have seen her dead in her coffin than seen her doomed to such a fate, for God knows it was worse than death.
"Shall I tell you the sequel to this Halloween romance? Years afterward Stella Adams died a raving maniac, and Mark Andrews went away never to come back again. I heard that he died long ago in Australia, and that the last word upon his lips was 'Stella.'
"With a sigh, grandma folded her hands in her lap and leaned back in her chair. The story was told, and the leaf was turned down in her book of life, never to be read again.
Eva wiped away the tears that had come into her brown eyes, and said softly:
"Dear grandma, can I guess why you told me this story to-night? It is because you do not wish me to be foolish this Halloween night, and be led by my companions into any such dangerous experiment as that which wrecked poor Stella's life."
"Yes, dear." Grandma stroked the brown hair lovingly. "It is a warning. God forbid that my darling should ever have the memory of such a sorrowful Halloween to sadden her life. Let the fates take care of themselves; and be contented to know of the future only that which God sees fit to reveal."
Eva kissed the dear white-haired saint reverently, and took the lesson to heart.
Did grandma know that she and Jack had quarreled, she wondered. Perhaps. At any rate, it was a double lesson, and when Jack came an hour later he found her all smiles and dimples, with forgiveness in her heart and kind words on her lips. For him this was indeed the most beautiful Halloween of all his life—and all because of grandma's story.

THE BEAUTIFUL SNOW.—A Swiss scientist, Floegel, is said to have found, in examining the residue from the evaporation of freshly-fallen snow, living infusoria and algae, bacilli and micrococci, mites, diatoms, spores of fungi, in immense numbers; also, fibers of wood, mouse hairs, pieces of butterfly wings, skin of the larvae of insects, cotton fibers, pieces of grass, epidermis, pollen grains, rye and potato flour, grains of quartz, minute pieces of roofing tiles, with bits of iron and coal. Still poets continue to use snow as a symbol of absolute purity.

You have to take hold on life with a light grip sometimes if you hold to the things that are satisfactory and soul-nourishing and in every way conducive to the best ends. You have to exercise a determination that you don't possess, and sometimes embark on a stormy sea and sail for a haven you know not of. It won't do to be disturbed by trifles or turn from a straight course because of an obstruction. Who can measure the possibilities of the human will? To what high places can we ride on its broad-wheeled car? If you want to go down the broad grade to discouragement, disgrace and despair, just relax the will that holds you where you are, and note how soon the brake will fly off and the mile posts begin to recede. Remembering that three-fourths of life is up hill work anyway, it is easier to keep on determining to be something and do something and have something than to stop at frequent intervals, saying "this is a good place to rest." When it becomes necessary to turn aside from the strides one is making towards a complete and honorable life to plunge into some dangerous mirage of relaxation and questionable amusement, one might as well stay off all the time, to save those who peradventure might be dragged down also. There comes a time to every one when he must excel himself. He must be stronger than he is, or wiser than he is, or smarter than he is, or, yes, better, nobler than he is. One has to take hold of the imperishable knowledge of what he should be or do and get there somehow.

People fail because they won't be what they can. It makes one's heart ache to see a man or woman toil up to a good position or standing in life then turn around and walk back again in

How the Dormouse Spent Thanksgiving.

The two little girls, Dot and the Dormouse, had been with grandma a whole year, because their mamma was in Europe; and who, under those circumstances, could take as good care of them as grandma? Of course these were not their real names, but they have been called by them so long that I have really forgotten what their christening names were. Dot received her pet name from being a wee thing with flaxen hair and wide-open eyes. Aunt Mary said she was more like an interrogation point than a period, because her mouth was always screwed up in the form of a question.

"What is it for? What does that mean?" were her favorite forms of speech.

The Dormouse was so called on account of her ability to sleep at any time, curling herself up in odd corners for that purpose. Once grandma had found a little dark bundle behind the umbrella rack, and in the twilight thought it must be Rover, the big Newfoundland; but if it were, no calling or coaxing would induce him to stir. Then she gave a gentle poke with an umbrella, and who should rise, rubbing sleepy eyes, but that young Dormouse. Another time she slept away a long summer afternoon in the garret, while the men in the neighborhood were searching through the woods and dragging the pond for her.

A bright little girl, too, active and noisy enough to take the roof off the house—that is, a very shaky roof from a very old house—but somehow she never seemed so happy as when, dolls and card houses forgotten, she was rolled up in a ball in some warm corner, sound asleep.

When Thanksgiving Day was talked of, the two little girls were wild with impatience until that the Dormouse looked very sober. At first grandma thought it was a more than unusual strong attack of sleepiness; but it proved to be something different. When it was within an hour of the time for the carriage she crept up to grandma and said, "I don't want to go."

"Not want to go to Aunt Mary's? Is the girlie crazy!" cried grandma, in astonishment. "Don't you feel well, dear?"

"Yes'm, only I don't want to go."

"Well, tell grandma all about it. She can't take you on her lap because that would hurt the ankle, but you can come close on a hassock. Now, what is it?"

"Well," said the Dormouse, not looking up, and hesitating as if she were half afraid of being laughed at. "I don't want to leave you alone; I'm afraid you won't have a good time with only Bridget."

"The dear little girl, said grandma, stroking the rough, curly hair. "You mustn't stay at home for that, though grandma thanks you ever so much for thinking of it. See, I shall read in this nice green book, then I shall knit a little, and Bridget will bring my dinner. After that perhaps I shall read again and take a nap, and then it will be supper time, and I shall go to bed early."

"But I don't want to go, grandma," said the Dormouse. "Please let me stay."

And grandma did let her stay, after talking a long time without being able to show the little girl that she did not wish the good time at Aunt Mary's to be given up.

"Now," said grandma to the Dormouse when the carriage rolled away from the door, and it was too late for the little girl to change her mind, "Now, I have something to give you, and I do hope you will make the best use of it."

"What is it?" asked the Dormouse, putting down her handkerchief, with which she had been wiping away a tear behind the window-curtain, half-repenting that she had let Dot go went to the library, and with great care took down a large book, which the children were only allowed to have when they were good, and carried it to grandma, saying gravely, "Miss Dormouse says will you please show me the pictures in this, and explain 'em?"

"Certainly, I shall be very glad to oblige Miss Dormouse. She is an excellent lady."

So they look at pictures for an hour or more, and grandma told stories of going up the Rhine, and seeing the beautiful castles there, as the Dormouse some time would when she grew up and went to Europe. Dinner time came, and the little girl said she should have hers right by grandma's chair. Bridget was bidden to wheel up a larger table, and the Dormouse thought turkey and cranberry sauce had never seemed so nice before. Only that once did the Dormouse feel tempted to allow herself to do something grandma would not have liked; to tell Bridget to bring her a large, thick piece of mince pie, but grandma had trusted her so that she couldn't quite bear to do it. After dinner, while grandma took her nap, what should the Dormouse do but get into as small a corner as she could make behind the sofa pillow, and, cuddling her favorite doll, go to sleep too, and never wake till the middle of the afternoon. Then she was a wee bit cross for two or three minutes, because it did seem a pity to lose any of Thanksgiving Day without knowing where it went; but she was a wise little girl, and after thinking it over and deciding that she was happier asleep than anywhere, she recovered her good temper. Grandma was by that time ready to play letters, and after that came the best part of the day.

"Will you ask Miss Dormouse if she is willing you should make some candy over the sitting-room fire?" asked grandma.

"Make candy!" cried the Dormouse, clapping her hands. "Why, of course she's willing. She 'tickerly said I was to make candy whenever I wanted to."

"Then ask Bridget to put the molasses and sugar in the saucepan for you, and you may bring it right in here. Miss Dormouse has taught you to be so careful that I'm sure you won't spill any thing on the carpet."

And she didn't. Her little fingers got very sticky, and she smelled of butter and chocolate for hours, but the candy was nice enough to pay for it all.

Supper time came too soon, and then grandma said: "What time did Miss Dormouse tell you to go to bed?"

"She said I might sit up an hour, no, half an hour later; and would you please tell me a story!" This was said rather slowly and doubtfully, for when it came to the bed question she was a little fearful that grandma might repent of her promise, but the answer came at once.

"I am very glad. She is wise to give you a half hour, for that is neither too much nor too little time, and I shall be happy to tell you a story."

So the Dormouse sat at her feet and listened to a story of grandma's childhood, and then, oh, so sleepy! she was taken to bed. It was a quiet Thanksgiving, but I am sure as happy as any she ever spent.—Cultivator.

British Columbia.

To show that our whole Coast is progressing and manifesting the outward signs of prosperity and stability, we give on this page a view of the government buildings recently erected at Victoria, British Columbia. Our sister commonwealth at the north is just now enjoying gratifying development, and is anticipating still greater things upon the completion of the Canadian Pacific railway. The buildings shown in the engraving, which are five in number, are built of red brick, of Swiss style of architecture, and situated on a gently rising slope on the south side of James Bay, a charming inclosure, with well kept lawns, and embowered with beautiful shrubbery and evergreen trees. The large building in the center contains the rooms of the Lieutenant-Governor, Treasury, Provincial Secretary's office, and Executive Council Chamber. The printing office is on the right, the land office on the left, and standing immediately behind, as viewed from the bay, are the courthouse and hall of the Legislative Assembly.

These buildings possess unusual interest as showing how rapidly institutions are built up on this Coast. Only about a quarter of a century ago the government was represented by the old Hudson Bay Company's fort. With the exception of the annual visits of one of the company's trading ships from England, little sailing crafts and Indian canoes, with the solitary little wharf at which they moored, fairly indicate the commerce of the province in those pioneer days. The sight of those primitive structures with the bastions and high surrounding palisades or ramparts is now occupied by business blocks. No trace of the venerable pile exists to-day. The last to succumb to the inevitable was the building used as a storehouse by the company, which, after serving for a time as a public hall and theater, was recently torn down to make room for a magnificent four-story edifice, for the accommodation of the Colonist and its extensive printing business.

THERE will very probably be a dispute between Shoshone and Kootenai counties, I. T., as to which county the new mines are located in. It seems that the mines are on the summit of the Coeur d'Alene range of mountains, and that forms the boundary between the two counties.

the same tracks, or follow somebody else over a dizzy precipice.

Of course our hearts are aching all the time for the wrecks of precious lives that might have been as high and worthy and pure. Why can not a character in life be like a fine suburban residence, clean and shapely and picturesque from all points? Too many are like a dwelling in a city row—there is a very presentable front, highly tasteful, decorated, while the back view presents a plain, ungraceful crowded building, weather-stained and dirty, supplemented by a most detestable back-yard.

So, when one's reputation shines and flaunts in the sun, we shrink from getting around closer where one may catch a glimpse of an unsightly, unsavory back view. Well, one must depend upon the will-power to rectify all this. One must freshen up and elevate and purify, then vow by the sacred honor that is in us to keep clean. Then comes the tight grip and the strong pull and the long pull, and the exercise of the soul-strength that is greater than it appears.

Young men sow wild oats till they can not cease from sowing, and they are lost in the tangled thicket; people of bright prospects become self-assured and careless and neglectful, and come to want; women are superficial and untidy and take to their bosoms a fiend called "gossip;" great men allow their private lives to become detestable—and so the world slides on downward as if all this was the necessary inheritance of life; as if one must necessarily cartoon himself.

There is always a way out of the mire if one has grip enough; and one's own heart can light the sacred fire to guide himself back to the clean, straight road of energy, honor, fidelity and general self-sacrifice for those who lean upon him. A woman makes of herself, if she wishes, a star of love and happiness; and a man makes of himself, if he wills, a pillar of light, a strong deliverer, an arm of might in time of need.

Brentwood, Cal.

grandma had decided whether they should all three go away to spend the holiday or remain at home. A letter had come from Aunt Mary inviting them all to her house, and as she had the very best cranberry tarts and plum cake ever made, as there were five of the dearest little cousins in the world to be seen there, with horses, cows and sheep, and flocks of doves, it is quite natural that both children should declare their happiness depended on going to Aunt Mary's. So it was decided to go, and two days beforehand their dolls' little trunks were packed, and grandma had made each of these waxen young ladies a plush cloak and bonnet to travel in. I must tell you about grandma, that she was not an old lady at all. To be sure her hair was gray, and she wore lovely little lace caps, but she was a very pretty and young-looking grandma. The very morning before Thanksgiving, as she was coming down to breakfast, with the two little girls dancing on before her, she slipped and fell, giving her ankle a bad sprain. Of course Dot and Dormouse thought something very dreadful had happened when they saw her paleness; and when she was obliged to sit with her foot in a chair and have her dinner brought her, they were sure there was never any thing as bad as a sprained ankle.

"And about Thanksgiving," said the Dormouse dolefully. "Of course we can't go, can we, grandma?"

"I shall have to stay at home, little girl, but I have come to the conclusion that you and Dot can go just the same. Cousin Ruth says she will take charge of you in the cars, and I'm sure you will behave like two little ladies when you get there."

"Splendid!" cried Dot, clapping her hands, whirling round fast and then sitting down to make a cheese. "Of course, we shall behave, grandma, of course. Don't we always?"

So it was all settled, and the two children were quite happy until the morning of the day on which they were to go. Then it was noticed without her. "Is it something to eat?"

The fact is that the Dormouse was almost as fond of eating as she was of sleeping.

"No, it is only permission to do something that you never did for a whole day in your life before." The Dormouse's eyes began to grow big with interest. "I am going to let you do exactly as you please all day long. If you ask me for any thing possible for you to have I shall give it to you, and you may amuse yourself in any way your like. Now remember, I trust you as I never have before, and as very few little girls are ever trusted."

"Do exactly as I please?" said the Dormouse, still too astonished to understand.

"Exactly as you please."

"If I want a slice, a wholeslice, of plum cake, can I ask Bridget to give it to me?"

"Yes, if you think best. You see I am asking Miss Dormouse to take charge of you instead of doing it myself. I hope she won't let you do any thing of which I shouldn't approve."

The Dormouse was at once delighted with the idea, and became very important over being trusted. She danced away, and appeared in a moment with her hat on.

"Grandma, I am going for a little walk with Miss Dormouse," she said, looking out from under her hair rather slyly, to see if she should be forbidden.

But no; grandma only looked up from her knitting to say, "How long shall you be gone?"

"Oh, about twenty minutes," said the child, with as grave an air as if she knew all about telling time.

"Very well," said grandma, though she couldn't help wondering if the little girl meant to go out without a cloak, and feeling a little uneasy for fear she had made a mistake. But the Dormouse went out into the hall, and, putting up an umbrella, walked slowly up and down, bowing to imaginary people, and talking busily with Miss Dormouse. But that fun did not last for a very long time. Then she

Unity, No. 27.

On Tuesday evening, the 27th ult., Unity, No. 27, initiated 13 candidates, whose average age was 36 years and 5 months.

Valley, No. 30.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 28th, eight petitions were received and nine candidates were given the M. W. Degree, making a total of 992 members and petitions, and it may be now definitely stated that before the end of this term there will be over 1,000 members.

Burns, No. 68.

The fifth anniversary of Burns Lodge, No. 68, was celebrated at B'nai B'rith hall, on Wednesday evening, the 5th inst. It consisted of a dress party, social and ball, the happy participants carrying out a programme of 15 dances with quite a number of extras. This very enjoyable party was kept up until the morning hours, and was in every respect a first-class affair. Following are the several committees: Committee of Arrangements—Gus. Pohlmann, P. M. W., J. C. MacDougall, Chas. H. Vollmer, P. M. W., Chas. Thomson, P. M. W., L. G. Schord, P. M. W. Reception Committee—W. W. Magary, A. J. Fairweather, P. M. W., Andrew Craig, Henry Plagemann, Dr. Lee O. Rodgers, M. J. McGrath, P. M. W., John D. Seibe, W. C. Flint, P. M. W., Ed. Feusier, P. B. Quinlan, J. F. Plagemann, J. W. Curtis, Caston C. Butt, P. M. W., Dr. D. MacLean. Floor Manager—Gustave Pohlmann. Floor Committee—G. W. Ellis, L. Vincent, Fred. Seibe, Gus. Neuwirth, Ed. Riley, J. L. Fichtaler, J. C. MacDougall, William Daniels, Chas. Steinkamp.

Olympic, No. 127.

On Tuesday evening, the 27th ult., a very enjoyable meeting of Olympic, No. 127, was held at Washington hall, No. 35 Eddy St. Besides the usual attendance of members there were present Past Grand Master W. H. Jordan, E. M. Reading, P. M. W., and the WATCHMAN representative. The Degrees were conferred on two candidates, the work being well given, especially in the case of Master Workman A. P. Adams. After adjournment the assemblage formed in twos and marched to the music of piano to a room in the same building especially set apart for such purposes, where an appetizing spread greeted them. After becoming warmed up by the genial influence of the coffee and other delicacies, the "Good of the Order" seemed to be transferred from the Lodge room to the table in an intensified degree. Spirited addresses were made by Bros. Adams, Reading, Jordan, Cummings, Fish, Rossbach and others. In Bro. Jordan's address he paid a special tribute to the energy and ability of the reportorial staff of the WATCHMAN. Olympic will tender a public reception to all friends of both sexes at their hall next Tuesday evening, the 11th inst.

Noe Valley, No. 185.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—The Lodge room of Noe Valley Lodge, No. 185, in the suburbs of this city, was filled to its utmost capacity on the evening of the 27th ult. by the families and friends of its members, assembled to do honor to the third anniversary of its organization, at which time the following programme was given: Overture, Johnson [ & Gutman's band; song (encore) Bro. Sam Booth; a spirited and eloquent address on the beauties and benefits of Workmanship, J. W. Watson, Deputy Grand Recorder; song, Miss Louisa Carey; recitation, Miss Alice Simonds; recitation, Miss Sarah McMullen; song, Mr. Trebbell; recitation, "The Old Man's Story," Bro. Tom Maher; duet, Charles Kimic and son, and for recall, "Mary Kelly's Beau," by son, and "Little Meg and I," by Mr. Kimic; recitation, Mrs. McFadden; song, Mr. Stevens; songs by "German Singing Club;" recitation, Miss Dunsing. Afterwards dancing occupied the time until the early hours of morning, thus rounding out with satisfaction to all one of the most enjoyable occasions in the history of this growing young Subordinate. The committee on entertainment were: A. V. Thompson, President of the evening; W. C. Dudley, reception committee; C. Madson, floor committee. Yours in C., H. and P., J. D. THOMPSON.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Alameda, No. 5.

There are some few of the old Lodges which were organized at an early date in the formation of the Order in this State, which occasionally need a little urging to make them realize and appreciate to the full their highest privileges. Of this class is Alameda, No. 5. Having a membership of about 50, many of them representative men of the town, and being in a good financial condition, there is no reason why No. 5 should not have full meetings. But as one of the members explained to us while visiting them a few evenings since, "There are too many of them who have come to consider the insurance feature as paramount, and who think they do their full duty if they keep up their dues and assessments." We are glad to see an effort being made by a number of the brethren to revive the fraternal features and make Lodge meetings more attractive, for as a member remarked, "If the fraternal features of this Order are ever eliminated fully, it will die of dry rot." To further the aims of fraternal feeling, it was decided by those present to pay a fraternal visit to Pacific, No. 7, of Oakland, next Thursday evening, the 13th inst., if enough members could be gotten together to make a respectable delegation. We hope that every member of old Alameda will have pride enough in sustaining the dignity of the Lodge to turn out on this occasion and make a good showing.

Visit of Occidental, No. 6, to Oak Leaf, 35.

Last Monday evening a delegation about 50 strong from Occidental Lodge, No. 6, of West Oakland, paid a fraternal visit to Oak Leaf, No. 35, Oakland central, in return for one paid by Oak Leaf to Occidental a few weeks ago. When both of the Lodges had become assembled the spacious Lodge room was filled in an unusual manner, seats having to be brought in from outside to accommodate all present. During recess Supreme Master Workman Fish arrived and was received with honors. When "Good of the Order" was reached, a truly enjoyable time occurred. At the call of Master Workman Macdonald everyone responded without pressing, and all seemed to say just the right things at just the right times. Sallies of wit and humor enlivened the entire proceedings, and put all in a most happy mood. Among those who spoke were Bro. Moulton, Master Workman of Occidental, District Deputy Schutz, Supreme Master Workman Fish, Past Masters Hammer, Miller and McDonald, of Occidental, Ex-Mayor Robinson, Rev. M. S. Levy and Bro. Duntun, Past Masters of Oak Leaf, and Bros. Jones, Frost, Mackie, Johnson, Hirshberg, Stearie, Dr. Pratt and others representing both Lodges. About midway of the speech making, first-class refreshments were served and enjoyed by all. The entertainment was otherwise enlivened by some good music on piano and flute by brethren from Occidental. From a comparison of notes we find that both these Lodges are on a very successful footing financially and otherwise. Both pay sick benefits, and to a large amount yearly. Occidental, with a membership of 206, has over $2,000 in bank and owns Lodge furniture, etc., to the amount of $500. Supreme Master Workman Fish in his remarks said that he was glad to see that a new era of growth and prosperity seemed dawning on Workmanship; not that the Order had got into bad condition, for it has been having for some time a steady, healthy growth of about 1,000 per month, and has been more prosperous than any similar Order during the past year. But there are seasons of unusual growth which we occasionally meet, and the indications are now good for one of these. He closed with recommending the Lodge to send for one of the large portraits of Father Upchurch, to frame and hang in the Lodge room, and also to thereby assist in contributing to the support of the old gentleman. The suggestion was immediately acted upon, and the Recorder authorized to remit for one. Oak Leaf, before adjourning, agreed to pay a fraternal visit next Tuesday evening to Ashler, No. 165, of Alameda, and invited as many of Occidental as conveniently could to go along with them. These fraternal visits are productive of the highest good in many obvious ways. It was well on toward 11 o'clock before this pleasant gathering dispersed.

Pacific, No. 7.

At the last meeting of this Lodge resolutions were passed looking toward more stringent laws governing Medical Examiners, suggested by one case in particular on this month's assessment notice, which case is commented upon editorially elsewhere. The resolutions were: 1st. That the Medical Examiners of Pacific Lodge, No. 7, be instructed to communicate with the Grand Medical Examiner, to see if the case of the brother of Oroville Lodge, No. 40, (who died of consumption, at the age of 50, before he had been in the Order seven months,) can be investigated and such cases avoided in the future. 2d. That the representatives of Pacific, in the next Grand Lodge, be instructed to try to procure the passage of a law whereby the name of the Medical Examiner, who recommended any candidate for membership, should be printed on the assessment notices, in the paragraph giving the particulars in the case of the death of such brother, to the end that such publicity may render Medical Examiners more careful in the future.

It is announced that Pacific will receive a fraternal visit from Alameda, No. 5, next Thursday evening.

Keystone, No. 64.

Last Tuesday evening we spent a pleasant hour in the Lodge-room of Keystone, in the Medical College building on Clay street, Oakland. Owing to the fact that this is a little more to one side of the beaten line of travel than the halls of the other Oakland Lodges, it does not catch quite so many visitors, but those who find their way in there are nevertheless well repaid. As long as Keystone possesses such active officers and members as Bros. Alden, Schade, Nelson, Thorn, Lane, Menges and others, it is in no danger of falling behind the van. Keystone, one of the earliest Lodges of Alameda County to adopt the plan of public installations, proposes to keep it up well, and is now making extensive preparations for a public installation at the first meeting in January, that will be gotten up "perfectly regardless," and will doubtless eclipse all its previous efforts.

DEL NORTE COUNTY.

Del Norte, No. 183.

From the Del Norte Record, of the 17th ult., we take the following account of the way this subordinate celebrated anniversary day: "On Tuesday evening, Nov. 13th, Del Norte Lodge, No. 183, of the A. O. U. W., celebrated the sixth anniversary of the establishment of their Grand Lodge, in the Jurisdiction of the State of California. After the regular Lodge meeting in their hall the members thereof with a large number of ladies and gentlemen, proceeded to the hall of the Knights of Pythias where seats were arranged to accommodate them. R. G. Knox, Esq., called the meeting to order, and announced the programme of exercises. After the opening ode Mr. Knox read a selection of poetry which was executed in good style and well received. The Chairman then introduced Judge J. E. Murphy who addressed the audience on the origin and purposes of the Order, and who was frequently applauded. By special request he also rendered a recitation being 'Spartacus, the Gladiator.' After the closing ode the chairs were taken out of the hall and dancing was next in order. At 12 o'clock M. supper was announced when all proceeded to refresh themselves with the good things prepared. The evening's entertainment was ended at 3 o'clock A. M. when everybody present retired well satisfied with the reading, speaking and enjoyment generally furnished them by Del Norte Lodge."

LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Los Angeles, No. 55, and Others.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Your favor of the 21st inst., requesting account of our Lodge's reception of Grand Master Rogers, is received. In compliance with your request I will say that I do not deem myself competent to write a newspaper article, so will simply give you a few items in the matter mentioned, and you can arrange them in such form for publication as you deem desirable.

G. M. W. Rogers met with Los Angeles Lodge, No. 55, and Southern California Lodge, No. 191, said Lodges holding a joint session, Friday evening, the 23d inst., delegations from Wilmington Lodge, No. 130, Pasadena, No. 151, and Newhall, No. 218, being present. After the regular order of business for No. 55 (that being their regular night of meeting), had been completed, the officers vacated their positions in favor of the officers of 191, who proceeded to confer upon one candidate the J. W. and M. W. Degrees, the secret work being given by Grand Master Workman Bro. Rogers.

The officers of No. 55 then resumed their positions. After some singing and remarks by several of the members present, a recess was declared, when the brothers repaired to the reception room where a bountiful lunch was found spread upon the table, the brothers doing ample justice to the hot tea and coffee and eatables provided.

The Lodge was again called to order, when G. M. W. Rogers was immediately called upon for an address, which was responded to in a very able manner, though on account of a severe cold contracted on the trip he was so hoarse as to make it evident to those present that the effort to speak caused him much annoyance. The meeting was then closed in the regular form, the members present (about 110 in number), judging from their faces, having enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

The following evening, Lodges No. 55 and 191 tendered Bro. Rogers a reception at Turn Verein hall. I inclose the following programme of the exercises, which programme was carried out in an excellent manner: Opening ode, by the Lodge; musical selection, Haydn string quartet; recitation, by Tom Barnes; solo, (a) "One Summer Night" (Grisi), (b) "O Fair and Sweet and Holy (Rubenstein), Miss A. F. George; address of welcome, by Bro. W. A. Cheney; address by Grand Master Workman J. T. Rogers; closing ode, by the Lodge. The following members constituted the Reception Committee: Past Masters of Southern California Lodge, No. 191: H. R. Brown, R. G. Cunningham, E. H. Grassett, Geo. A. Townsend, J. M. Guinn and Master Workman C. A. Baskerville; Past Masters of Los Angeles Lodge, No. 55: Walter Lindley, James Velsir, James Cuzner, S. M. Perry, Walter Devereaux, S. Stoll, Al. Cobler, P. W. Dooner, Tom F. Barnes and Master Workman A. C. Doan.

During the day, Friday, the 23rd, D. D.

G. M. W. Bro. Al. Cobler and Bro. C. A. Baskerville, M. W. of 191, accompanied by their ladies, and Bro. Rogers and wife, spent a few hours driving through Pasadena and the San Gabriel Valley. On Saturday, the day following, the G. M. W. and wife were entertained by the ladies of Fidelia Lodge, No. 14, D. of H.

The G. M. W. left here Sunday, the 25th, taking the steamer from San Pedro for San Buenaventura, and expressed himself as very much pleased with the cordial reception received at the hands of the members of Nos. 55 and 191, his only regret being that time prevented him from making a more continued visit.

I regret that I am not competent to write an article on the items given herein that would be worthy of publication, but I trust you will use the items to the best advantage for publication in your very valuable paper.

Fraternally yours, C. H. WHITE, Recorder No. 55.

[We thank Bro. White for his interesting and newsy article, a perusal of which will cause anyone to differ with him to the extent of believing that he is thoroughly competent to write a good descriptive newspaper article. We accordingly publish the letter as he sent it, instead of following his modest suggestions.—EDS. WATCHMAN.]

Masonic Hall, last evening, at 7:30, was filled with a large assembly of members and invited guests of the A. O. U. W. At eight o'clock District Deputy Thomas Nixon delivered the opening address, and introduced the Grand Master of the United Workmen, J. T. Rogers, who, after taking the chair, advanced and delivered a brilliant and able address on "The Good of all Orders." The discourse was an embodiment of truths and solid arguments in favor of different brotherhoods, and the grand results accruing not only to individuals but to the world from associations so formed. He threw special light on the details and workings of the Order of the A. O. U. W., showing clearly the excellence of aims and beneficence of its accomplished purposes. Statistics were presented proving that great good has already been done by the Order, and showing the future benefits to be derived from membership with it. The lecture was listened to with intense appreciation and evidence of marked approval from the audience. After its close, all members retired to the Lodge room and transacted the usual secret work of the Order under supervision and instruction of the Grand Master. This finished, all members and their invited guests adjourned to the dining rooms of the Raffour House, where a grand banquet was awaiting them. The feast was well chosen and served, and is another evidence of the capabilities of Raffour as a host and chef. The company enjoyed a most pleasant and cheerful evening. Among representatives of other Lodges were noticed District Deputy R. Wetherell, M. W. Edward Wagner and Levi Taylor, of Ventura, P. M. W. Judge Ed. Goldsmith, of San Francisco and several others whose names were not learned.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—J. T. Rogers spent Tuesday, November 20th, in Visalia, and made an address to the citizens and members; after which the Lodge went into session and were again addressed by him. After this all repaired to the hall which had been prepared, where all enjoyed dancing until 2 P. M. At 12 o'clock an elegant supper was spread to which all the Lodge friends were invited and partook.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Grand Master Workman Rogers arrived here on time from Los Angeles on the morning of the 26th ult., and in the evening we met in the Lodge room at an early hour to give him a fraternal welcome. This being the first visit we have had from any Grand Lodge officer since this Lodge was organized, of course we felt it a duty and an honor to entertain our Grand Master Workman of California. After the usual introduction and greeting, the Lodge was called to order by Master Workman J. B. Wagener, and when in the usual business routine of Lodge work we arrived at the "Good of the Order," Bro. Rogers was called upon to address the Lodge, which he did with some difficulty in consequence of having taken a bad cold during his tour. After giving instructions in the secret work of the Order, he gave us some timely remarks as to the duty of the brethren other than the officers, as many of the former drift into the notion that the officers will run the machine, and that there is no need of their attending the meetings. He spoke of other things for the good of the Order, and answered some questions of the members present. We enjoyed his visit to our Lodge very much, and hope we will not be left for another three years without another official visit. After the Lodge was closed we repaired to the public hall in the same building, where a large audience was in waiting to hear Bro. Rogers' public lecture. Bro. Witherell introduced Bro. Rogers, who prefaced his lecture with an excuse for his hoarseness, and then proceeded to entertain and enlighten the audience on the origin and objects of our Order, all of which was listened to with great attention by the audience, and was probably the first clear idea many of them had received of the Order. After the lecture was over the hall was cleared of seats, and such of the audience as wished to were invited to stay and enjoy a social dance, while Bro. Rogers and a large part of the brethren with their wives retired to the dining room below, where well filled tables awaited their coming, and it was soon demonstrated that they were not filled in vain. As the order was given that there would be no time lost in speech making, and as actions speak louder than words, I think all enjoyed it hugely. After supper the dancers were largely reinforced by brothers, the brethren now well "braced up" by a good supper, and dancing continued for the rest of the evening. Altogether, we think Bro. Rogers will give us credit for our effort, considering that we had to crowd all the entertainment into a single evening. Now that we have got "Our name in the pot" (as the saying goes), we hope we will have more frequent calls from our brethren abroad. We now have a membership of 40 in good standing, and hope by the influence of Bro. Rogers' visit to be able to add a dozen more in the next six months. Yours in C., H. and P.,

West Mountain, No. 4.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Inclosed find $2 for subscription for one year for the WATCHMAN. I had thought of giving it up, as we have our own Workman published in the interest of this Jurisdiction, but I think upon reflection that it is two dollars well invested by any one who takes an interest in the good work of the Order. West Mountain Lodge has been called upon to bear the loss of one of its charter members, and the first death in the Lodge since its organization, which has shown, so far, the benefits of the fraternal features of the organization. In this, as in many cases, the widow is left without a dollar, having a baby two months old. Her future would indeed be dark without the beneficiary guaranteed by the A. O. U. W. The brother was apparently in good health on Wednesday. On Thursday morning he died. A post mortem revealed as the cause heart disease. No one suspected such a thing in his case. I smile now at our efforts to become a separate Jurisdiction. We all thought that our assessments would be lighter as soon as we accomplished the end, but "man proposes and God disposes," and when a death occurs in our own Lodge the brethren then see the benefits of the Order and pay their assessments more willingly, so that a death in our own Lodge cements the brethren more closely together, and is a gentle admonition to us all of what we may expect. I am highly pleased with your paper, and wish it had a larger circulation in our Order in this Jurisdiction. If the brothers would subscribe for your paper or any other paper that represents the Order, and read it regularly, they would have a greater interest in the work, and would be better members and be better posted on the work and laws than they are, which would be a good thing both for themselves and for the advancement of the work. I trust that out of this loss that West Mountain Lodge sustains much good may result, for actions speak louder than words, and many will now see practically the good of the A. O. U. W. Wishing you deserved success, I remain,

Fraternally yours, in C., H. and P.,

A Granger's Visit to San Francisco, and what Came of It.

[Sung at the Jordan Anniversary Banquet.]

I'm right from the mountains of Siskiyou;
Come listen awhile and I'll tell to you,
Of how, up there, on the Oregon border,
We started a Lodge of our Ancient Order.—Ri tu, ri lu, ri tooral, ri lu ri tu.

Last summer and fall we had done quite well,
And I came to the city the crops to sell,
And I happened to meet an old friend one night,
Who took me around to look at the sight.—Ri tu, etc.

We went to the place where the Lodges meet,
In a beautiful hall on Ellis street.
'Twas an "open meeting" for social glee,
A sort of a brotherly jamboree.—Ri tu, etc.

There were speeches and music and reading and song,
And all in good humor, and none of them long;
There was fiddling and dancing for those who did like it,
And they ended it all with a "doughnut racket."—Ri.

Brother Jordan, he told what the Order had done
For the orphans whose fathers had left them alone,
And the widows whose husbands were laid on the shelf,
That I almost wished I was a widow myself.—Ri tu, etc.

In the course of the night, Brother Barnes came in,
And related "the trials of a twin."
And they called him out again and again,
Till he made a noise like a railroad train.

The stories and speeches seemed all so true,
About what the Order was bound to do,
I was half persuaded to join them too,
And start up a Lodge in Siskiyou.—Ri tu, etc.

I applied for admission and paid my fee,
And stayed in the city to take my degree,
And then for home I was soon en route,
With my benefit papers all duly made out.—Ri tu.

I talked with my neighbors when I got home,
I got up a meeting and asked them to come,
I made them a speech, and I told what I'd done,
And we started a Workman Lodge of our own.—Ri tu.

And the women, God bless 'em, helped on the scheme,
For they know we are doing it all for them;
And one of the ladies, she took it upon her
To introduce the "Degree of Honor."—Ri tu, etc.

Now the best thing that ever occurred to me
Was joining the Order of that degree,
And I bless the luck every day of my life
For the Chief of Honor is now my wife.—Ri tu.

Dr. J. W. Devore, whose death is noticed in the resolutions from Butte City Lodge in this city, died in Cincinnati, and was buried by the Workman Lodge at Vandalia, Ill.

BRO. JOHN M. DUNCAN, M. W. of Burns Lodge, has missed only nine meeting nights during a term of five years since the organization of the Lodge, of which he is a charter member.

The other evening, in Pacific Lodge, we met Bro. Eagleson, P. M. W., of Yerba Buena Lodge, No. 14, of this city. Bro. Eagleson had the misfortune recently to lose two of his fingers while at his work in a planing mill; but owing to his robust frame and temperate habits, and perhaps owing to some extent to the sympathy and substantial aid that Yerba Buena always pays to its members on the sick list, we are glad to say that he is rapidly recovering.

To the Master Workman, Officers and Members—BROTHERS: We the undersigned, your committee, heretofore appointed to draft resolutions expressive of our deep sorrow at the death of our late Bro. JAMES S. CLUFF, respectfully submit the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the great Architect of the Universe to remove from our midst our late Bro. JAMES S. CLUFF; and

WHEREAS, It is but just that a fitting recognition of his many virtues should be had; therefore, be it

Resolved, By Hercules Lodge, No. 53, A. O. U. W., that while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn for our brother who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of JAMES S. CLUFF, this Lodge laments the loss of a brother who was ever ready to proffer the hand of aid and the voice of sympathy to the needy and distressed of the fraternity; an active member of the Order whose utmost endeavors were exerted for its welfare and prosperity; a friend and companion who was dear to us all; a citizen whose upright and noble life was a standard of emulation to his fellows.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Lodge be extended to his family in their deep affliction, for they above all feel his loss most deeply.

Resolved, That the charter of this Lodge be draped in mourning for a period of 30 days, in memory of our departed brother.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the records of this Lodge, and a copy of them be transmitted to the family of our deceased brother, and also a copy thereof sent to the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

WHEREAS, In the dispensation of Providence our brother Dr. J. W. DEVON has been called from the realities of this world to experience those which we are taught lead to higher spheres of beauty and goodness than is attainable on this earth; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Lodge has lost one of its truest and most conspicuous members, and heaven has gained to the Lodge triumphant a member, that will be a bright jewel in the diadem of glory, whose radiant luster will lend brightness, reflecting all that is glorious around the throne of the Most High.

Dr. DEVON! Associated with that name will be a theme for the members of this Lodge ever to recall when they are called upon to act for the interest of the Order. For it was he who was ever ready to lend his voice to promote its best interests. 'Twas he by an exemplary demeanor that arrested any of the tendencies of an unseemly character.

Our brother has gone, but his memory will be tableted in our hearts, that when we revert to his name his deeds in all that surrounded his earthly career, both as a member of the Order or a citizen will afford an example worthy of emulation.

Resolved, That these expressions of regret for the loss of so estimable a member be spread on the minutes of the Lodge, and published in the Colusa Sun and PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

The Giant and the Missing Children.

Did our young readers ever hear the German story of the Giant and the Missing Children? It tells what happened a long time ago, in a village among the mountains.

One summer the children began to disappear one by one. It was certain that they were not kidnapped, and it was just as sure that they did not run away. The first that vanished was little Hans Stobbelt. "Has anybody seen my Hans?" cried his granny, standing outside the door of her cottage. "I had just told him I wanted him to go to the miller's, and he has disappeared somehow, all at once, without knowing what the errand is. Hans! where are you?" she shouted; "why he was here not half a minute ago."

But none of the neighbors could tell any thing of Hans. What is more, Hans did not reappear. The night passed, and he did not come; the next morning nothing was to be seen of him. All the villagers were much excited, for, though Hans had not been a good boy, everybody was sorry at this having happened to him. While a group of them round the grandmother were pitying her, a cry arose in one of the other cottages. Those who hurried there found Frau Hickelt standing near the hearth, with her hands raised, gazing vacantly before her. "My Gretchen is gone!" she said, in a frightened voice. "I just bid her clean the hearth, and when I looked again she was not there. Where is she gone?" she asked, turning from one to another of them. They could only shake their heads. In fact, they thought Frau Hickelt had gone mad. But it was quite true that Gretchen was not to be found, though they looked everywhere for her, both indoor and out.

That day three other children vanished; on the next day five went. All the village was in alarm, that is, the elders were, for they tried to keep it from the children themselves. There was no certainty about any girl or boy in the place. The grown-up people had but to turn their backs and he or she was gone in an instant.

At last a strange clew was got to the mystery. Little Augusta Hirsch vanished when her aunt as well as her mother was in the kitchen.

The aunt said: "I saw her go! At her mother's bidding she had just taken the broom to sweep behind the stove, when all at once she disappeared, just as she was speaking the words 'I wish—' But she hadn't time to finish. I heard nothing more. She was gone like a flash."

"That is very strange!" exclaimed Granny Stobbelt, who was one of the listeners. "Now you speak of it, the last words I heard my Hans say behind my back were, 'I wish—'"

"Those very words my Gretchen said!" cried Frau Hickelt.

Indeed, nearly everybody who had lost a child came forward, and each and all were able to confirm this. Two things could be made out—first, that the children only went where their elders had set them to do some task; second, that in the act of vanishing they all uttered the word, "I wish—" But in about a week's time the thing was carried yet a step further.

"My Gustave is gone!" cried Wilhelm Neumark, appearing excitedly at the gate of his little garden. "My ears are quick," he added; as the neighbors gathered around; "and I clearly heard all the words he said. I had bid him dig faster, and he answered, 'I wish there was no digging!'"

"Why, our Hans did not want to go to the miller's," Granny Stobbelt hastened to say.

"Nor," cried Frau Hickelt, "did my Gretchen like to dust up the hearth!"

"It is so!" solemnly said Wilhelm Neumark. "They are taken away for being discontented at there being any work to do in life. They want it all play."

All the hearers grew more afraid on hearing this, and looked one at another. Scarcely a minute passed before a woman in the group said:

"What great shape is that I see upon the mountain yonder?"

Every head turned towards the Eagle Cliff, as it was called. It was a lofty rock some distance from the village, but looking right down the valley towards it. The distance was too great for things on the rock to be clearly made out, but the woman declared that she could see the figure of a giant sitting there. She said he was clothed in a mantle, half blown back by the wind, and that he wore a hood on his head. No sooner did she say this than several others saw it all. Then two or three voices cried out together:

"See, he is lifting his right arm and beckoning!"

At that instant a cry sounded from one of the houses. They knew it meant that a child had vanished. While they were looking in amazement the giant again raised his arm, beckoningly. As he did so, there came a fresh cry—another child had been taken. The whole thing now was plain—the children disappeared whenever the giant, on hearing their complaining wishes, signaled for them.

The next morning his huge shape could be seen more distinctly sitting on the rock, and, whenever he beckoned, a child went. The white-haired Lutheran minister, just as the sun was setting, came in front of the crowd and said:

"Let us each to-night by our bedside pray that the children may be forgiven and restored to us."

This prayer was answered. Early the next morning some who were watching raised a cry, saying that the children were coming back. In a long procession the little people were seen winding down the valley. Their fathers and mothers and all the inhabitants ran to meet them. They were astonished to see how meek the returning children were.

"Oh, let us get back to our work in helping you," cried out a hubbub of boys and girls' voices.

No sooner had they neared the houses than the boys rushed into the gardens, and, snatching up the spades, began to dig; while the girls, darting into the dwellings, instantly were busy sweeping, dusting and polishing.

The explanation they all gave was this: "While we were kept inside the mountain we were not allowed to do any thing at all, and oh it was so hard! The good giant said that we could not have play without work also."

All looked towards the rock, but the figure of the giant was no longer to be seen. The boys and girls were much the better for his visit.—The Churchman.

Mr. Ruskin's Museum.

A correspondent calls attention in a Sheffield paper to the prolonged delay attending the proposed enlargement of Mr. Ruskin's museum, in regard to which eight years have been suffered to pass and nothing done. Mr. Ruskin has himself superintended and had scaffolds erected around the Ducal Palace, Venice, to take casts of the sculpture; also from the cathedrals of Rouen and Amiens, the casts of which are in the storehouse of St. George at Walkley. He keeps two artists constantly employed making drawings from the best continental examples of old masters' work. These drawings, done especially for the museum for the Sheffield people, are dispersed up and down the country. Many are at the Whitelands College, Chelsea, awaiting room at Sheffield. A valuable collection is in the Nottingham Museum, also awaiting a suitable home. The finest collection of ambers, sixty odd pieces in all, are at Mr. Dalinger's College, also hidden out of sight, because there is no room at Walkley to display them. There are coins wrapped up in silver paper, better examples than those in the British Museum, and lovely specimens of stuffed birds presented by Dr. Hewitson, of Leeds, are still in Leeds, waiting for a home. Most charming patterns for designers and china painters, bought from the famous Eyton collection, for which Mr. Ruskin gave £500, are unused because there is no room to display them, and Mr. Ruskin is waiting to know what the people of Sheffield are going to do before he begins to arrange them systematically. He wrote to say he had "van-loads more of books and things ready to come when there is a suitable home for them," and he had enough material in his home at Brantwoods, in the Lakes, to cover the whole of the Walkley Museum. Yet up to the present time the Sheffield people have only subscribed £45 towards providing a suitable building.

Health Column.

Bad Teeth and Dyspepsia.

While every one is liable to suffer, at times, with indigestion, no matter how well preserved their dental organs may have been, there can not be found to-day one whose teeth are decayed, broken off, and out of order generally, that does not suffer continually with "heartburn," or some of the multifarious gastric troubles incident to such a condition of the oral cavity.

Persons having no teeth, or those whose teeth have been neglected and allowed to become diseased, are unable to masticate their food properly, which is deficiently mixed with saliva (a very essential auxiliary in the digestion of solid substances); and therefore, this food, being carried into the stomach without proper trituration and insalivation, imposes double duty upon the gastric apparatus—that of mastication and digestion.

Again, carious teeth serve for lodgment of particles of food which are retained in and about the organs until fermentation is set up. Friends, did you ever think of it, those whose teeth are rotten and rotting, that your mouths are regular cesspools? And this putrescent matter is conveyed into the stomach continually with the saliva, and consequently produces an irritation of the lining membrane, which is the worst and not uncommon form of dyspepsia, which is impossible to cure (not with even 999,999 patent medicines now in the market) until the dental organs have first received proper attention. Indeed, cases of dyspepsia of years' standing have been permanently cured by judicious attention to the oral cavity, and without medicinal agents to any extent, when, on the contrary, all the medicines that can be given will not effect a cure until the cause is removed.

Nay, more than this: in all mouths where there are tartar-covered and decaying teeth there are millions of leptothrices buccales (microscopic parasites) which are also carried into the alimentary canal, and it may be produce other complicated diseases the origin of many of which are now unknown.

HOW SALT INJURES FLESH FOODS.—A French physician, Dr. Hussen, has been making experiments to discover the effects of salt and other condiments when used in cooking, and adds his testimony to the facts already in possession of the hygienists. His experiments show, among other things, that in cooking butchers' meat only an ounce of salt should be used with from six to twelve pounds of meat. If more is employed, it will do one of two things: it will modify the structure of a portion of the muscular fiber so as to render it more resistant to the action of the gastric juice, or it will itself check and retard the peptic fermentation, the very groundwork of digestion. It follows that salted and smoked meats are more indigestible than fresh. Vinegar, it appears, may be used with good effect, provided it is not in a quantity to irritate the stomach, and it is a pure dilution of acetic acid, freed from sulphuric or hydrochloric acids; the latter of which, though an active principle of the gastric juice, must not be in excess in the stomach, or it will retard digestion. The hungry man will, therefore, be careful how he uses salt and vinegar, and Dr. Hussen will by and by tell him something about pepper and mustard.

AN ALLEGED CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—Some interest is felt on the assertion lately made, on the authority of a leading physician, that the "woorari," a poisonous drug prepared and used by a number of tribes of South American natives, was a certain specific against the terrible and hitherto incurable disease known as hydrophobia. Several authentic cures are reported to have been made with its aid. Little is known of the method of concocting this subtle substance, and but little of its nature, save that it is highly poisonous; and doubtless a number of substances are prepared and sold by this name. The natives use it as a specific against the bite of venomous serpents, and also upon the tips of their arrows and other offensive weapons. In poisonous doses it produces paralysis.

In Germany, Dr. Offenberg recently attracted the attention of the medical world by successfully treating a hydrophobia patient with a species of woorari obtained from the Indians of Brazil. The announcement of this fact soon attracted attention in this country, and similar trials of the remedy here, as above stated, have proved equally satisfactory.

It would prove a boon, indeed, to humanity should these very hopeful assertions prove to be correct. It would add another to the many beneficent services of medical science, and it would rob of its horrors one of the most terrible and fatal of diseases.

COLD DRINKS IN INDIGESTION. Sufferers from certain common forms of indigestion forget the effects of loading the stomach with cold liquids. Cold drinks are often depressing, and the peculiar form of indigestion just now very prevalent, in which food is retained an unreasonable time in the stomach, is in a large proportion of instances the direct effect of persistent chilling of the gastric organ by copious draughts of cold drink.

Household Hints.

The Deadly Oil.

Kerosene becomes more deadly every year, as the hours of evening lamplight lengthen and the frequent lighting of fires becomes a daily duty. The fact that these accidents are utterly unnecessary renders them the more lamentable. In the hope of preventing some of these accidents, we state a few facts which everybody ought to know.

1. It is not the kerosene that explodes, but an invisible gas that arises from it.

2. If oil is poured into a lamp that needs filling, this gas rises out of the lamp or can, or both, and explodes, often with deadly force, if there be any fire within reach.

3. Pouring oil from a can upon a burning fire or into a lighted lamp ought to be followed by a terrible explosion. Sometimes it happens that no explosion occurs, but the risk is frightful.

4. The only safe rule is never to pour oil on a burning fire or into a lighted lamp.

Now, you may give Bridget positive orders with regard to the fires, but when no one is at hand in the early morning hours, the temptation is strong to assist the smoldering blaze by the aid of a little kerosene. She has done it without injury formerly, why not again? So the nose of the can is tilted over the range or grate, there is a flash, a scream, and poor Bridget will never have another chance to disobey orders. Perhaps it would be better if Bridget must be allowed access to the can at all—the suggestion is timidly made—to show her how she may aid the fire with comparative safety. All she has to do is to pour a spoonful or two of the oil into a cup or something of the kind, and, setting the can down at a safe distance, pour the oil from the cup upon the fire. It is not likely that she will suffer much injury from the comparatively mild explosion that may follow.

CARAMEL PUDDING.—Put a handful of loaf sugar to boil with a quarter of a pint of water until the syrup becomes a deep brown. Warm a small basin, pour the syrup in it, and keep turning the basin in your hand until the inside is completely coated with the syrup, which will by that time have set. Strain the yolks of eight eggs from the whites, and mix them gradually and effectually with one pint of milk. Pour this mixture into the prepared mold. Lay a piece of paper on the top. Set it in a saucepan full of cold water, taking care that the water does not come over the top of the mold, put on the cover, and let it boil gently by the side of the fire for one hour. Remove the saucepan to a cool place, and when the water is quite cold take out the mold, and turn out the pudding very carefully.

LOPNE PUDDING.—Possibly Lopne pudding is one of those which the Princess Louise has the reputation of making. It is good enough to set before even a king, much more a princess. It is made of one-quarter of a pound each of flour, butter and sugar, mixed with one quart of warm milk, and boiled until it is like custard; to this add the yolks of six eggs well beaten, then the whites, also beaten until they are stiff. Place the pudding dish in a pan partly filled with water, set in the oven, put the pudding in the dish and bake for an hour. The sauce to be eaten with this is made of half a cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one of wine, the wine to be added last; and after the butter and sugar are well mixed, set this in a pan of hot water, to dissolve the butter and to heat gradually.

COLD VEAL.—Cold veal is an abomination, but it may be made into a very good dish. Put a piece of butter as large as an egg into a saucepan, and when it is melted put in a teaspoonful of flour. Be careful to have it thoroughly mixed with the butter, but do not let it brown; add salt, a little mace and pepper; pour in one cupful of hot water, then put in the veal sliced very thin, and heat over a gentle fire. Just before serving, stir in the yolk of an egg. French cooks often add a few drops of vinegar, but one teaspoonful of lemon juice is better.

GINGER WITH ICE-CREAM.—Little blocks of preserved ginger are served with the ice-cream at New York dinner parties. They enable one to eat about twice as much cream, but perhaps that is not altogether desirable. Will the day ever come when the wine-taster's device of taking an occasional mouthful of hot boiled potato be used to remove the taste of ice-cream from the tongue, and to prepare it to receive more with gratitude?

DEVONSHIRE JUNKET.—Warm a quart of new milk, sweeten it slightly, and add about three table-spoonfuls of rennet, a little grated nutmeg, and two table-spoonfuls of brandy. Before serving put a teaspoonful of brandy on the top and lay clotted cream upon it.

CREAM PUFFS.—Boil half a pound of butter and two cups of water, add three-quarters of a pound of flour and cook one minute. When quite cool add first the yolks and then the whites of six eggs, and bake ten minutes.

OATMEAL COOKIES.—Very good cookies for children may be made by substituting two-thirds of oatmeal for wheat flour in any of the ordinary recipes.

Poisonous and Troublesome Plants of California—No. 1.

Written by J. G. LEMMON.

Zygadenus Venenosus,

Poison lily, or so-called "Lobelia," or death camass.

"What ails my horses" is often heard in the agricultural valleys of the mountainous portions of California. The inquiry is always made by one not accustomed to the products of the country, and is answered by a citizen, "They have been eating lobelia; dose them at once with a handful each of salt."

The animals have suddenly become gaunt and colicky, weak, disinclined to travel, or to eat or drink. They groan, glare about them, drench, and cough, perspire easily, breathe hard and frequently, with other signs of distress. Eventually they are affected with diarrhea, and often long sickness and emaciation follows, and not rarely death.

Usually salt, if administered at once, is a specific remedy, no other as yet being known.

The plant causing this distress, and often great loss, is often called by the farmers lobelia. It is, however, in no respect related to the lobelia family, but is a kind of melanthium, lately classed with the lilies. I suppose it was called "lobelia" because its effects are similar to that of the lobelia inflata of the East. Having once received the cognomen, it adheres, despite much effort on the part of the writer to correct the error and substitute "poison lily." Another popular name for the plant is "death camass," the name of camass being applied to the noted Indian food camassie esculenta, also a lily, often found in the same localities. The specific name of this species of Zygadenus being venenosus, is very appropriate, for it means poisonous. The plant grows sparsely in meadows, along with grass, sedges and other forage plants, maturing a little prior to them, but not too late to have its stalks with well loaded capsules of seed harvested along with the hay. The small, black seeds, in their leathery triple-pods, are supposed to contain the poisonous principle. This poison lily springs from a small deep-seated bulb, which is also possessed of a virulent poison. The Digger and Washoe Indians, who annually procure tons of roots from the same meadows where grows this bulb, are known to carefully reject the latter. However, in certain valleys it is said that hogs eat and thrive upon them, so they are called hog potatoes. This does not prove that the plant is not poison, for swine, it is well known, are unaffected by some kinds of most deadly poison, such as that of rattlesnakes, scorpions, etc. Farmers have been advised to dig up the bulbs and destroy them. The hog-rooting method is not to be recommended, for it destroys too much of the forage plants as well; and in certain very valuable meadows but little infested this could readily be done with a pick or a crowbar in early spring, when the lilies first appear.

Only horses are reported to be affected by this poison lily, though it is probable that other animals suffer from it, but naturally they are less in sight, and so escape notice.

Another lily similar to this, and perhaps as mischievous, is often mistaken for the one under discussion. This one is larger (two to three feet high), with yellowish-white flowers, and grows near meadows, on the dry, often stony, hard bluffs; never in the low, damp meadows, the natural habitat of the small white-flowered plant first described. The large one does not get into the hay, and so is not apt to be eaten in quantity.

Ranchmen whose hay contains poison habitually, suffer little or no trouble from it, either their stock rejecting the plant from their food instinctively, or by becoming proof against ill effects.

I am sorry to class this villainous plant with the generally beautiful order of lilies, but the great master, Dr. Gray, has declared it, and in it must go. The lily family is now a very large one, its characters having lately been carefully revised by the venerable Dr. Gray, and found to include four former orders now reduced to tribes; viz., smilacæ, trilliaceæ, liliacæ and melanthaceæ, comprising about 180 genera, with 1,900 species. Of these 50 genera and 235 species are found in the United States and British America.

The lilies are distributed well over the earth, principally in its temperate regions. In the tropics they become arborescent. The Dragon tree, dragona draco, of the Canary Islands, being found 45 feet in circuit and 70 feet high. It yields the powerful astringent "dragon's blood." The properties of this great order are various, and range through every conceivable quality of usefulness or harmfulness.

The two first tribes, Smilacæ and Trilliaceæ, contain but few species, all of which are innocuous but not edible.

The Liliacæ or true lilies comprise four-fifths of the enlarged order, and include the most valued and splendid plants in cultivation. Their bulbs, however, usually abound in a bitter stimulant principle not to be trifled with. The magnificent "Crown Imperial" has a strong fetid odor, and the bulbs are very acrid; and of the lovely tuberose, with its wonderfully abundant and sweet odor, it is wicked to have to say that when confined in a room it causes headache, and often death. However, among the lilies are some most edible bulbs, such as the onion, the

"camass," or Indian potato of this Coast, and the asparagus.

The tribe Melanthaceæ are nearly all of them provided with drastic, narcotic, poisonous or medical properties, and to this tribe belongs our poison lily or Zygadenus. The tribe is principally distinguished from the other lilies by characters of the pericarp or seed vessel. It is produced in three erect tubular carpels, slightly adhering together at base and inclosing the seeds, as shown in adjoining cut. The other plants of this now great order have their three carpels united like valves, and forming a single three-celled seed vessel. All lilaceous or three-parted plants exhibiting the character of separated, distinct tubular carpels, may be regarded as suspicious. One of those claiming much attention on this Coast is the Veratrum Californicum, or California hellebore. This also grows in meadows, often in company with the Zygadenus described.

The plants often form dense thickets of large stout erect stalks, 2 to 5 feet high, clothed with large ribbed leaves like corn husks, the stalk upbearing a large open panicle of hundreds of greenish-white flowers. The green shoots in early spring are greedily eaten by all kinds of stock, and opinions are about equally divided concerning alleged effects. Perhaps the truth is the stock suffer from its use at first, then instinctively counteract ill effects by other plants which become an antidote. Instances are numerous where young cattle and sheep have suffered severe sickness and even death in large numbers, after they were known to have made a hearty meal from those sprouts.

The well known drug colchicum, growing in Western Europe, belongs to this tribe, and is a most powerful narcotic. Other plants are veratrum, poke-root, rattlesnake root, etc. rendering it quite proper to prescribe the whole tribe from careless experiments as food.

THE Mexican government definitely refuses the demands of the English bondholders to issue $20,000,000 three per cent bonds in addition to the recognized debt, $80,000,000. The decision ends the negotiations, and the Mexican representative in London has been recalled. The Mexican government desires a settlement, but considers the bondholders' demands excessive.

THE WATER-CRESS.—Dr. Grelletz, of Vichy, brought before the Therapeutical Society (Bulletin, June 30), the question whether this popular article of diet possesses any of the depurative qualities popularly attributed to it. He is of opinion that it does not, and that it is indigestible to most stomachs. It has acquired an undeserved reputation, and may be mischievous in the various forms of dyspepsia. He recommends its being prepared for the table in the same way as spinach, when it is easily digested and of a pleasant taste, or the cress may be carefully washed, cut up into small pieces, and then submitted to a press in order that its juice may be expressed. This is a little acrid, but may be corrected by syrup of bitter oranges or of horseradish, when it is beneficial in cases of diabetes.

THE DIMENSIONS OF ATOMS.—In a recent lecture at the Royal Institution, by Sir William Thomson, on the size of atoms, the speaker,

DEATH FROM PASSION.—Cases in which death results from the physical excitement consequent on mental passion are, according to the Lancet, not uncommon. A recent instance has again called attention to the matter. Unfortunately, those persons who are prone to sudden and overwhelming outbursts of ill-temper do not, as a rule, recognize their propensity or realize the perils to which it exposes them; while the stupid idea that such deaths as occur in passion, and which are directly caused by it, ought to be ascribed to "the visitation of God," tends to divert attention from the common-sense lesson which such deaths should teach. It is most unwise to allow the mind to excite the brain and body to such extent as to endanger life itself. We do not sufficiently appreciate the need and value of mental discipline as a corrective of bad habits and a preventive of disturbances by which happiness and life itself are too often jeopardized.

CLEANING GILT OBJECTS.—Gilt articles, if of metal, may be cleansed by rubbing them gently with a sponge or soft brush moistened with a solution of half an ounce of potash, or an ounce of soda, or, perhaps best, an ounce of borax, in a pint of water; then rinsing them in clean water and drying with a soft linen rag. Their luster may be improved in certain cases by gently heating them, and then applying gentle friction with a soft rag. A very dilute solution of cyanide of potassium will answer the same purpose, by applying it in the same manner as above, washing in water and finally drying by gentle friction with a linen rag; but as this substance is very poisonous, it is not to be recommended for household uses. Gilt frames of mirrors, pictures, etc., should never be touched with any thing but clean water, gently applied with a soft sponge or brush.—Manufacturer and Builder.

PRESERVING WOOD.—An exchange says that a plan recently introduced into Belgium for preserving wood from decay produced by the atmosphere, water, etc., is to fill the pores of the wood with liquid gutta-percha, which is said to effectually preserve it from moisture and the action of the sun. The process employed consists in exhausting the air from the pores of the wood and filling them with gutta-percha solution. In pouring the solution into the pores, the solid gutta-percha is liquefied by mixing with paraffine in proportion of about two-thirds of gutta-percha to one-third of paraffine; the mixture is then submitted to the action of heat, and the gutta-percha becomes sufficiently liquid to be easily introduced into the pores of the wood. The gutta-percha, liquefied by this process, hardens in the pores of the wood as soon as it becomes cold.

EVOLUTION.—The doctrine of transformation—man descended from the monkey, the monkey from some inferior animal, and this last from some animal still lower in the scale of beings, descending thus to the original polyp—has been considered exclusively a modern doctrine, perhaps thought of originally by Diderot, but of course principally credited to Darwin. However, there is nothing new under the sun, and M. Halevy, of the Academie des Inscriptions et Belles-lettres, has found among the works of an individual named Sanconiaton, who lived, according to the savants, about the fourth century B. C., the following passage, which was reproduced from the original work by Philon of Byblos, and later by Eusebius: "(Then) there was [on the earth] living beings deprived of intelligence, from whom descended beings gifted with intelligence, who were called Zophasamin, contemplators of heaven."

EARLY HISTORY OF THE AIR PUMP.—If it is difficult to decide who invented the telephone, one of the most recent inventions, how much more difficult it must be to ascertain the date of the discovery of the air pump more than two centuries ago. Gerlandt contributes a paper on this subject to Wiedemann's Annalen, in which he says that only this much can be established with certainty in regard to the date of its discovery, namely, that it was prior to the middle of August, 1652. Boyle invented the transparent receiver with movable cover; Huyghens, the air pump plate; Huyghens and Papin, the barometer test (manometer for low pressure); Papin, the doubly perforated cock, the use of two barrels, and the valves; but the latter were used by Sturm.

AMERICAN IRON BRIDGES.—The Mexican Central officials complain of the iron bridges made for the road in England, and seem determined to have all future orders executed in the United States. The American bridges are lighter, while as strong, and of superior construction. What tells against English bridges are the exasperating delays. In America orders are filled promptly.

PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN.

Issued on the Second and Fourth Saturdays in the Month.

AT NO. 252 MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO,
(ELEVATOR 12 FRONT STREET.)

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSEMENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

The above was adopted by the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., April 5, 1883.

Favorable to Advertisers.

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now surrounded by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

Needs Ventilating.

As may be seen by reference to the assessment notice for December, printed elsewhere in this issue, out of the fourteen deaths there are four from consumption. There is food for reflection here as to the carefulness or lack of carefulness of the Medical Examiners of our Lodges, in properly scrutinizing the candidates brought before them. One of these cases seems so glaring that it has caused much comment. As may be seen by reference to the Lodge locals, Pacific, No. 7, of Oakland, at its last meeting passed resolutions pointing to this very case, and looking to the passage of laws that may put a check upon carelessness in Medical Examiners. The case referred to is that of Bro. Wm. J. Daniels, of Oroville Lodge, No. 40, who, while on the verge of the age which would exclude him (50 years), joins the Order and dies of consumption within seven months. Judging from appearance only, the thing has a bad look. Let it be understood that we make no charges against the Medical Examiner or any members of Oroville Lodge. There may be extenuating circumstances connected with this case that the Order at large does not understand. But those circumstances must be very urgent to have let such a case pass with propriety, where a man of such an age, and with a disease which is ordinarily so lingering, should be admitted.

Supreme Master Fish has accepted an invitation to accompany Oak Leaf Lodge, No. 35, of Oakland, in the fraternal visit to be paid to Ashler, No. 165, of Alameda, next Tuesday evening.

The San Jose Pioneer says that the Workmen of that city are now over 600 strong.

Grand Master Workman Rogers' Tour.

In an interview with Grand Master Workman Rogers, on his return from his southern tour, we found him in good health and the best of spirits. He says that his largest audience was at San Jose, last Wednesday evening, where the Lodges gave him a very warm reception, and where he addressed over 1,200 people. The Degrees were conferred on some 16 candidates that evening, applicants for membership in both Lodges. Enterprise conferred the J. W. Degree and Mt. Hamilton the M. W. Degree. He received hearty welcomes wherever he went, and is much pleased with his trip. He left with his wife for his home in Ukiah last Thursday evening. We are promised a letter from the Grand Master for our next issue, which will be to some extent a resume of his tour—a tour which we have no doubt has done much good for the cause of Workmanship in this Jurisdiction.

Bearing Fruit.

The efforts made in this Jurisdiction to put the Degree of Honor on a good foundation are bearing fruit otherwheres. Illinois and Kansas have commenced work in this direction. No doubt the movement will finally eventuate in some general legislation by the Supreme Lodge, which has already been too long deferred. We are fully satisfied that it is useless to organize Degree Lodges except on the idea of having them beneficial. The sum of all experience of such Lodges on the social basis alone, is failure. Strong as is our organization, we cannot afford to foster anything that does not at least promise to be a success.

Many of our old Degree Lodges do not seem to fully realize the force of this fact, and hence are dragging out a sort of miserable existence. A few do well, but their number can be counted on the tips of the fingers of one hand. We most earnestly appeal to all who think their Lodges worth perpetuating, that they at once make one grand effort to induce as many of their members as possible to become beneficial. In hoc signo vinces.

Bad Law.

If it will gratify our good brother of the Michigan Herald we will cheerfully admit that the Pengelly case was decided by the Supreme Lodge and against our Grand Lodge. Our officers will obey the decision, but we are nevertheless still of the opinion that our Grand Lodge was right and the Supreme Lodge wrong. It cannot be gained said that the decision is contrary to the letter of the law, and that it is unjust must appear from the facts in the case. Bro. Pengelly joined this Jurisdiction in August, 1882. He escaped two assessments in Nevada for September and two for October, and escaped two for September and one for October here. In other words for two months he became, under the decision, relieved from any and all assessments for those months, and yet the protection of the Order was constant to him, just the same as to all the other members who were compelled to pay their regular assessments.

Plainly this decision should be reversed, or better, repeal the exemption clause altogether. The whole thing is wrong in principal and practice. Let all Master Workmen be put on the same footing, no matter how or when or from whence they come.

In response to a general request, we had in preparation for this issue an article especially devoted to the description of the architectural features of Excelsior's new Lodge Hall, in this city; but being promised a more elaborate and careful description the article referred to has been held over and will appear amplified and improved in our next issue.

A widow in Vicksburg, Miss., has just received $12,500 from different orders of which her husband was a member.

Bad Business.

Our legal friend of the Protector seems quite solicitous because the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts should be so anxious as to put itself into a position where it can be sued, at the same time saying that there is no condition under which it will be called on to sue. When our Grand Recorder and Grand Receiver read this they felt quite tickled and no doubt commenced to lay their plans for a raid on the Treasurer, thinking that the Grand Lodge could not sue their bondsmen, but their hopes were dashed a few days after when an incorporated body sued the bondsmen of its Treasurer and recovered from him the amount of the Treasurer's defalcation, and this was in a secret fraternal Order.—New England Workman.

We believe with the Protector that to incorporate a Grand Lodge is an almost fatal mistake. The gravest peril we stand under comes of the fact that the Supreme Lodge and most of our Grand Lodges are incorporated. A State corporation is a creature of the State creating it, and the courts hold that above such corporation there can be otherwise no superior corporation. In other words, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, a corporation of that State, cannot be made subject to the Supreme Lodge, a corporation of Kentucky. Ergo, the Supreme Lodge cannot coerce in any manner the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, nor can the said Grand Lodge compel its members to obey the edicts of said Supreme Lodge. This legal aspect of the case is not only the cause of present troubles, as in Iowa and Pennsylvania, but promises a thousand times more of the same sort in the future. The Supreme Lodge should disincorporate at the earliest possible moment, and so should all Grand Lodges. A corporation is not necessary in order to see, as everybody knows, but if it were in such a case as the one above referred to, we should think that rather a reason for not incorporating than otherwise. A Treasurer of a society's own choosing defaults and steals the society's money. The society to get even cinches a few men of a like amount, because forsooth said society required somebody to stand between itself and its own acts, and these over-confiding but innocent men consented to be put in such position. They were foolish, it may be, but what shall we say of the brazen-facedness of the organization that can put forth such a requirement. What better is it, morally, than a common swindler? We do not see that the matter is bettered by a common practice. A wrong is a wrong, and the more it is practiced the greater its enormity becomes. Let us be swift to do the right and proper thing when we see it.

Reserve Fund.

To those good brethren who think the A. O. U. W. should be backed up by a Reserve Fund to guard against possible excessive assessments in the future, we desire to say that we have never favored such a proposition for the following reasons, which to us seem conclusive:

1st. We have never known of any good to come to anybody in whose interest a Reserve Fund was ostensibly created.

2d. To create a Reserve Fund would require contributions from the members of the Order outside of the actual cost of assurance, and therefore each contributor would acquire pecuniary rights in the Order which in equity could not be disregarded, even though he should fail to pay his assessments, as the law requires, and should we proceed to suspend him, no doubt the courts, or if not the courts, then Legislatures would step in and compel us to a different course of conduct. If not they would be at fault most assuredly. That done and we would lose everything worth having in the way of government. We could not control our own members or our own business.

If we cannot live without a Reserve Fund we cannot with it, and dying is dying, and so what's the difference which way the thing comes about?

There are several other reasons why we object to a Reserve Fund—some of them but little less weighty than the foregoing, but those we have given would seem sufficient.

The Influence of Workmanship.

The following is the response given by Grand Master Workman J. T. Rogers at the Excelsior banquet, at the Palace, on the 12th ult., to the toast "The Grand Lodge of California—May its endeavors be equal to its ambition, and may its achievements surpass both." We publish it not only for its merit, but by general request:

Mr. Chairman and Brothers:—In response to the sentiment contained in your toast, brevity shall be my best merit. The marble temples of Greece are decayed and in ruins, but the patriotic thoughts of Demosthenes, the philosophy of Plato and the logic of Aristotle are yet an eloquent power in our land. They unconsciously become interwoven into our daily life. They speak from the pulpit and bar. They shine in the songs of our poets, and thunder in the columns of our press. The grandeur of the Caesars has faded into a historic memory, but the songs of Horace and Virgil, the morals of Seneca and Cato and the eloquence of Cicero still live in our thoughts, and are silent factors in the development of our destiny. Caesar and Christ were contemporaneous. The one has lost his power, but the kingdom of the other is ever extending. The one swayed his legions and claimed the homage of all; the other came a mechanic and founded a kingdom of love. Where is the crown of Caesar? 'Tis gone. But in every act of our civilization there is found the power of the Nazarene. Why? Because the empire of one was founded in fear, and that of the other in loving truth.

"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again:
The eternal years of God are hers;
While error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among her worshippers."

What then is the destiny of this Order? Does it teach some central truth, which can defy time? We say it does. It teaches us that God lives and created man, and that usefulness to ourselves and others is an inflexible duty. Inspired by this divine thought, its ambition is to embrace all honest manhood in its folds, and spread the ægis of its protection, until every home is guarded by our love. What grander conception can there be than to see 16,000 homes in this State under the banner of C., H. and P.? Nor is it content with mere money protection. It goes out into the dominions of mind. It tries to gather up the jewels of thought, and spread the gospel of love. It desires to let its sun of fraternity shine until the rays of its splendor shall light every heart. And its hope is to merit the approval of all good men, that their prayer for it may be "Esto perpetua."

A Handsome Memento.

As stated in our last issue, the rooms of the A. O. U. W. General Relief Committee have become a favorite resort for Workmen during the early part of the evening. The latest addition in the way of decorative art is a large gilded frame, 3½ by 4½ feet, in which are the photographs (cabinet size) of each member of the General Relief Committee, being 23 in number. Under each photo is the name and also the Lodge represented, there being one from each city Lodge. On the face of the picture are these words, "General Relief Committee, A. O. U. W., of San Francisco, Cal., 1883," around which are grouped the photos. There are various praiseworthy opinions expressed as to the merits of this magnificent collection of pictures. The photographers are Dames and Butler, who are known and recognized as among the best in the city. They made each picture and generously gave them. We concur in the nearly unanimous opinion that the benign countenances of our brother Workmen never made a better appearance than they do in the A. O. U. W. General Relief Committee gallery.

The interesting history of Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, written by Sam Booth, P. M. W., and formerly published in the WATCHMAN, has been issued in pamphlet form by A. K. Hollis, and 100 copies generously donated by him to be sold for the benefit of the library of No. 126. They can be obtained from the Librarian of said Lodge.

HEADQUARTERS of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell streets, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT.
GRAND MEDICAL EXAMINER'S HEADQUARTERS—Office, No. 234 Post street, San Francisco, Cal. JAMES SIMPSON, M. D.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always inclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

THOSE Lodges that happen to meet on Christmas can elect their officers on the meeting preceding. The law provides for this.

LET all Lodges bear in mind that no matter whether meeting weekly or semi-monthly, they elect officers this month. The only exception to this rule is where a new Lodge was organized in the last half of the present term. Such officers hold over till the end of next term. Per capita tax must be paid on all members. A Junior Workman is a member. A brother suspended, but not suspended from the Order (finally suspended), is also a member. Semi-annual reports must be forwarded by Recorders—not by Deputies.

MANY Medical Examiner's reports received, approved by the Grand Medical Examiner and returned to the Lodges have never come back again to this office for beneficiary certificates or to be placed on file. Nearly 150 of these are now standing out for some unaccountable reason. In many instances the Lodges on receipt of medical examinations approved, proceed to confer both degrees, still holding the paper, and then wonder why no beneficiary certificate comes. We cannot write a beneficiary certificate till the paper is returned to this office with the application for certificate made in due form on the back thereof as the law requires.

There are two assessments for December in the Grand Lodges under jurisdiction of the Supreme Lodge.

Supreme Master Workman Fish has appointed the following Committee on Ritual: P. G. M. W., John D. Vincil, of Missouri, Chairman; P. S. M. W., Samuel Myers, of New York, and P. S. M. W., Wm. H. Baxter, of Michigan.

P. G. M. W. John J. Acker, of New York, is at the head of a committee being organized for the purpose of aiding worthy members of the Order who may be traveling. An excellent idea!

The Select Knights in California.

A Protest from Past Grand Master Barnes Against their Establishment.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—I notice in your last number that Deputy Cobler alludes to the establishment of a Legion of the Select Knights at Los Angeles, and also states that the Supreme Lodge "did a grand thing," when in 1882 (per page 644 of Journal), it recognized said Select Knights. In this he differs from the representatives of California, and its Grand officers to the present time, and also from a large number of the prominent brethren of this Order. If he will look at page 645 of said Journal he will see that California, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Minnesota, Michigan, Ontario and Massachusetts voted unanimously against it, and so did Supreme Master Baxter, Supreme Foreman Fish, Supreme Receiver Davis, and P. S. Master Frizzell. It is true that the semi-recognition resolution passed by a majority of 21, but that does not argue but what the men who voted against it were correct, and did right in opposing any outside organization that used the initials A. O. U. W. to transact business.

At this very time the Supreme Lodge is endeavoring, and correctly, too, to prevent the seceded Grand Lodge of Iowa, with its 10,000 members, from doing business under the name of A. O. U. W., and yet an outside society is permitted to confer Degrees, have a ritual, and use the prestige of our great Order, and it is permitted.

Until said Select Knights withdraw the A. O. U. W. from their name, they will have the opposition of a large number of members. Some of us are too familiar with the disasters that have attended Masonry and Odd Fellowship by allowing outside independent associations to use their titles, ever to allow such a thing to be done in our Order without an earnest protest.

It does seem that the recent position of the Patriarchal Circle in the I. O. O. F., and the legislation of the last Supreme Lodge of that Order ought to be a warning to our young institution, and it also seems a little strange with the pronounced opinions of the Grand Lodge of California and its officials upon this subject, that a Legion could be formed in this State. By reference to page 28, Journal of California, session of 1880, you will find Grand Master Taylor's decision, also Supreme Master Ross' opinion, etc., the paragraph concluding, "Deputies cannot be permitted to organize the so-called Legions in this State."

Another point: The reference to the fact that a majority passed a resolution in regard to an outside matter, does not make it law for a State, any more than if it passed a resolution recognizing "public installations." It is within the province of the State Grand Lodge to say whether it will or will not have such installations, and it is within the province of the Grand Lodge of California to say whether the Select Knights, in defiance of law and in opposition to the decisions of the Grand Officers of this State, and the votes and efforts of its representatives, shall do business in this jurisdiction under the name of the A. O. U. W.

As I said to the friends of the measure in Cincinnati, "Take off the A. O. U. W., and none will object." It was said there, "That there was no doubt those letters would be taken from the title, as they were really not necessary," and it would stop all objections. But it has not been done, and the objection remains; and with a full knowledge of the dangers surrounding the use of the title of an Order by any association, no matter how good, without being responsible to said Order, even if I stood alone on the proposition, I would record my earnest protest against its introduction in this State, or its being permitted to continue under its present title in the United States. Fraternally yours, WM. H. BARNES.

San Francisco, Nov. 24th.

DEATH OF AN ORIGINAL MEMBER.—Bro. A. P. Ogden, of Jefferson Lodge, No. 1, of Meadville, was buried by that Lodge on October 25th. He was one of the original fourteen who organized the first Lodge of the A. O. U. W., and at the time of the institution of the Lodge was elected Chaplain. But two of the original members of the Order now remain—Bro. J. J. Upchurch and Bro. J. R. Umberger. At the institution of Jefferson Lodge, Bro. Upchurch was selected its Master Workman, and Bro. Umberger Foreman, or as the office was then called, Chief Foreman. The position of Chaplain corresponded with that of P. M. W. now.—Fraternal Censor.

A Grand Meeting.

One of the most notable events of the year was the District meeting of No. 1, at Platt's Music Hall, on Thanksgiving evening, November 29th. This District is composed of the following Lodges: San Francisco, No. 4, Unity, No. 27, Spartan, No. 36, Magnolia, No. 41, and Friendship, No. 179. At 7:30 o'clock this large hall was filled with a select audience of Workmen and their families to the number of over 1,200, not even standing room being left. It seemed to be generally understood that this was to be a grand affair, and a noticeable feature was the large number of ladies and gentlemen in full evening dress. Over the platform was suspended in golden letters, "District No. 1, A. O. U. W., Welcome." The following programme was rendered: Overture, orchestra of eight pieces; welcome and introductory remarks, Bro. E. Danforth, D. D. G. M. W.; baritone solo and encore, "Good-Bye Sweetheart" (Hatton), Sanford Bennett; (a) "Aria De Pergolese (Jossefy), (b) "Tarantelle" (De Beriot), Miss Fannie M. Danforth, daughter of Deputy Danforth. Her pleasant and artistic performance was rewarded with a hearty recall, and at the close she was presented with a magnificent bouquet. Sentimental song, "Waiting" (Millard), Miss Alvina Heuer. This young lady has a very sweet and well cultivated voice, and her effort was received with much favor. She also was presented with a large and beautiful bouquet at the close, and kindly answered a recall. Address, Wm. H. Barnes, P. G. M. W. His speech of an hour was one of his best efforts and received with the most cordial approbation. Baritone solo, "The Maid of Judah" (Kucken), Prof. M. Luxenburg, Miss Danforth accompanying on the piano. The Professor is well known as an artistic musician, and on this occasion he was as usual awarded a hearty recall. There was a little break in the programme here as Bro. E. F. Loud, P. M. W., stepped to the front of the platform and from the sparkle and twinkle in his eye it was evident there was some unusual business on hand. It proved however quite pleasant, especially to Deputy Danforth. Bro. Loud in a masterly speech, delivered with good effect, presented him with a solid gold P. M. W. badge of the finest pattern. On it are inscribed these words, "To Edwin Danforth, D. D. G. M. W., 1st District A. O. U. W. From the Lodges of his District in recognition of faithful and unremitting work. San Francisco, Nov. 29, 1883." Bro. Danforth received this unexpected token with evident satisfaction, and in feeling words said that this souvenir would be worn by him with pleasant memory of the time he had spent with the worthy brethren of District No. 1. The orchestra then played a fantasia, followed by a vocal quartet entitled, "Peace on the Deep," by Misses Fannie and Birdie Colby, S. B. Alden and R. H. Belcher. For an encore the Misses Colby answered first in a duet with good effect, and Mr. S. B. Alden gave selections from a number of the popular pieces of our grandfathers' times which were highly entertaining. After a short and social intermission spirited dancing comprised the entertainment for the balance of the evening, which was carried beyond 1 o'clock. It was evident from the inception of this celebration that it would be one of the best of the season, as each one selected on the several committees worked with a will and unanimity seldom witnessed. We herewith give their names: Committee of Arrangements—Wm. Wilson, P. M. W., Chairman; W. H. Fuller, P. M. W., G. Selliman, P. M. W., T. Murray, P. M. W., George Jordan, P. M. W., Thomas W. Bethel, Caleb Brind, P. M. W., B. Sherry, P. M. W., G. Mosbacher, P. M. W., I. D. Martin, P. M. W., A. Montgomery, P. M. W., John Hoesch, P. M. W., I. Choynski, P. M. W., Charles Creighton, P. M. W., John Benson. Reception Committee—Isidor Blum, Chairman; P. Abrahamson, G. G. Burnet, I. H.

Small, A. Goetze, T. Murray, C. C. West R. M. Howland, J. G. Shyne, M. T. Freitas. Floor Manager—John Hoesch. Floor Committee—G. Mosbacher, C. Nelson, P. M. W., B. F. M. Benson, J. T. Broderick, Wm. Lovick, N. P. Peterson, J. M. Baird, P. M. W., James M. Scott, J. Bowman, J. G. Wall.

IT is not often that we make any mention of typographical mistakes that creep into our papers, for several reasons, one of which is that the WATCHMAN seldom has any such errors. There was one, however, in an editorial note in our last issue that will bear explanation. It escaped the eye of the proof-reader, and was so absurd and funny that we have been rallied about it considerably. It shows what a difference in meaning the substitution of a "v" for an "n" may make. We reprint correctly the paragraph referred to, emphasizing the word in which the mistake occurred:

The banquets reported elsewhere in this paper are glorious contradictions of the idea entertained by many, that good fellowship and the best of good cheer and hearty, warm enjoyment may not exist unless wines are present. The prohibition by constitutional law of the use of any intoxicants at the banquets, or other gatherings connected with, and held in the name of the A. O. U. W., is one of the wisest provisions that exist in that law.

A VALUABLE feature of our present issue is the number of communications given in the Lodge Local department from Recorders of the various Lodges, that give interesting reports of the visits of the Grand Master Workman in his recent southern tour. We trust that by our next issue all the remaining Lodges visited by him will be fully reported either by the Recorders or any interested members.

We met Bro. C. E. Carey, of Silver Reef Lodge, No. 2, of Globe, Arizona, on Dec. 4th, in the Lodge meeting of Unity, No. 27. As we learn, their Lodge is not in a very prosperous condition, owing to the unsettled state of society. It is, however, expected and hoped that as soon as the projected railroad is built that business and also interest in the Lodge will revive.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through DEWEY & Co.'s Scientific Press American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

THRASHING MACHINE AND SEPARATOR.—Samuel Hamilton, Salinas, Monterey Co. No. 287,925. Dated Nov. 6, 1883. It is a fact well known to those familiar with the art that the cylinder of a thrashing machine is capable of thrashing two or three times as much grain as the cleaning-shoe can separate and clean, and if the thrashing cylinder is fed up to its capacity or forced, the mass of straw becomes so great that, in addition to the grain which goes to the shoe not being properly cleaned, much is so entangled with the straw that it is never separated or gets to the shoe at all, but is lost by being carried out at the tail end with the straw. Mr. Hamilton's invention relates to certain improvements in these machines, and it consists of a duplex arrangement whereby the straw and waste from the straw-carrier and cleaning-shoe respectively are conveyed through a second and similar apparatus, the two being continuous and automatic.

HYDRAULIC PORTLAND CEMENT. William Jones, S. F. No. 287,941. Dated Nov. 6, 1883. This invention relates to a new and useful process of manufacturing or forming what is known as hydraulic Portland cement, and it consists in the treatment of argillaceous limestone or dolomite containing an excessive quantity of clay (silicate of alumina), with lime or its carbonate, and in subsequent steps. Heretofore Portland cement has usually been made by an artificial mixture of lime and clay. In argillaceous limestone or dolomite there occurs this mixture naturally; but seldom are the proportions requisite for the manufacture of the cement. More frequently there is too small a quantity of lime and an excess of clay. Consequently, such argillaceous limestone or dolomite is worthless for making the cement. The object of this process is to utilize such limestone or dolomite by adding thereto the requisite amount of lime.

CENTRIFUGAL PUMP.—Nicholas Didiot, Bakersfield, Kern Co. No. 287,508. Dated Oct. 30, 1883. This invention relates to that class of centrifugal pumps in which rapidly rotating arms filled with water discharge a portion of their water and draw up more from the water source with which they are connected. It consists in the continuation, with said arms, of valves adapted to close the ends of oppositely extended spouts connected to said arms and the spouts when they are at rest, in order to confine the water, and to open them when revolved to permit its discharge.

Vigor, strength and health all found in one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters.

DIO LEWIS'S MONTHLY.—The November issue of Dio Lewis's Monthly is much increased in size, and superior to any previous number. It is admirable as a whole and in detail. "Inebriety among Women," by Dr. Lucy M. Hall, Physician of the great Woman's Prison at Sherborn, Mass., is a thoughtful discussion of the causes and results of intemperance among women. Elihu Barbour, of Kansas, discusses the outcome of obedience to Mr. Greeley's injunction, "Young man, go West." "Employers and Employed," by Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, is a happy and instructive discussion of this important relation in human life as seen throughout Europe and our own country. "Beautiful Hands," by Fanchon, will delight all women who are ambitious of personal charms. "The Old-Fashioned Home," by Rev. Dr. Fulton, is a hearty plea for genuine love and honest life. Helen M. Loder reviews with spirit and pluck "Our Young Women," by Dr. Howard Crosby, which appeared in a previous number of this magazine. "Dear Sir," by President Lee, of the Agricultural College, Miss., is an attack upon an old-fashioned absurdity. Lillie Devereux Blake gives us some of her charming, touching stories in "One Thanksgiving Eve." "On the Rights and Wrongs of Doubting," by Rev. Dr. Hopkins, President of Auburn Theological Seminary, will surprise many people who know the reputation for solid orthodoxy of Dr. Hopkins and his institution. Dora Darmore, a writer well known on the Pacific Coast, gives us a new remedy, and a good one, for Polygamy. "Big Jack Small" is one of the best stories which has appeared in an American magazine in many years. It gives a vivid description of an ox driver's or "bull puncher's" life in Nevada. "Fashions" are discussed and finely illustrated by Aunt Bonnybell. "Our Cooking School," under the management of Julia Colman, grows better and better. "Book Notices" are well done, and "What Everybody Ought to Know," by Arthur Chester, is both interesting and useful. Besides all these articles, we find the following from the editor of this popular magazine: "The 'Good Old Times' and a New Mystery," in which Spiritualism is discussed; an admirable biographical sketch of George T. Angell, of Massachusetts; "A Wretched Mistake;" "Husbands and Wives;" a long illustrated article upon "Exercise with the Rings;" another chapter in the editor's series on "Our Brains and Nerves;" "Three Square Meals, or the Proper Treatment of Consumption;" an interesting sketch of "Irish Ladies;" "The Proper Clothing for Cold Weather;" a somewhat extended discussion of "Catarrh and its Treatment;" and several brief Hygienic chapters. It is the best number of this Magazine yet given to the public. FRANK SEAMAN, publisher, 69-71 Bible House, New York.

All communications and business connected with this committee should be addressed to the Secretary at the above permanent headquarters.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time he intends to pay for it, let him not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing only one cent) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

To Let for Concerts, Lectures, Etc.

The auditorium of Hamilton (Independent) Church is to let for Lectures, Concerts and Choice Entertainments. It is one of the best auditoriums in Oakland; has a fine organ; is comfortably seated, well lighted and conveniently located. Apply to TAGGART & DINGEE, No. 460 Eighth St., Oakland, Cal.

GOOD TEAMS IN OAKLAND can be had at the City Hall Stables, No. 514 Fourteenth street, west of the City Hall.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W. and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the first and third Saturdays of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following, the first six mentioned, however, being more fully represented in the organs of their own which we have established:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
 ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
 INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS
 AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
 KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
 ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
 INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
 KNIGHTS OF HONOR,
 KNIGHTS AND LADIES OF HONOR,
 ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
 GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and carefully selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Troubles of an Inventor.

When a man makes an invention, naturally the first thing that occurs to him is that he must make something out of it; but before he can do this, it becomes necessary for him to properly secure his rights to himself and patent his idea. The question then is how to go about this. He knows that the government will allow him a patent if he applies for it, but he does not know how to do this. He scarcely knows in whom to confide, even, in asking for advice on the subject. He finds that the mere inventing is not all there is, but that apparent troubles begin to beset him as soon as he has invented.

It is then found necessary to secure the services of a patent agent who is familiar with the forms and requirements of the Patent Office, and who is capable of writing a clear and comprehensive description of the invention, in order that the authorities at Washington may understand it.

But our inventor is again in trouble. He does not know which one of the numerous agencies he sees advertised is the best for him to choose. He finds that some seem willing to do his business for the fun of doing it, apparently, or for the good of human nature, judging by the inducements they hold out; but when he comes to consider a moment, he remembers that honest people can hardly afford to carry on business for others without some compensation. So that class of agents he hardly cares to trust. Then another advertisement shows him that there are certain men who will do all the work of preparing his papers and drawings, and attending to the case for him, and not ask for any pay unless they get the patent. This seems somewhat strange to him, as he knows that few men care to take the risk of other peoples' ventures on their shoulders without compensation, and he knows that people who take large risks expect large profits; therefore he is somewhat shy of this class of agents, albeit their offer seems very reasonable on the surface. Next, his attention is attracted by the alluring advertisement of a bureau or something of that kind, the object of which is apparently to do all manner of good to inventors because they are inventors, and which will not only obtain his patent for him but sell it after it is obtained. This strikes him at first as a very good scheme, and he makes up his mind to try this kind of a concern, but a friend with experience suggests a few queries in connection with the subject.

In the first place he calls attention to the fact that the old-established and responsible patent agencies, which have been attending to the interests of inventors for years, do not consider it proper to carry on the business of selling patent rights in connection with the other business. It is only ephemeral or catch penny establishments which branch out in this manner. There is no record of a long established agency of the kind. The two branches are perfectly separate classes of the business. The talent required to procure patents is of an entirely different kind from that necessary to sell them. Moreover, the two branches conflict. If an institution has two or three amalgamators or incubators for sale, it is not exactly the place an inventor of an amalgamator or incubator would choose with which to intrust his patent application. These and other reasons have weight with a careful man seeking the best person to attend to his business. He finds on inquiry that this class of people invariably want some kind of fee for exhibition of model, or as guarantee, or something of the kind, and that the pretended philanthropy for inventors is expected to bear some fruit, and that immediately.

Our inventor comes to the conclusion, after all, that to have his business properly attended to, with intelligence, experience and honesty, he must employ some agency long enough in the business to have established for itself a reputation for reliability. He expects to pay for their services, and finds, when he inquires, that their uniform charges amount to even less than those imposed, on one pretense or another, by inferior concerns. He finds, too, that there are no extra charges for things supposed to have been paid for in the regular fee, and that having once taken hold of the case, the reliable agency intends putting it through as originally promised, even if the case has to be amended to suit the wishes of the class-examiner several times. And if he continues and obtains his patent, it will be found that the document is worth something more than the mere paper it is written on, and has been so drawn as to stand the tests of the courts in case of necessity. It pays to do business in the proper way and with good firms, in all our transactions, but in none more so than in patents.

Oakland's Telescopes.

Within the past month no less than three large telescopes have been received in Oakland—an 8-inch refractor, by Alvan Clark & Sons, for the Schabar Observatory; and two silvered-glass reflecting telescopes, by John A. Brashear, of Pittsburgh, for private gentlemen—one of 8½ inches clear aperture for D. J. H. Wythe, and one of 10½ inches clear aperture for Mr. Charles Burckhalter. The one owned by Doctor Wythe will be mounted equatorially, and he is now constructing a small observatory to receive it. The larger one is complete and in operation in the neat little observatory of Mr. Burckhalter, at 962 Chester street.

This class of telescopes is comparatively of recent invention. Dr. Henry Draper, at Hastings on the Hudson, about 10 years ago made the first instrument of this description in America. These new reflecting telescopes possess many advantages, among which may be mentioned that they are entirely free from chromatic aberration, they are only half the length of achromatics of the same aperture; their dividing power on close double stars can not be surpassed, as they give smaller star disks than refractors; and for lunar and planetary detail they are very superior. Mounted as Newtonians, every part of the heavens may be observed with ease and comfort.

The power of these instruments as compared with achromatics is given by John Browning, of London, who is a clever optician and the maker of both refractors and reflectors, as one-sixth less in light-grasping powers, while in their dividing power—that is, their power of separating double stars—they are fully equal to the finest achromatics of the same aperture; while the Rev. T. W. Webb, the author of that invaluable little book "Celestial Objects for Common Telescopes," assigns equal light to Newtonian reflectors of 9, 6½ and 4½ inches, and achromatics of 8, 5½ and 4 inches respectively.

Mr. Burckhalter's instrument is mounted as an equatorial in the Newtonian form, with declination circle reading to one minute of arc, while the time circle reads to four seconds of time. It is provided with a slow motion in declination, and also in right ascension, by which, when the object is brought in the field of view, it may be followed with very little trouble, by means of an endless-screw motion, imparted by a handle brought to a convenient position for the hand of the observer. The eyepieces range in power from 90 to 648 diameters, which is all a telescope of even larger aperture would bear at the low altitude of Oakland. The mounting is extremely rigid, weighing about 800 pounds, but the telescope moves with the greatest ease.

There has been very little good observing weather since the instrument has been placed in position, but the tests so far given show it to be a very superior telescope, and its performance has greatly exceeded the owner's expectations. During a few hours when the atmospheric conditions were favorable the planet Saturn was observed, the numerous belts on the globe, the dusky or crape ring, and the division between the rings, were easily seen, while six satellites and the division in the outer ring were plainly visible. The snow-caps of Mars were remarkably plain, and the markings of the seas and continents which intersect his ruddy globe were distinctly made out. The planet Jupiter, with his varied colored belts, was a splendid object; but the Great Nebula in Orion—that wondrous cloud of light, and one of the most remarkable objects in the heavens—was by far the grandest sight of all. Studded with stars, the dark rifts, and clouds, and sprays of fiery mists, the chaotic material of future suns, as seen with so large a telescope, form a grand and imposing picture. Mr. Brashear's specula have already gained an enviable reputation, and these are but the pioneers on this Coast of many silvered-glass reflecting telescopes.

WEAK muscles and nerves, sluggishness of thought and inactivity, cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

It is said that dwarfs die of premature old age, and giants of exhaustion.

Failing!

That is what a great many people are doing. They don't know just what is the matter, but they have a combination of pains and aches, and each month they grow worse.

The only sure remedy yet found is BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and this by rapid and thorough assimilation with the blood purifies and enriches it, and rich, strong blood flowing to every part of the system repairs the wasted tissues, drives out disease and gives health and strength.

This is why BROWN IRON BITTERS will cure kidney and liver diseases, consumption, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, malaria, intermittent fevers, &c.

Mr. Simon Blanchard, a well-known citizen of Hayessville, Meade county, Kentucky, says: "My wife had been sick for a long time, and her constitution was all broken down and she was unable to work. She was advised to use Brown's Iron Bitters, and found it to work like a charm. We would not now be without it for any consideration, as we consider it the best tonic in the world."

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is not a drink and does not contain whiskey. It is the only preparation of Iron that causes no injurious effects. Get the genuine. Don't be imposed on with imitations.

The Anniversary Banquet.

Gathering of the Pioneers at "The Baldwin" —Interesting Addresses by the Grand and Past Grand Officers.

[CONCLUDED FROM OUR LAST ISSUE].

Address of Past Grand Master Barnes.

Wm. H. Barnes, P. G. M., then responded to the toast, "Fraternal Co-operation in California." He said that to fittingly bring this matter before his hearers it would be necessary to speak of those dry details known as figures and statistics, but we agree with the Santa Rosa Republican, when it says that he has a most happy way of presenting figures that makes them glow with interest and beauty. His long and intimate acquaintance with fraternal history, together with his thorough knowledge of the field, invests his remarks always with unusual value. He said that there was not, probably, a person present that realized the full magnitude of fraternal societies, and their numerical strength and influence, and it would, perhaps, surprise many to learn the extent to which these Orders were participated in throughout the world. Taking the older Orders, he gave their numerical strength as follows: Masons, 560,000; Foresters, 560,000; Odd Fellows (English), 525,000; Odd Fellows (American), 510,000; Odd Fellows (various foreign Unities), 200,000; Red Men, 30,000; Druids, 15,000; Pythians, 121,000; total, 2,521,000. He also showed that the payments for relief from these older Orders amounted to over $10,000,000 per year, of which were paid out in California about $500,000. He then took up the younger Orders, and gave their statistics in membership, viz.: A. O. U. W., 128,000; Knights of Honor, 126,000; Royal Arcanum, 40,000; American Legion of Honor, 52,000; Chosen Friends (two Orders), 20,000; total, 368,000. Adding to these several still younger Orders, such as Knights of Golden Rule, Mutual Companions, etc., gave a grand total of 3,000,000 men bonded together in the cause of mutual protection and relief. He showed that the payments to the heirs of deceased members by the co-operative Orders were $6,000,000 annually, of which $500,000 was paid to recipients in California. He then drew a picture of the great practical relief afforded by the payment of $16,000,000 per year at large, and of $1,000,000 annually in this state, and in a few pithy sentences showed that as the rate of death and average age of the membership in the older Orders was precisely the same to-day that it was 50 years ago, viz., average age, 40 years, death rate, 1 per cent, that so would it be in the A. O. U. W. for all time to come. After pointing out the wonderful success of fraternal societies, he urged the brothers not to forget that one great reason for this prosperity had been the mighty aid of the press, and in this connection paid a most complimentary tribute to the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, a compliment all the more appreciated when coming from one whose own efforts through the press in behalf of fraternity stands unrivaled. He concluded his remarks, amid applause, with one of those brilliant poetical impromptus for which he is noted, the last verse of which was:

I pray that choicest blessings may attend;
And from Pratt, the pioneer, to Rogers in the chair,
That we may all prove faithful to the end."

Closing Address of Past Grand Master Jordan.

Brother Jordan then responded as follows to the toast, "Our Honored Dead."

Brothers:—In responding to this solemn toast, I shall first, in memory of the dead, call you to your feet, that with me, in a glass of sparkling water, symbolic in its crystal purity of the stainless characters sustained by those who have gone before us, you may, in silence, think of them and pledge your ceaseless devotion to the undying principles of our fraternity. It is an old axiom that concerning the dead we should speak only good, or, as the Latin scholar would have us say, "De mortuis nihil nisi bonum."

But, fortunately, regarding those who have been called from the scenes of our early labor to "that bourne from whence no traveler returns," it would be impossible to say aught but words of praise and commendation. As, to-night, one by one they float before me, I can not think of any word or deed of theirs that would not reflect credit upon the heart and character of any Workman. Nor can I think that the zealous interest they evinced while here among us has been forgotten in that other world, but rather would I think that though absent in fleshly form, yet in the spirit they are here, breathing in the full glowing ardor we each are feeling now, and contributing to the holy inspiration of the hour.

Our honored dead! Yes, and they will be honored while Workmen shall remember the days of yore; while the history of the "old guard" that like the soldiers of Napoleon slept ever on their arms, shall be repeated around the altars of our Lodges—so long shall their names live in the annals of our Order. To forget them would be to obliterate the past, to wipe from the page of history the struggles of the early days. Forget them! No, that can not be; but the rather as time goes on and we shall gather from year to year about our festive boards to renew the fraternal bonds that bind our hearts together, let their names become the bright talismans of the past, beckoning us on to lives of greater purity and deeds inspired by a deeper and more lasting love.

Of the list of our departed, time will not permit us to mention more than three—Bros. William T. Bradbury, H. G. Oliver and H. A. Oliver.

The first of these was our Past Grand Master. Elected to fill a vacancy in our delegation to the Supreme Lodge, he was debarred from receiving his degree by reason of a false impression of the laws, but never did this disappointment detract from his interest in our cause. Quiet, unassuming, yet aggressive, he was always in the front when work was needed in the propagation of our Order.

I saw him last on the train that brought us from the session of the Grand Lodge at San Jose. Passing through the car I stopped for a moment at his seat, and noting the unwonted pallor of his cheek, asked him of his health. His reply, so mild and patient in its tone, I shall not forget. He had caught a violent cold, and was suffering greatly. The next I heard was of his death and burial. There was gathered to his final home one of our Past Grand Masters. Who of similar rank shall be the next to follow in his footsteps?

Bro. H. G. Oliver was my Deputy Grand Master in the darkness and gloom which the sudden fall and disappearance of his predecessor had cast upon me and the entire Order in California. I looked about for some one who had both the courage, the talent, and the zeal to take up the drooping standard and bear it again among the people. Such a one I found in Bro. Oliver; and of the labor he performed many here to-night can speak with gratitude. At my suggestion he had been appointed by the Supreme Master to go to Oregon and introduce the Order there, and it was from this labor that I called him home. Brooklyn Lodge has many bright diadems in the crown that glitters upon her brow, but none shine with a more steady and refulgent light than that of Bro. H. G. Oliver.

You will all remember that ill-fated train that left the Oakland wharf not many months ago on its way to the city of Los Angeles. It carried among its passengers my personal friend and District Deputy Bro. H. A. Oliver, of Lakeport, who was on his way to found a new home in the Sunny South. With the break of the day that followed, the telegraph startled the world with a tale of woe that made men shudder and women grow pale. That train had dashed headlong down the terrible grade of Tehachipa, and, leaping from the rails, had built of its gilded cars a charnel-house, within the smoking embers of which the body of Bro. Oliver was burned to ashes. No relic of his body was ever found. What he knew and what he suffered at the awful time none but God can tell. That was a terrible death, and never shall we forget it. While the name Tehachipa remains it will never be spoken in a Workmen's Lodge without bringing to mind the tragic and untimely death of one whose soul was good, and the streams of whose life, like the fountains that flow from the snow-clad Sierras, were pure and undimmed. Of our honored dead there is nothing more that I may say. Let their goodly influence so pervade our hearts to-night that we shall go forth to work with renewed devotion for the upbuilding of our great fraternity; and henceforth let him be honored most who shall labor hardest for the good of our common cause.

The half-suppressed demonstrations that followed Bro. Jordan's earnest and burning eloquence showed that hearts were melted by his touching allusions, and glistening eyes attested the same. As if by one accord all rose from their seats, and in response to a suggestion, clasped hands in the circle of the Workmen's "mystic tie," and gave voice to their feelings in the words and music of "Auld Lang Syne," which was sung with an earnestness of heart that brought all under its influence, and showed that Bro. Jordan had attained the wish expressed in his invitations, viz, "I sincerely hope that the enthusiasm and warmth of heart enkindled by our gathering may go forth to bless the cause of Workmanship throughout our entire Jurisdiction."

COMPLIMENTARY SAMPLES OF THIS PAPER are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage, and, as far as practicable, aid in circulating the journal, and making its value more widely known to others, and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $2 a year. Extra copies mailed for 10 cents, if ordered soon enough. Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times), by turning a leaf.

Pennsylvania celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the Order on October 27th, in Alleghany City, and Philadelphia. In the former city a building with seating capacity for 4,500 did not prove large enough to accommodate all that desired to attend, and though the Philadelphia celebration was not open to the public, it, too, was largely attended. A special feature of the occasion was that the two meetings were connected by a telegraph line, and thus each audience was informed of the proceedings of the other as they progressed. At the Alleghany celebration, Bro. John H. Mowen, Grand Master Workman, presided. Bro. J. M. McNair, Grand Recorder, read a letter dated at the Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., from the President of the United States, Bro. Chester A. Arthur, regretting his inability to be present.

A SAD AND SUDDEN DEATH.—Minnie Hatch, wife of Frederick A. Hatch, a commission merchant of this city, and daughter of J. P. H. Wentworth, editor of the Resources of California, died suddenly at their family residence in Oakland, Friday morning, the 23d ult. She was only ill since the night before, but her trouble—internal hemorrhage—soon closed her young life. She was a beautiful woman and a devoted wife, and was but 21 years of age at the time of her death. Her burial robe was the white satin garment that had been her wedding dress. The funeral took place from the First Baptist Church of Oakland last Tuesday, the services being conducted by Rev. E. H. Gray, the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. C. Pond, of San Francisco. Among the many friends and relatives present was her brother, Samuel A. Wentworth, of El Paso, N. M., who was summoned by the last wishes of the deceased. The stricken husband and relatives have the profound sympathy of their many friends.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION.—The Canadian Association will give a social literary and musical entertainment on Thursday evening the 20th inst., at B'nai B'rith hall. Mr. Edward Hanlan, the champion rower of the world, will be present, and possibly the boat "Our Friend" will be exhibited, and a formal reception given him. High expectations and joyful anticipations are accumulating for this occasion.

A CHANGE IN THE CALIFORNIA MILITARY ACADEMY.—On the first of January the Rev. Dr. McClure, who has been for the past nineteen years the Principal of the California Military Academy, retires from the management of this well-known institution. He will be succeeded by Col. W. H. O'Brien, who is well known throughout the State as an able educator and a thorough disciplinarian. It is needless to say, under the new regime the Military Academy will maintain its place as a first-class educational institution.

THE Western Perfumery Co., No. 26 Second street, have a large manufactory for making all kinds of goods in their line. Bro. Philip Peck has charge of this manufactory as perfumer and chemist, and the articles made for the toilet are the choicest that can be found in this market. Mr. L. Greenbaum, the proprietor, has enlarged the premises, and it is now one of the notable industries of our city.

BRO. MAX BURKARDT is one of the leading importers and dealers in chromos, lithographs, engravings, photographs, paintings, etc., at 545 Washington street. He has been in business here for the past 13 years, and by square and honest dealing has established one of the largest houses in the city. Anyone desiring good work at reasonable prices should call on our genial brother, at 545 Washington street.

BRO. H. J. PLONTEAUX, D. D. S., formerly one of the leading dentists in Oakland, has opened fine dental parlors on the northwest corner of Geary and Dupont. He justly has the reputation of being one of the most skilled and best operators in this State.

BRO. ROBT. MATTHEY, proprietor of the Palace Bakery, 1523 Mission street, is prepared and will keep constantly on hand a large stock of Christmas goods, which will be sold at bedrock prices.

The Fine Arts for the Holidays.

Nothing is more appropriate for a Christmas gift than something in the way of a picture. It is more expressive of the giver's taste than any thing else. No matter if it be a simple card—there are degrees of beauty in these; but the handsomest and most original is the California Christmas Card, hand-painted, illustrating the difference between the hills and valleys of California, covered, as they are, with verdure and flowers, and the snow-covered landscapes of the East. As a novelty to transmit East, it is altogether the nicest thing of the season. It was originated and is for sale by Messrs. Snow & Co., 12 Post street, Masonic Temple.

A Dangerous Remedy.

It has been discovered that the extract of the yellow jessamine of the South is an effective remedy for poison oak. The extract is employed as a wash by mixing a half drachm of carbolic acid, two drachms of the fluid extract of gelsemium, one-half ounce of glycerine and four ounces of water.—Southern Trade Gazette.

And while you are putting forth such a remedy why don't you also say that yellow jessamine, or gelsemium, as the alcoholic extract of yellow jessamine root bark is known, is one of the most deadly poisons known. It is also one of the most deceitful remedies, as its first effect is to allay all excitement, while it marches on to insensibility, unconsciousness, and certain death. Dipping the hand in the extract (if strong) and then sucking the fingers has caused death. A few drops, if taken internally, will cause death with some temperaments, and a very small dose, comparatively, will cause the strongest man to succumb. No certain remedy or antidote is positively known. Negroes in the South have told us that plentiful doses of fine salt, swallowed at once, and to keep the persons poisoned on their feet and moving, would counteract its effects. An emetic is of no use; the poison enters into the circulation at once. The medical men know of no certain antidote. Gelsemium has been used, and a number of chemical reagents used with no positive success. What cures in one case has no permanent effect in another. A physician recently lost his life in New Haven, Conn., by an overdose. If you turn snakes loose tell your readers they are rattlesnakes, or else acknowledge your ignorance, but we warn our readers that gelsemium is poison of the most subtle kind, and sure as death.—Cotton, Wool and Iron.

Hostilities between France and China are expected at any time.

Vigorous Work in Southern California.

Great enterprise is being manifested in the lower part of the state. The example of the new and pushing colonies is being imitated, and public improvements, most especially those connected with the water supply, are being inaugurated in every direction.

Los Angeles is waking up, and has ordered a thorough report on her whole water system, with a view of taking effective measures to save and properly distribute the supply. Anaheim proposes to borrow $100,000, if necessary, and build an immense reservoir. Orange and Santa Ana are making a pile dam to secure the underflow of the river at Bedrock Canyon, while the many thriving settlements located at the eastern end of the beautiful San Bernardino Valley, Redlands, Lugonia, Highlands, etc., are all more or less engaged in public enterprises of like character. The new narrow-gauge railroad from Los Angeles to Pasadena is under way. At Colton, iron and steel works are projected; the Lime Company is crowded with business, while coal from the new mine on the California Southern railroad has been shipped in car-lots. Los Angeles is to have a paper-mill, and we know not what beside. One almost wonders what is causing this wonderful development; but, underlying all are good, solid reasons. The country is superior, the air is healthful and invigorating, the people educated, orderly and intelligent, the fruits of surpassing excellence, and the climate almost if not quite unequalled on the globe.

The Old Telegraph mine, Bingham, is shipping about thirty tons per day from the recent big strike. The ore body is said to be from twelve to fifteen feet wide across the face, and it has been explored sufficiently to demonstrate that it is one of the biggest strikes made in many a day in that great mine.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold
fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and shareholders
on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practica-
miners in this country.

The Press gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.

New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

WHAT IS SAID OF THE INSTITUTION:

It is not second to any school for young ladies in the State. The building is new and perfect in its arrangements for health and comfort. The situation is admirable, and commands a view of sea and mountains not found surpassed on the continent. — Rev. R. L. Brock, D. D., in The Occident.

It is a well-ordered and popular institution in a favorite location. — The Pacific.

I have known Mr. and Mrs. Harmon for many years. They are successful educators, and I know what a genuine for young ladies should be. — Extract from address of Prof. Martin Kellogg, University of California.

Mrs. F. W. Harmon is emphasized by an educated in every sense of the word. Her name is almost a household word throughout the length and breadth of this coast. — Around.

In all courses there is a disposition to take the institution abreast of all true progress in the art of instruction and choice of studies for the curriculum. — Oakland Times.

The school is a good place to give girls and young ladies the best there is in boarding-school life and studies. — Pacific Rural Press. For further information address,

Grand Recorder's Department.

HEADQUARTERS of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 4 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell streets, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT.

GRAND MEDICAL EXAMINER'S HEADQUARTERS—Office, No. 234 Post street, San Francisco, Cal. JAMES SIMPSON, M. D.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always inclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

THE P. C. tax for this time is 37 cents.

IN remitting Beneficiary Fund the law requires that remittances on assessment calls must be made so as to reach the office of the Grand Recorder during the first week in the month. Where Lodges do not meet in time draw a warrant for beneficiary moneys so they may be remitted as above, there is no way to do but for the Recorder and Financier to make out the remittance report and send to the Receiver, that they may remit before the meeting. Where there are two more calls, remit for the first as above, and for the rest at once after the 28th of the month. An assessment call is a sight draft to the Receiver, and a receipt from the Grand Recorder will be his sufficient voucher for the moneys remitted. Not later than the 10th of each month, second notice will be issued to all delinquent Lodges.

LODGES should bear in mind that Records, Financiers and Receivers who have not received the Past Master Degree are not eligible to election as Representatives to the Grand Lodge, no matter how long they may have served in their respective offices. Secretary does not make such officers Past Masters, as it does the Masters of Lodges; it only makes them eligible to receive the P. C. Degree if recommended by their respective Lodges. The term of service required is three consecutive years. It is at the discretion of the Grand Lodge whether it confer the Degree on any of these officers, notwithstanding their eligibility.

It seems almost impossible to get semi-annual reports from the Lodges sufficiently accurate to serve any useful purpose. A very considerable number so far received are not at all reliable. Other Grand Recorders complain of the same difficulty. It is doubtful if there is any adequate remedy.

Two assessments may be expected for February. Each assessment now realizes $1,000, and consequently for some time to come one only will be required for every ten deaths.

EXPERIENCE proves that the death rate in this Jurisdiction is much greater in the first than in the last half of the year.

WE are deeply involved in disposing of Lodge reports, and gathering together statistical and other matters for presentation to the Grand Lodge at its coming session. It is expected that our Lodges will be found to be in excellent financial condition.

VERY likely we shall have another Relief assessment in the course of a couple of months. The amount of the call will probably be about 50 cents per member.

Needed Legislation.

While on general principles we are opposed to much legislation by our Grand Lodge, yet ago? Financiers do not always remain in office, nor in the same country, nor are they certain to live any more than other people. Sometime we may want the testimony of a Financier in a case like this under consideration and not be able to get it, and in consequence be mulcted in the sum of $2,000. One of two things must be done. Either we must adopt some system that shall secure a good and sufficient record on the books of the Lodge that shall be legal evidence of notification, or we must, if possible, so change the law that no such record will be necessary; in other words, that the fact of notification shall be presumed in absence of proof to the contrary. In the light we now have it would appear the safer way to adopt the former course, but just how best

SUMNER'S AMPHITHEATER, COLORADO RIVER.

there are times when an apparent necessity presents itself for prompt and efficient action. A case of this character will come before the Grand Lodge at its next session. Under the beneficiary law every member of a Lodge holding a valid certificate is entitled to notice of assessment from the Financier. Without such notice no such member can be legally suspended. Should the Grand Lodge be sued by the beneficiary of a deceased member who stood suspended at death and the plea entered that such suspension was illegal because of failure to notify said member of assessment, we should be obliged to prove to the satisfaction of the Court that notice had been served in accordance with our law. The oath of the Financier would probably be sufficient if positive, but how many could be positive of notifying any particular member three, six or twelve months ago? To accomplish the desired result we are not just now prepared to say. The consideration of this important matter is commended to our newly elected Representatives to the Grand Lodge. They will find in it plenty of food for careful reflection, and to save time let the conclusions of such as think they have mastered the situation be put in the form of an amendment to the Constitution and sent in to E. Lehe, Stockton, Chairman of Committee on Amendments.

THERE have been some very spirited and well contested elections for officers in a number of our City Lodges. Spartan, No. 36, polled 110 votes in a membership of 170; Yerba Buena, No. 14, polled 83 votes, and Valley, No. 30, over 100. Several more have shown great interest in selecting their officers for this term.

Colorado River Scenery.

IN Powell's "Exploration of the Colorado River of the West" are many graphic descriptions of magnificent scenery, and many engravings representing the salient features of the region. One of these engravings is shown herewith. It is described in the chapter relating the trip from the mouth of the Uintah River to the junction of the Grand and Green. A long distance below the mouth of the Uintah they enter the mouth of another canyon, almost imperceptibly, as the walls rise very gently. The river sweeps in great and beautiful curves, the canyon walls steadily increasing in altitude. The escarpment formed by the cut edges of the rock are often vertical, sometimes terraced, and in some places the treads of the terraces are sloping. In these quiet curves vast amphitheatres are formed, now in vertical rocks, now in steps, the salient point of rock within the curve usually broken down in a steep slope; and the party occasionally stopped to climb up at such a place, where, on looking down, they would see the river sweeping the foot of the opposite cliff, in a great, easy curve, with a perpendicular of 1,000 feet, and rising to the top of the edge many hundreds of feet. One of these being symmetrical in form, they named "Sumner's Amphitheater," and a view of this we give. The cliffs are rarely broken by the entrance of side canyons, and the boat sweeps round curve after curve with almost continuous walls for several miles.

Prize Poem Offer.

THE publishers of this paper herewith make the following offer to those readers who are of a literary turn of mind, to the end that interest in the great theme of Fraternity may be kept thoroughly alive, and that our readers may be presented with the cream of the best current poetical thought. To that subscriber who will send us the best original poem not exceeding fifty lines upon the general subject of Fraternity before February 1st, we will give an order upon the celebrated photographer, Taber, for $25 worth of photographs. The conditions of the contest are few. The poem which is to receive the prize will only be so nominated after fair and impartial consideration by competent judges. Writers will give us only their nom de plumes until after the award is made. The prize poem and any others that may be deemed worthy will afterwards be published with the author's name and circumstances of publication unless withdrawn by request of the author.

THERE is no positive news of appointments of District Deputies yet, to take the place of Brother Edwin Danforth, of District No. 1, of this city, or Brother Robert M. Jones, of Contra Costa, both of whom have recently resigned. It is rumored, however, that Brother George Jordan, of Spartan Lodge, No. 36, of this city is to succeed the former.

THE public installation of Memorial Lodge, No. 174, is to take place at Fraternity Hall, Shiels' building, No. 32 O'Farrell street, next Monday evening, January 14th.

The Fireside.

A New Year.

Why drive you from the Old Year?
What art thou doing in the New Year?
Comest, knight-errant, the wrong to right,
Comest to scatter our gloom with light?
Wherefore the thrill, the sparkle and shine,
In heart and eyes at a word of thine?

The old was buoyant, the old was true;
The old was brave when the old was new.
He crowned us often with grace and gift;
His sternest skies had a deep blue rift;
Strong and soft when he bade us kneel,
With welcome and joyance thine we grasped.
O tell us, Year—we are fain to know—
What is thy charm that we hail thee so?

Dost promise much that is fair and sweet—
The wind's low stir in the rippling wheat,
The wave's soft splash on the sandy floor,
The bloom of roses from shore to shore,
Glance of wings from the bowery nest,
Music and perfume from east to west,
Frosts to glitter in jewelled rime,
Blush of sunrise at morning's prime,
Stars above us their watch to keep,
And rain and dew though we wake or sleep?

These, O Year, we shall have of thee,
For the thing that hath been aye shall be.
Sowing and reaping from seed to sheaf,
The waiting long and the fruitage brief.
What beyond is thy guerdon bright?
To us who stand in thy dawning light?

Canst drop a balm to sorrow's heart
Till the aching wound forgets to smart?
Canst comfort the mother when tempests beat
On a mound with stones at head and feet?
Canst fill with courage the weary soul,
And give the penitent bliss for dole?
Thus other years have been rich in grace,
Have dried the tears on the furrowed face.
Oh, day by day, and from sun to sun,
Wilt thou, good Year, do what they have done?

A whisper, such as an angel drops
When over a cradled babe he stops,
It says: "Oh, never to grief or pain,
To anguish or yearning, loss or bane,
Hath any such ease to bring as Time,
Listen, how softly my joy-bells chime!"
So out of the winter and through the snow,
The New Year's promises flash and glow.

Once more a voice, and I hear it call
Like a bugle note from a mountain wall;
The pines uplift it with mighty sound,
The billows bear it the green earth round;
A voice that rolls in a jubilant song,
A conqueror's ring in its echo strong;
Through the ether clear, from the solemn sky
The New Year beckons and makes reply:

"I bring you friends, what the years have brought Since ever men toiled, aspired or thought—
Days for labor and nights for rest;
And I bring you love, a heaven-born guest;
Space to work in and work to do,
And faith in that which is pure and true,
Hold me in honor and greet me dear,
And 'sooth you'll find me a happy Year."

A Page From the Old Year.

Written by FANNIE ISABELLE SHERRICK.

The old year was dying. Slowly the white flakes of snow came down weaving a white shroud for the dying monarch. For twelve months he had reigned a king. The fair spring had woven him lovely garlands of dainty blossoms, the brilliant summer had laden him with perfumed, golden-treasures, and the gorgeous autumn had crowned him with splendors of crimson and gold. But now sceptre and crown had faded away, and helay gasping in the throes of death, the frost upon his brow, the chill breath of winter upon his aged cheek.

At Christmas there had been a still, white world, pure and beautiful for the coming of the fair Christ-child, and now ere the vestal garments had faded from the earth, the heavens were robbing her again for the coming of another heaven-born child—the glad New Year.

All day long the snow had been falling, silently, slowly. The idle wind had tossed the white flakes hither and thither, chasing them into odd corners and piling them up in great drifts under the fences; yet by night their gentle mission was done, and the ugly brown earth was hidden away from sight under robes of crystal white.

A soft twilight fell upon the earth, broken only by the gleam of half hidden stars sailing slowly through cloud-drifts in the still blue spaces above. No sound came through the forest save the sighing of the wind, and a deep silence, born of the brooding peace of the heavens, floated downward and wrapped the white world in its mysterious hush.

In the city the long streets were ablaze with yellow gaslight, and the silver glow of the electric lights, swung outward into the night, drove the shadows far away. But into the still white country they crept and the tall trees of the forest held out ghostly arms to greet them. It was a weird night—a fitting time for the old year to die—with only the wind to wail his requiem, and only the stars to watch over his white grave.

In her father's lonely country home, the daughter of farmer Matthews is watching. Her face is pale and worn and her dark eyes are heavy with long weariness and watching.

On the bed a little child sleeps, one white arm thrown up restlessly against the pillow. The flush of fever is upon her white face and its hot breath upon her parted lips.

Nora Wade presses her lips upon the tangled mass of golden hair that sweeps the pillow, and cries softly. For a fortnight those baby arms have clung to her neck ceaselessly, the sweet voice sobbing "Mamma! mamma!" until her heart is almost broken. For days she has fought the cruel fever, but still it saps up the life-blood of her darling. Into a fitful slumber she has fallen, and for the first time in many weary days Nora is free from the cares of those clinging arms.

For a long time she sits there motionless, scarcely breathing lest she should disturb the child's slumber; and then, as she sees how quiet the sleep has grown, her heart gains hope, and she steals away to the window, where the curtain half drawn reveals the beautiful world without.

No words came from her lips as she sees that white-robed, silent world; yet her silence is a prayer, a voiceless offering to the white, invisible throne in the star-jeweled world above.

Just then a soft footfall is heard upon the stairs, and Mrs. Matthews enters.

"Is she still sleeping?" she asks, looking toward the child.

"Yes," Nora answered, in a whisper; and then, as her mother's arms are folded about her, she bows her head and weeps bitterly.

"Don't cry, Nora, be a brave woman. These sorrows come to all of us, and we must bear them."

"But I can not. Mine is greater than I can bear," she cries, lifting up her head. If Alice must die, then I have no wish to live."

"No, Nora, don't say such words as those. You are tired and worn. When the morning comes you will have renewed hope and strength. Alice is sleeping the first quiet sleep she has had for many nights, and her quiet slumber brings with it a fresh hope. But you must rest, dear; lie down here beside her, and I will keep watch."

"No, no," Nora shakes her head slowly. "I could not sleep; it would be torture. You need it more than I; go, I entreat you."

After much persuasion, her mother leaves the room, and she sinks once more into the chair by the bed. She is tired of the old year, and she has no sorrow to know that it is dying. It has brought her only shame and misery.

On the small writing desk at her elbow two letters are lying. She picks them up, mechanically crushing them between her white fingers. Again and again she has read them, until the whole world seems centered in their burning words. Only a few lines mar the white pages, yet they tell the tale of her sorrow, and as they have stained the unsullied pages, so they have engraven upon her stainless heart the dark bitterness of sorrow and disgrace.

Five years ago no happier bride ere left a father's home than she; but ere the last year had reached its prime she had come home sad and weary, with the weight of years upon her young head. All the beautiful young life was a wreck, and the child whose golden head was pillowed on her breast knew not her mother's sorrow.

In her happy home in the far-off city the first letter had come, falling into the depths of her tranquil life like a thunderbolt from heaven. She had shivered with terror as she had read its contents, and she had flung it from her and trampled it beneath her feet, refusing to believe in her husband's dishonor. And oh, it was a cruel hand indeed that had penned the words, though it was the hand of her own uncle.

"Nora Wade," he had written her coldly, "your husband has forged a note in my name. He has fled the city; but if there is a law in the land I shall make him suffer its fullest penalty." For one mad moment she had almost cursed the man, though he was her father's brother, who had dared to fling this sudden sorrow upon her. But scarcely had she realized its truth ere another missive followed, more full of bitter poison than the first. It was the hardest blow of all, and her frail heart had almost broken under the sudden burden, for the hand she loved best in all the world had penned the cruel words.

"Dear Nora," her husband had said, "God forgive me for the sorrow I have brought upon you, but you shall never look upon my face again. Tempted, I have fallen, and sorrow-stricken I leave my home never to enter it again. Teach Alice to forget me—and teach your own heart, Nora, to look upon me as dead."

Is it any wonder that for long weeks afterwards Nora Wade had lain as one dead, and that when consciousness had come she had longed to die. Months afterward she was brought back to the home of her childhood, and there they had nursed her back to life. But the days were to her but meaningless shadows, and had it not been for the little life that grew brighter and sweeter every day in the peace of the old farm-house, she would willingly have fallen into the sleep that knows no waking.

Now she sits in the shadow of the darkened room, living again through the scenes of the past year. But all the fierceness of her old rebellion has died away, and she feels only a weary, weary pain that knows no surcease. She looks upon the lovely child-face before her with a great tenderness in her mother eyes—which is yet half a terror. What if those baby lips should never lip her name again—what if those dimpled hands should never press her face again in the long, lonely years to come! And the sweet voice! Would the old home ever be glad again without its ringing echoes? Not only her own heart she knows will break, but the old hearts, too, that have grafted their happiness upon the tender, beautiful blossom.

But no! She drives the thought away. Surely God will leave her this—one wee flower that has blossomed upon her cross. In her sleep the child sobs her name and Nora takes the dainty golden head in her arms, kissing the flushed cheeks and soothing the wee sufferer to sleep again. And with the baby arms around her neck, she sinks herself into a troubled, restless slumber.

Farmer Matthews, riding along the country road that leads from the city into the lonely country beyond, is not without a slight fear, for the twilight has fallen, and it grows darker every moment. Still the white earth reflects the fading light, and the stars seen now and then through the cloud spaces cast a faint glimmer upon the glistening road. Old Dobbs knows the way well, however, and he jogs along placidly, scarcely heeding the keen wind as it sweeps across the snowdrifts, though it blinds him momentarily.

But Farmer Matthews is not alone. By his side sits a young physician, whose stalwart form does not shrink from the cutting blast.

"I hardly thought you'd come," says the old farmer. "I kinder hated to ask you, you seemed to be enjoyin' yourself so mightily; but Alice was so sick, and the women folks—mother and Nora—lost all faith in the old doctor, so I thought there'd be no harm in comin' to see, anyhow."

The old man's voice trembles a little. He is thinking of the frail little form that has lain so helplessly on the pillow for many, many days, and the little voice whose music has been well nigh hushed forever.

"Of course I'd come," answers the young man. "How could you think I wouldn't? Don't I owe my life to you? I would be ungrateful, indeed, did I not remember the day when you took me, a stray waif, into your heart and home. It was long ago, but I owe all I am and all I have to-day to you, and what would I not do for you and yours?"

"God bless you for the good will, my boy," the old man says; and then there is a silence between them, broken only by the sound of the horse's hoofs upon the crisp white snow.

But as they turn a bend in the road the old man turns to his companion.

"We've a lonely patch of woods ahead; keep your eyes and ears open."

"Yes, I am prepared for it," The young man takes two glittering objects from his pocket. "I fancy any prowling rascals would not like to make the acquaintance of these."

He replaces the revolvers safely in their hiding place as old Dobbs plunges bravely into the woods. A ghostly place it is, with the tall trees holding out long white arms and the weird shadows falling across the winding road.

"Hark! what's that!" The young physician lays his hand upon the old man's arm. They both listen for a moment, but only the sighing of the wind comes through the forest.

"I surely heard a moan," says the younger man. "It could not have been the wind."

Old Dobbs suddenly pricks up his ears and shies violently to one side of the road.

"Hellow!" cries the farmer. "What's the matter with Dobbs?"

But the young man has already sprung to the ground. "There's something in the road," he says. "Give me the lantern, quick. Surely it is a man fallen into the snow drifts." He takes a small vial from his pocket and forces its contents down the man's throat; then they lift him carefully into the wagon.

"Drive as fast as you can," the young man says. "If you are home within the hour we may save him."

An hour later Nora Wade, watching in the darkened chamber, is roused by the touch of a friendly hand.

"Nora," he says, softly.

"Oh, Joe, is it you?" she cries. "You have come to save my darling. You will save her, won't you?" She looks at him piteously, her every word a sob.

"I will try," he says. Years ago in their happy childhood he would have lain down his life for Nora—what would he not do for her child. All the later love for his wife has not swept away the tenderness he feels towards the love of his youth.

Through the long hours of the night he watches with her, noting every change in the fair baby face upon the pillow, now and then stealing from the room to attend to his patient below, whom he has left in Mrs. Matthews's charge.

When the morning breaks and the gray dawn of the new year steals across the white fields, he takes Nora's hand in his. "Your child will live," he says.

Her large eyes speak their gratitude—her lips are dumb.

"Leave her to your mother," he says, "for a little while, and come with me."

His words are imperative and she follows him in silence down the stairs into the sitting room below.

Upon the lounge a man lies, his eyes closed in slumber. The fair hair is tossed backwards from a finely chiseled face, but there is a weariness upon it that is sad to look upon.

With a saddened cry Nora falls beside him. But ere the words upon her lips are spoken she loses consciousness and for hours knows no more. All the weary nights of watching have flung their burden upon her and she is powerless to rally.

"You have killed her," the old man says as the young physician lifts her in his arms.

"No," he answers, "joy never kills."

The first weeks of the new year have passed away, bringing with them golden treasures of life and love. With the old year all the shadows have gone—and all its sorrows.

It is a pleasant group that is gathered in Farmer Matthews's cosy sitting-room in the bright glow of the red firelight. Alice, sitting in her mother's lap, laughs gleefully at the bright pictures grandpa is showing her in the Mother Goose book, repeating after him the jingling rhymes that seem to take her fancy. He laughs, too, as she lisps them in her quaint, baby fashion; and Nora, laying her white hand upon the golden head, looks up with a smile into the pale, handsome face above her. Wife and mother, she looks from one to the other of her treasures, with a glad, satisfied love.

And Grandma Matthews, pausing in her knitting to look upon the happy group, wipes away the moisture from her eyes, saying softly to herself: "And a little child shall lead them."

The Old Man.

(Written by the Old Woman.)

Here comes the old man. Several are to be found in every neighborhood. He says to the friendly dog, "git out," and to the little girl just seated by the fire, "you're warm enough," and throws himself into the big chair as though he'd force it and everything else to wait on him because he's got a good home and plenty, for the family he's raised up, by wearing old clothes and going without pleasures. His family, forsooth! He raised up children because they'd work for him by and by, and when he laid down he slept soundly, or took the bed farthest off when they were sick, and mother, with God-given love watched, doctored and prayed. He couldn't bother with playthings, so mother or the hired man fixed up some. Gruffly he gave Christmas change. "He didn't have Christmas goodies when he was a boy. If he got to Fourth of July, that was all the fol de rol he expected." And oh, what a good boy he was! How he worked! His pa'd licked his skin off if he'd a fooled around as boys do now.

Then what a nice young man he was. Nothing mean about him, though he struck out for California because he laid up nothing at home; ate hard tack and bacon and jawed his way through, getting here before God Almighty, as he thought, and would bend his will to nobody, would have fences or ditches where they ought to be, or have a row and quit his neighbors. He could do without 'em. So he only goes to a neighbor's house when there's a funeral. "Man and beast ought to rest on the Sabbath;" so he don't believe in Sunday school or church. As for lectures, "he never got his money's worth." With sinister smile he looks on the party where youth is bright with mingling joys. He wishes "he'd spent his money as he went along and taken the good of it," yet his family have to hurry on their clothes and run him down to get a ride to town and cringingly beg the money that is their right for clothes or comfort. Every dollar is bitter by unwillingness, every piece of clothing without charm because of the gruff donor.

Does Mary, with her spirit rasped at school by wearing the things scripped of the money mother could wrench out of his pocket, come home, she reads the "I s'pose you want some more money" look in his reluctant greeting. Children look askance at him and would just as soon put his tools out of place as not, to hear him go on. He feels that all he has done for his family isn't appreciated; he is lonesome; he doesn't know that he is reaping that which he has sown.

PURIFICATION OF SEWAGE.—Experimental trials of the Andrews-Parker process for deodorizing and purifying the sewage of London have been in operation since last May. The 90,000,000 of gallons daily and nightly flows into subterranean reservoirs located beyond Beckton. By the action of water and repeated pumping before the last station is reached all the fecal matter in the sewage is reduced to a liquid having a grayish-black appearance and an extremely offensive odor. The sewage, after having been drawn into a tank, is subjected to a powerful stream of water, under heavy pressure, charged with ground clay, caustic soda, hydrochloric acid and sulphate of iron. The mixture is then turned into large tanks, where it is allowed to remain until the action of the precipitates has thrown all the sediment to the bottom, when the liquid is drawn off into the Thames, it being a pure, colorless and odorless water. The sediment is kiln dried and pulverized, and makes a fertilizer which chemical analysis has shown to contain a large proportion of ammonia and phosphates, and to be of much commercial value.

WHERE THE GOLD GOES.—A writer of mathematical bent finds from the census returns that there are about 17,000 dentists in the United States, who, he estimates, pack into the teeth of the American people a ton of pure gold annually. Continuing his speculations, he predicts that in the twenty-first century all the gold in the country will be buried in the graveyards.

The Death of the Year.

A cloud came out of the golden west;
A bell rang over the silent air;
The sun-god hurried away to rest,
Flushing with kisses each cloud he prest,
And oh, but the day was fair!

"How brightly the year goes out," they said;
"The glow of the sunset lingers long,
Knowing the year will be over and dead;
Its sad hours over—its sweet hours fled,
With service of even-song."

"How sadly the year came in," they said.
I listened and wondered in dusk of night;
To me no year that might come instead
Of the old friend numbered among the dead
Could ever be half so bright.

The sun-kissed clouds grew pale and gray;
The bells hung silent in high mid-air,
Waiting to ring the year away
In strains that were ever too glad and gay
For me as I listened there.

Oh, hearts that beat in a million breasts,
Oh, lips that utter the same old phrase,
I wonder that never a sorrow rests
In words you utter to friends and guests
In the new year's strange new days!

Is it just the same as it used to be?
Have new years only a gladder sound?
For ever and always it seems to me
That no new face can be sweet to see
As the old ones we have found.

There is no cloud in the darkened west;
The bell is silent in misty air;
The year has gone to its last long rest,
And I, who loved and who knew it best,
Shall meet it—God knows where!

Eilgut!

Our artist has given us a thought of the New Year as a vigorous and promising babe sent to this realm of mortals in a basket—the 1884th offspring of the ages which has been given to men since the Christian era began. It comes with a card bearing the legend eilgut! which our German friends will understand but which it is hard to render into English by a single word. The term is used to signify that the precious shipment was made with the injunction to use the utmost speed in transportation—that the New Year has come upon us, as it were, by "lightning express." The idea will no doubt reflect the thought of most of us with regard to the flight of time and the arrival of another of the periods into which time is divided by the completion of the earth's course around the sun. Short indeed it seems since we first wrote 1883; and yet we shall soon write it no more. The year's work is done; its successes and its failures are numbered; its opportunities have passed from us, whether we have improved or rejected them. And now comes a New Year, with all its delights and its disappointments, its blessings and benefits and its trials. What measure of each shall come to each, none can tell; but of this we are sure—it comes and it will go—eilgut! The injunction then to all is carpe diem! Let no spirit of procrastination prevail. What each has to do in the way of advancing the world's work, of building up individual prosperity, of self-improvement, or of making the world better for our having lived in it—should be done quickly. Not unseemly haste, which means unreadiness or irresolution, should prevail, but rather that which the judgment and the conscience approve as fit to be done, should be undertaken at once. "Work while the day lasts, for the night cometh where-in no man can work."

This evidently is the lesson which our illustration suggests, and which must occur to every one who turns a thought upon the flight of time. As Shakespeare has it:

Let's take the instant, by the forward top;
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
The inaudible and noiseless foot of time
Steals, ere we can effect them.

It is common to represent the New Year as an infant, and the Old Year as a decrepit old man. It is natural that the fleeting movements should be measured by the universal and impressive experience of the race in the swiftness with which individual life passes. There is no escape from the conclusion of Young:

While man is growing, life is in decrease,
And cradles rock us nearer to the tomb.
Our birth is nothing but our death begun.

And yet the thought is not given to men to depress or dishearten them. Our New Years come as strong and happy babes, full of possibilities and opportunities, if we will seize and improve them. The Great Change is not held before us to unman or unnerve us, but rather as a constant admonition to live as those who have an aim and a purpose, for "it is not all of life to live nor all of death to die." Let all then arise anew with the new-born year.

Live not for selfish gratification, but for humanity, for God. Speed forward every noble work; strive for an honorable prosperity, for prosperity is a general blessing. Let the heart be warm for all and the tongue gentle and kind. Let not grinding and grasping self-interest blind the eye to the welfare and happiness of others, but rather let petty ambitions melt away in the glow of brotherly love and philanthropy. To those who thus live and work the New Year will be welcome as a priceless boon of time for renewed effort. To them the year will come decked with flowers as symbols of the fragrance and beauty of their lives. It will be a bright and happy period, and they will look forward to it with anticipation and not regret.

THINGS TO TREASURE. — Accumulations of knowledge and experience of the most valuable kind are the result of little bits of knowledge and experience carefully treasured up. Those who learn nothing or accumulate nothing in life are set down as failures, because they have neglected little things. They may themselves

What an Educated Man Ought to Know.

Ruskin says an educated man ought to know these things: First, where he is—that is to say, what sort of a world has he got into; how large it is, what kind of creatures live in it, and how; what it is made of, and what may be made of it. Secondly, where he is going—that is to say, what chances or reports there are of any other world besides this; what seems to be the nature of that other world. Thirdly, what he had best do under the circumstances—that is to say, what kind of faculties he possesses; what are the present state and wants of mankind; what is his place in society; and what are the readiest means in his power of attaining happiness and diffusing it. The man who knows these things, and who has his will so subdued in the learning of them that he is ready to do what he knows he ought, is an educated man; and the man who knows them not is uneducated, though he could talk all the tongues of Babel.

Apropos to the above, Henry Ward Beecher, in a recent sermon, made the following remarks, which have the "right kind of ring" to them: Some men think that because they have had no tumultuous experience that they are not con-

The New Year.

[Written by MARY RIDDELL CORLEY.]

What does the New Year bring?
Fair-faced spring, with her sunny smile,
Summer birds, for a little while;
Then with the autumn breeze,
Giant trees with their branches bare,
Winter cold with his hoary hair.
But it bringeth more than these.

What does the spring-tide bring?
Velvet robes for the barren hills,
Golden lights on the rippling rills;
While soft on the branching trees
Tender, feathery leaves unfold,
Snowdrops spring in the garden mold.
But it bringeth more than these.

What does the summer bring?
Happy fields with their waving corn,
Poppies red, in the sunlight born;
Wooded by the buzzing bees,
Brilliant flowers of myriad hues
Kissed by the sun and fed on dews.
But it bringeth more than these.

What does the autumn bring?
Yellow heads of the ripened grain
Wailing winds with a sad refrain Sweeping the lonesome leas;
Down in the stubble the rabbits stir,
The partridge rises with sudden whir.
But it bringeth more than these.

What does the winter bring?
Berries red on the holly spray,
Gems of ice in the clear, cold day
That gleam on the tall fir trees;
Over the world with its leaden skies
Dainty snow like a blessing lies.
But it bringeth more than these.

And this is what they bring!
Time to sow in the fair spring hours,
To work and watch 'mid summer showers.
'Mid autumn winds and sun;
Time to gather the harvest in,
Ere ever the cold, dark days begin
When the long, long year is done.

Time for the busy hands to rest,
For cosy seats in the dear home nest
With blazing logs piled high;
Happy hearts for the Christmas cheer,
And no regret for the parting year
As you bid its hours good-by.

The Nails.

The nails are structures which are very nearly like the epidermis and the hair, composed of a hard, horny matter arranged in the form of cells. They are, indeed, only altered portions of the external or epidermal layer of the skin, and rest upon their nail beds in much the same manner as the epidermis or scarf-skin lies on the true skin or derma. We speak of the root and the body of the nail—the root being that portion towards the hand which is situated beneath the skin, the body all the rest of the nail. The matrix is the bed upon which the nail rests and to which it is firmly adherent. Nails grow from the root, just as do the hairs, and only slide over their matrix or bed, so that an injury to the matrix, such as slivers beneath the nail, or run-arounds, or even a bad bruise, need not cause a disfigured nail other than of the portion directly injured; whereas, injury or disease of its root will generally cause a distorted and disfigured nail. I have seen a bruise at the root, and in one instance the sting of a bee over the root of the nail, followed by an irregularly formed nail, which lasted for a long time. Thus, also, eczema attacking the hand, may affect the ends of the fingers, or even the sides at the ends, and the nails remain perfect; but when it is located on the backs of the fingers, and involves the roots of the nails, the latter rarely if ever escape distortion and mal-growth.

Nails seldom fail to give indication of sickness which has been at all severe, by an arrest of development which has taken place in the root at the period of sickness. Some studies have been made in this direction which may not prove uninteresting or without value in the present condition, which we will quote from Mr. Wilson. A French physician, Dr. Beau, has observed that the nail of the feet are four times slower in their growth than those of the hands. The latter increase in length one-thirtieth of an inch in one week, while the nails of the toes require four weeks for the same amount of increase. According to him, the length of the thumb-nail including the root which is hidden from sight, is eight lines—that is, twenty millimeters; consequently, the period occupied in the growth of that nail would be twenty weeks, or five months. In like manner, the nail of the great toe, measuring in length nine lines and a half, or twenty-four millimeters, and requiring four times the period of the thumb-nail, would consume ninety-six weeks, or nearly two years in its growth.—Manufacturer and Builder.

THE MISSISSIPPI JETTIES.—The establishment of deep water through the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi River is now bearing fruit in the character of the shipping going to New Orleans. Before the completion of the improvements for opening the mouth of the river, that city could be reached from the sea only by vessels drawing 18 or 19 feet at the utmost, but now the largest vessels can get in without the slightest difficulty.

1884—THE LATEST OFFSPRING OF THE AGES.

consider that the world has gone against them; but, in fact, they have been their own enemies. There has long been a popular belief in good luck, but, like many other notions, it is gradually giving way. The conviction is extending that diligence is the mother of good luck; in other words, that a man's success in life will be proportionate to his efforts, to his industry, to his attention to small things. Your negligent, shiftless, loose fellow never meets with luck, because the results of industry are denied to those who will not make the proper effort to secure them.

CUTTING OFF THE HEAD NOT KILLING.—S. R. Canestrini has been experimenting on the effects of decapitation of insects. Butterflies were able to use their wings eighteen days after they had lost their heads. Crickets leaped on the thirteenth day after they had been beheaded, and the preying mantilla showed signs of life on the fourteenth day after the head had been separated from the body. He gives still more singular observations tending to show that the head in insects cannot be subject to the same perpetual strain as the head in mammals in guiding the motions of the body.

verted. That is not the case. Where a man says to himself, "Here, I am not satisfied with my present mode of life, and I am going to change it," he is convicted. A sudden change from absolute darkness to absolute light is not necessary. All education is gradual, unfolding. A man who gets up in meeting and relates a most startling experience that he has had of sudden and complete change is not necessarily to be set down as a liar, but neither is he to be taken as a leader. I heard a man say once: "I smoked and chewed and snuffed at a terrible rate, but when I found the grace of God from that instant I never had the slightest desire for tobacco." Well, setting aside the theory that he lied—which may be uncharitable—I will say that out of forty millions of men he is the only one that could say that, and if the forty millions of men waited until they got rid of their lusts in that way they would forever wallow in them. I do not want you to imagine that here is a gospel churn into which you are to be poured and come out butter. What I want to know is, are you discontented with the way in which you are living, and do you want to change? To join the church for business reasons is mean; to join the church for fear you will otherwise be damned is meaner yet. To try to indulge in everything that is low and vile in this life, and then to top off the loaf with God's sugar of mercy, is very mean.

OUR CITY LODGES.

Valley, No. 30.

Wednesday night, Dec. 26th, was one of the memorable nights of Valley, No. 30. There was a large attendance, and the "assessment line" extended into the ante room in the first part of the evening. A spirited contest for some of the offices added interest to the occasion, after which the J. W. Degree was conferred on four and the M. W. Degree on thirteen candidates. Owing to suspensions, their term was closed with four short of their aspired-for number—996 members in good standing and several applications before the Lodge. An order was drawn on the General Fund in favor of the Beneficiary Fund to pay assessment No. 17, and the monetary transactions in dues and assessments collected with drafts on the General and Beneficiary Fund amounted to over $1,800.50. Valley, No. 30, has a very efficient corps of officers, and it is but a just tribute to their M. W., C. O. Burton, to say that as such he has proved himself worthy of the exalted and responsible position he has filled during the present term.

Magnolia, No. 41.

The officers of Magnolia Lodge, No. 41, were duly installed Monday evening by Deputy Grand Master Danforth. The following were elected Representatives to the Grand Lodge: H. Stern, J. Hoesch, C. Brind, I. Choyinski and M. Marshauer.

Excelsior, No. 126.

Brother Sam Booth, P. M. W. and Librarian of Excelsior, No. 126, is preparing an entertainment, the proceeds of which are to go towards furnishing the Library of their new hall. A host of talented ladies and gentlemen, headed by P. G. M. W., Brother Wm. H. Barnes, have volunteered their services for the occasion. The indefatigable and efficient services of Brother Booth for the good of the Order, and especially for the welfare and prosperity of his own Lodge, not to mention the excellent programme he has prepared or the worthy object which it is to benefit, entitle him to a bumper. Let him have it brethren. The entertainment will take place on Friday evening, January 18, 1884, in Mission Music Hall, corner 21st and Howard streets. Tickets, which are worth 50 cents, may be procured from any of the Lodge officers or at the door.

Bay View, No. 159.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Our Lodge is in a prosperous condition, there being 76 members. We will have sick benefits, with dues of $1.00 instead of 50 cents, to commence Jan. 1, 1884. The payment of sick benefits will be $8.00 per week. The prospects of rapid increase of membership in our Lodge in the future is almost certain.

Yours in C., H. and P.,

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Alameda, No. 5.

The new officers of Alameda, No. 5, were installed Wednesday evening, the 2d inst., Brothers F. Marcuse acting as G. M. W., C. H. Haile, Grand Receiver, acting as P. G. M. W., and the WATCHMAN representative acting as Grand Guide. After the installation ceremonies, remarks were made under "Good of the Order" by Brothers Morris, the new M. W., Hitchcock, Haile, Peterson, Falconer, Marcuse, Ohea, Seymour and others. No. 5 starts in the present term promptly and in good business form, and has brighter prospects ahead than for some time past.

Christmas Festival of Occidental, No. 6.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On Wednesday evening, December 26th, Occidental Lodge, No. 6, gave a novel entertainment in Hansen's Hall, West Oakland, said entertainment being a Christmas festival to the families of our members. The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreens, and three large Christmas trees adorned the platform, while in the background were numberless boxes and parcels which the tasteful decorations of the ladies could not conceal from the prying eyes of the children. On this occasion we had the honor of a visit from the world renowned Santa Claus. The hall was filled by the members of the Lodge and their families. Upwards of 400 children being present, ranging in ages from 12 days to 17 years of age, and for each of those children Santa Claus had some of the usual presents common at this glad season of the year. The usual order of procedure was reversed in this case as it was the children entertaining the parents. Master Harry Moulton, son of our Master Workman, was called upon to preside, and the following excellent programme was carried out in very good style, considering the tender years of some of the children who took part in it, and was heartily appreciated by all present: Miss Grace Cruise, recitation; Miss May Nolan, recitation; Master Bernard Morchand, recitation; Miss and Masters Drake, piano trio; Miss W. Cushing, recitation; Miss Sadie Blakie, piano solo; Master Willie Frost, recitation; Miss Mabel Martin, song; Master Wharton and Miss Mamie Slater, Scotch duet, accompanied by Mrs. Slater on the guitar; Miss Gracie Moulton, recitation. At the conclusion of this part of the programme, the principal business of the evening was begun, viz: the distribution of the presents by Santa Claus to the children. A few minutes of anxious suspense to the little ones, during which time many a bright little pair of eyes were turned to the platform, roof, floor, doors, windows, and every conceivable place where Santa Claus could be supposed to enter. The suspense of the little ones was amusing to witness, but it was of short duration, for with a shout and a bound through an open window Santa Claus, dressed to perfection, stood in their midst. The arrangements of the Committee were perfect and as the name of each child was called they were either carried or stepped forward and received the presents from the hands of old Santa Claus himself. At the close of this part of the programme a liberal supply of refreshments was provided for the children, and the whole concluded with a social dance. Taken altogether it was a most thorough success, and Occidental Lodge has good reason to congratulate herself upon such a happy termination to a prosperous year. And the mothers and the children will long remember with delight Occidental's Christmas festival. Wishing you and your many readers a Happy New Year and our noble Order increased prosperity, I am fraternally yours in C. H. and P.,

Occidental, No. 6.

West Oakland, Dec. 31, 1883.

At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies of this Lodge, which were conducted by District Deputy Schutz, Past Master J. T. Carothers, in behalf of the Lodge, in fitting words presented the retiring M. W., D. S. Moulton, with an elegant Past Master's badge.

Berkeley, No. 10.

From Prof. C. F. Gompertz, Trustee of this Lodge, recently returned from Mexico, we learn that old No. 10 is doing well from a business point of view, and well from other standpoints, considering her scattered membership, which now numbers about 20.

Vesper, No. 62.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Enclosed I send you list of officers duly installed by D. D. G. M., Israel Horton, assisted by Bro. C. E. Merwin, of Industry, No. 63, as P. M. W., and Brother Dr. J. R. Reily, of Vesper, No. 62, as Grand Guide. By previous arrangement the business was hastily passed, and doors thrown open to visitors at 8 o'clock. Quite an audience, considering the evening (which was cloudy and a drizzling rain falling), were present to witness the first public installation of A. O. U. W. officers in Livermore. After the officers were installed, Brother Merwin, of Industry, No. 63, being called on, delivered a very earnest and enthusiastic address, bearing especially on the fraternal feature of the Order, which was well received. He was followed by short remarks by several members, and closing with remarks by District Deputy Horton, who always entertains by speaking to the point and giving good counsel. We now number 102, and are not increasing fast at present, this being a large membership for a town of the population of Livermore, when we consider the number of kindred associations having Lodges here. Vesper, No. 62, enters upon another year in good shape, with sails trimmed and set for a prosperous voyage. May she and all other Lodges of A. O. U. W. ever glide on, riding the storm-tossed billows of time as they sail over its troubled seas, scattering their rich blessings of charity as they are signaled by the needy and distressed, is the wish and prayer of

Yours fraternally,

Keystone, No. 64.

Last Tuesday evening the public installation of the newly elected officers of Keystone, No. 64, took place in their spacious hall in Medical College, on Clay street, Oakland. The hall was well filled with the wives, families and friends of Workmen. Among the noteworthy visitors were Supreme Master Workman Fish, and Grand Recorder Pratt. The installation ceremonies were under the charge of District Deputy Charles Alden, and it consequently goes without saying that they were conducted in the most impressive and letter-perfect form. Brother Alden was assisted by Brother Gay, P. G. M. W., and Brother Schade, as G. G. A good orchestra was in attendance and discoursed sweet strains both before and after the installation. A trio of male voices chanted appropriate music during the conducting of the officers to their respective seats. After the installation interesting remarks were made by Supreme Master Workman Fish, Grand Recorder Pratt, Brother Cluff, of Keystone, Past Master Sterret and Donaldson, of Oak Leaf, No. 35, and others, after which the company formed the grand march and adjourned to the lower hall, where a magnificent collation was spread and discussed with great satisfaction. At its close, remarks were made by Past Master Eggleston, of Yerba Buena, the WATCHMAN representative, Brothers Gay, C. J. Nelson, Geo. H. Carlock, Geo. A. Schade and others, Brother Alden doing the honors as Master of Ceremonies. After the supper the company retired to the Lodge room where dancing was indulged in for several hours. Much credit is due to Keystone for this entertainment which it spared no pains or expense to make a success, and especial credit is due to Brothers Alden, Menges and Gay, the hard-working committee, who made this one of the pleasantest affairs in the Lodge history of Oakland.

Brother G. H. Dunlap, Recorder of this Lodge, writes as follows: "Ione Valley Lodge has decided to have a public installation on the 9th of January, and conclude with a big eat. All traveling brothers who may be passing this way are cordially invited to attend."

Golden Star, No. 144.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—You will see by report from our Lodge that the number of our members is gradually diminishing, and lest the opinion be formed that the same is from lack of interest and earnestness on the part of members I will state the cause of decline. There has been a great decline in business here during the past two years, owing to the scarcity of water, and there are but few mines that are paying. The consequence is many of our young men are compelled to go away in search of employment, hence our diminished numbers.

Yours fraternally,

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—San Fernando Lodge, No. 214, has always considered the old adage a good one and has been following it closely—i. e., "Make haste slowly." We are in a sparsely settled valley, some of the brothers coming 12 miles to attend Lodge, and as evidence that we are fully alive I would state that they always come. From a small beginning we now number 33 Master Workmen, loyal and true. Never has one been delinquent or even had to be notified of assessments, in consequence of which we are proud. Stockton, No. 28.

On January 4th the meeting of this old pioneer was quite interesting. One candidate received the M. W. Degree, after which an enjoyable recess was had, and Brother E. A. Baird, the humorous musician, entertained the brethren in a very unique manner. Votes of thanks were tendered to Brother J. S. Hall, Master Workman, Brother Taylor, Recorder, Brother Weller, Receiver, and Brother Cardien, Financier, for the able and efficient discharge of their duties of office during the past term.

Shady Grove, No. 223.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—This Lodge was instituted Feb. 28, 1883, with 13 charter members. We have now 23 in good standing, and a fair prospect of still increasing our number. Considerable interest is felt by the members to make this Lodge one of the first in the District.

Yours, fraternally, J. H. SKIFF, Rdr.

Farmington, Jan. 1, 1884.

In addition to the above we have the received the following: "This Lodge is situated in one of the wealthiest and most delightful farming sections in the State. Being a rural district, the Lodge's progress has not been very rapid. Its officers were installed last evening for the second full term. Brother Aldrich is Master Workman, and Brother Skiff still wields the pen as Recorder. Peace and harmony prevails, and the membership are as jolly a lot of boys as can well be got together. If some of our strong Lodges would use the means expended by them in spreading splendid repasts to entertain grand officials, to pay their expenses to visit weaker Lodges, it would be for "the good of the Order," and might aid materially in raising these Lodges out of a rut. #### MENDOCINO COUNTY.

Mendocino, No. 70.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—I have been thinking for some time past of writing you a few items about Mendocino, No. 70, and as the officers for the ensuing term have been installed, I think now is a fitting opportunity. I have been a constant reader of your valuable paper these past three years, and have found in it many items of enlightenment and profit. Our Lodge is in a healthy condition, there being 60 members in good standing. We have initiated four this term; one dropped out and one removed to another Lodge. Our growth is not rapid now, but we get good members in. Wednesday evening, Jan. 2d, we had a public installation of officers, which fact had been previously announced to the public. Before the usual time for opening Lodge had arrived, all the available seats in the Lodge room were filled with the wives and families of the members and their invited guests. The meeting was called to order by Brother George H. Bowman, P. M. W. The opening ode was sung, in which the assembly joined, after which Brother A. O. Carpenter, D. D. G. M. W., proceeded to install the officers elect, assisted by Brother B. A. Paddleford, as G. G.; and J. L. Drum, as P. G. M. W. The ceremonies were performed with dignity, correctness and dispatch, after which the closing ode was sung, and the company proceeded to the lower hall, where a sumptuous collation awaited them. This spoke highly in favor of the wives of Mendocino Workmen as splendid cooks, as the good things under which the tables seemed to groan were the works of their hands. It was also a good recommendation for Brothers Flannagan, Gregory and King, as being good men on the Committee of Arrangements, and well worthy of a future appointment on account of the artistic manner in which they had the tables set and the room decorated. After the company had tasted and tested to their utter satisfaction the viands set before them, the committee announced that all those who wished to dance could return to the hall prepared for that purpose, which invitation a majority of the company accepted, and enjoyed themselves until the "wee sma' hours" came creeping on, when the party broke up and all went home well pleased with the entertainment.

A Piano for the Sacramento Lodges.

DEAR WATCHMAN:—Some time in September last a paragraph in the WATCHMAN announced that the Lodges of the A. O. U. W., of this city, jointly, with the Degree of Honor Lodge, were canvassing for funds sufficient to purchase a first class Steinway or Chickering piano. Although the membership of the three Lodges now aggregates nearly six hundred, including the Lily of the Valley, it was no easy undertaking to raise several hundred dollars for this purpose. But the three committees of the Lodges were earnest workers, and would listen to no such word as "fail." The first was to ascertain what Union and Sacramento Lodges would do in the way of subscription. They each subscribed fifteen dollars, and with this encouragement the committees went forth to secure the balance by private subscription. Their success is told when I say that last week the committee placed in the hall of the Lodges an elegant, grand, square Chickering piano, the first cost of which was $600, and the debt remaining to be paid is less than $100. We have had two Lodge meetings since, and on both occasions the piano was used and gave general satisfaction. All our Lodges are in a prosperous condition, and moving along harmoniously. Very few of the nominees have any opposition. After the elections are over I will send you the result.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—The officers of Turlock Lodge, No. 182, were duly installed last Friday night, January 4th. We also had on that occasion two candidates for the M. W. Degree. Our Lodge meetings are well attended, and at times are quite animated. No. 182 gave a ball on the 29th of October, which, owing to the rain, it was not a financial success; but nevertheless everybody had a good time and danced till morning did appear. Turlock is thinking of preparing a fund for sick and disabled members of this Lodge at a no distant day. Several of the brothers visited Empire, No. 112, at Modesto, during the visit of the G. M. Dunnigan, No. 215.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Our Lodge is in a very prosperous condition. We number 36 members all in good standing. We have been instituted nearly two years, and have lost only one member by death. We have never had a delinquent member on our rolls. When an assessment is read every brother comes up and pays it with a feeling of satisfaction, knowing that it goes to relieve the hearts of some disconsolate widows and orphan children. While we do not possess the members that many of our sister Lodges do, we boast that we have the quality not excelled in the State. Our officers were publicly installed on Thursday evening, January 3d, by P. M. W., L. M. Clark, assisted by Brother D. W. Kanode as Grand Guide, and J. Cunningham as G. P. M. W. The exercises were conducted in a creditable manner, and were appreciated by a large audience. After the installation, speeches being the order, Brother Buckley, M. W. elect, made a very interesting inaugural address, followed by Brothers Kanode, Hughes, and others. Mr. J. N. Nason, one of our oldest and highly respected citizens, being called upon, paid a high tribute to our noble Order. He believed it to be one of the grandest benevolent Orders in the world, and recommended it to every young man and every man of family who was eligible to join and prepare something for those they may leave behind when they have passed away. He only regretted that his age, being nearly three score years and ten, prevented him from being one with us. His remarks were received with great applause. Mr. Nason was followed by Judge Wilkenson, who also paid a high compliment to Dunnigan Lodge and the Order. Mr. Sam Munger, also not a member, made a very interesting speech in praise of the A. O. U. W. After the exercises closed all who wished partook of a fine supper prepared by Brother L. O. Baker at the hotel. I should have mentioned at the commencement of this letter that the sisters of Star of Hope, Degree of Honor, furnished the music for the occasion. The affair passed off in a satisfactory manner, and we hope will have its good effect for the Order in the future. Fraternally yours, in C. H. and P.,

Play Houses.

(Written by E. E.)

There is nothing so sweet in life as a play house, so we used to think in the dear old happy times when we made them, and so I think now sometimes when memory carries my heart back to the fields and forests and towns and homes of my childhood.

Girls have a happy time in California because they can play out doors all the year except the three rainy months in winter, and even then on bright sunny days. In summer play houses are never rained on, and we were wont to make them of anything we could tack or fasten up in any way, old shawls, pieces of carpets, branches of trees and any such conveniences.

As for locations, our matronly hearts were not fastidious, and we could be happy in any spot that already afforded two sides, such as a fence corner, the angle made by two large boxes, or the place where two walls of a building made an L.

But the best play houses of all we made up around the placer mining towns and among the sluice boxes, and tunnels, and rocks of the worked out claims.

Here are miles of uneven bedrock washed clean of dirt, and sod, and gravel, picturesquely furnished with boulders, rocks of every size, and high clumps of the original ground left standing around, like monuments testifying to the departed verdure and beauty.

They were of all heights, from three to nine feet, and varied in width on top from two to four feet square.

The sides of these clumps were nearly or quite perpendicular, and to establish a doll's domicile on one of these unstable places was the crowning feat of our youthful folly and fun. And O, the bruised elbows and torn dresses that bore witness to our adventurous spirits! If a bush or stunted tree grew on one of these high tablelands it became the object of our highest ambitions. A few dried manzanita berries, gathered from a practically inaccessible spot, gave us unlimited enjoyment.

A collection of rocks high enough to cast a shadow was a choice spot for an afternoon's play, and made a satisfactory play-house. We carried small rocks and arranged suites of rooms convenient for all our needs.

Nooks and crannies in the rocks made most acceptable tables and cupboards. Here we established our dolls and tea-sets and burdened our happy young hearts with domestic duties. The rocky seats and couches were soft and comfortable to our round limbs; but happy the red cheeked doll that escaped with sound members on these Saturday romps. We filled our pockets with white quartz rocks, then filled them to overflowing with tinted ones, and finally emptied them all out that we might be innocent of any reason or cause for those great rents in the gather at the band.

Only when the long shadows warned us that our mothers were anxiously calling us, would we leave our rocky palaces and stony paths behind to the wind and the dew, but which neither boys, nor wild animals, nor rain, nor snow could destroy. Sometimes we would begin our afternoon's sport by making a play-house at the mouth of some deserted tunnel. Here our house would be all cellar.

Leaving the domestic arrangements to the timorous ones, we were wont to test our courage by venturing into the dark, mysterious depths of the tunnel. We were Amazons in pinafores, giving battle to shadows and fallen timbers and imaginary hosts that were supposed to have their headquarters in the blackness of the distant recesses.

The bravest of us were the guardians of the rest, and we were worthy of that distinction if we could run twenty feet into the gray opening, and out again, as fast as our feet could fly. But none of us ever said we were afraid.

The loveliest and most famous play houses I can remember were made in a grove of young pines where the elastic green trees were only from four to nine feet high.

Blessings on the big boys! When they were once enlisted in our interest they could soon make a comfortable house. They simply bent down a few tall trees and tied their tops together.

The smaller ones were cut and woven into roofing and siding. Houses made in this way were shaded from the sun, dry, cool and odorous with the pungent smell of the pine. We swept out the inclosed spaces, spread our rugs, and hung our possessions around on pegs made by cutting off the small limbs. We often had whole colonies of play-houses, and quarreled about who should have the broom as a permanent ornament of the front yard.

Occasionally the boys would play at being husbands. Unhappily, however, the restless spirits of our protectors prompted them to commit such depredations on each other's domain, that our colonization frequently ended in a civil war; after which we would desert our shady homes, till some bright day when we had forgotten all about the last difficulty.

O, those dear, evergreen play-houses, and the memories of them! Those trees must make a forest now, and they know our footsteps no more.

The mines there are extinct, and the town is nearly deserted. The tallest boy who bent the strongest tree died in a drunken brawl. One is a rising lawyer. Hal—fun-loving, mischievous, whistling Hal—died by his own hand. One went to sea, and they are all scattered, I know not where.

And we girls scattered, too. Dell, the best singer and reader, the leader in all our adventures, is in the insane asylum; Lally eloped; Milly parted husband and wife; rosy-cheeked Lulu is an invalid, and some of us have tall, bearded, hard-working husbands, and genuine houses with real live babies in them.

Slow Digestion and Acid Dyspepsia.

This, the simple and most common form of the malady, is sometimes called simple dyspepsia. It is more common in men than in women, and especially affects sedentary persons, and those nervous individuals who eat rapidly, swallowing their food without proper mastication. It is also common in persons whose teeth are defective. Its immediate cause is deficient activity of the muscular walls of the stomach and intestines, and also deficient quantity or quality of gastric juice. The symptoms are much the same as those which follow the taking of an excess of food, but are felt when only a moderate amount has been taken. An hour or two after eating a sensation of weight and oppression is felt. The discomfort continues for some hours, gradually wearing off before the next meal. The appetite is usually pretty good, but often will not be prepared for the reception of food at meal time, as the work of digesting the previous meal has not yet been accomplished. Sometimes there is considerable flatulence of the stomach, the eructations being tasteless, however, never offensive; often pain between the shoulders or beneath one shoulder-blade, and not infrequently in the region of the heart. Palpitation of the heart often occurs in the night, causing great alarm on the part of the patient and his friends, who entertain fears of sudden death. Sleep is disturbed and unrefreshing. The tongue is often foul in the morning, with a bad taste in the mouth. All the symptoms mentioned are greatly exaggerated by a late supper, or by an unusual excess in quantity or quality of food. The bowels are usually constipated, but may be regular. When the difficulty has been long continued, there will be observed a marked disposition to sleep after meals, or unnatural sleepiness at other times, and a decided loss of natural vivacity and energy.

Acid dyspepsia is that form of indigestion in which the slowness of digestion is such that the food undergoes fermentation, forming acids which irritate the stomach and give rise to the same symptoms, much exaggerated, which have been mentioned as attending slowness of digestion with several others, the principal of which are heart-burn, regurgitation of intensely sour liquid from the stomach, acid eructations, a white tongue, frequently with transverse fissures, often flabby and indented at the edges, acid saliva, causing decay of the teeth, bowels likely to be either constipated or unnaturally loose, grinding of the teeth at night, and a reddish sediment in the urine. No one patient presents all these symptoms, but more or less of them. There is quite likely also to be pain at the pit of the stomach, with soreness on pressure.

On account of the extreme slowness of digestion, farinaceous foods always aggravate this form of dyspepsia. Starchy food, sugar, fruits, and especially vegetables of all kinds, cause great increase of acidity and heart-burn. In some cases, even bread and all sorts of preparations from grains will disagree. Sugar, or any food containing it, will give rise to great distress. A meal consisting of animal food almost entirely, may be digested without difficulty, though milk frequently sours.

The digestion being very slow, portions of fermenting food remain in the stomach from one meal to another, so that acidity becomes habitual.

Patients suffering with this form of dyspepsia are usually very thin, and bloodless. Occasionally, however, we meet a case of the opposite kind, in which there is an abundance of tissue, though of a loose, flabby texture. Women suffer from acidity more than men.—Herold of Health.

CURING CHOLERA.—Our consul at Port Lewis,

Mauritius, communicates to the Secretary of State of the United States the fact that Mr. T. Edward Fyers, although not a physician, has been very successful in the treatment of cholera. It is reported that he lost but one patient out of 150 who were attacked by the disease. Here is the remedy he prescribed: "On the first appearance of an attack there must be administered an emetic of thirty grains of ipecacuanha and two grains of tartar emetic. After the emetic has acted, copious draughts of warm water must be taken upon the stomach. In case either vomiting or purging continues, the usual doses of diluted sulphuric acid are sure to stop it." Mr. Fyers may be right, and if he is, he has made a discovery that will, so to speak, put a curb in the mouth of that terrible contagion which "stalks in darkness through the land." Only one death out of 150 attacked with cholera is certainly something astounding in the history of the disease.

A PEOPLE WITHOUT CONSUMPTION.—A paper was read recently before the Tennessee Medical Society with the title, "A People Without Consumption, and Some Account of their Country." The country in question is the Cumberland plateau. The writer, Dr. Wright, has practiced in the region throughout a generation, and in his assertion of fact touching the entire absence of consumption, he is supported by the testimony of about twenty other physicians of standing.—Medical and Surgical Reporter.

Household Hints.

RICE MOLD.—Wash a breakfast-cupful of rice, drain it and put into a saucepan with a bay leaf, a tiny bit of cinnamon, a small piece of rind of lemon cut very thin and free of white, and two teaspoonfuls of white pounded sugar. Pour over this a cupful of cold water, and set it on to boil. When it boils draw it to the side of the fire and add another cupful or two of water as required until the rice is quite swollen and perfectly well done. The water can only be added gradually for fear of its becoming sloppy; after adding the second supply of water the rice must simmer gently, and when done every drop of water must be absorbed. Care must be taken, by stirring it with a wooden spoon, that it does not burn to the saucepan. When cooked thoroughly take out the bay leaf and other flavorings, and beat it well for two or three minutes. Dip an earthenware mold into cold water and press the rice into it, to remain there until quite cold. It will then turn out easily, and may be eaten with jam or any cold stewed fruit served round it in the dish.

OAT CAKES.—In making oat cakes it is best only to mix sufficient oatmeal and water for making them one at a time, as the paste so quickly dries. Moisten a couple of tablespoonfuls of oatmeal, in which has been mixed a pinch of salt, with a little cold water, to the consistency of dough, knead it a little, and roll it out as thin as possible on a pasteboard, sprinkling meal plentifully above and below it. At once remove it with slice to the bakestone, which should be already heated, and over a clear fire bake it on both sides, turning it with a slice carefully to prevent it from cracking. When first done they are quite soft, but as each is baked it should be removed to a dish standing in front of the fire, where it will quickly become hard and crisp.

TOMATO SOUP WITH RICE.—Cut half a small onion into rather coarse slices, and fry them in a little hot butter in a saucepan. Add to them then a quart can or ten or eleven large tomatoes cut in pieces, after having skinned them, and also two sprigs of parsley. Pass the tomato through a sieve. Put into the stewpan butter the size of a pigeon's egg, and when it bubbles sprinkle in it a teaspoonful of flour; when it has cooked a minute, stir in the tomato pulp; season with pepper and salt. It is an improvement to add a cupful or more of stock; however, if it is not at hand it may be omitted. Return the soup to the fire.

LIVER SAUCE.—Take the livers of any kind of poultry, scald them and mince them fine. Melt a piece of butter in a saucepan, add a little flour to it and a small quantity of minced shallots. Let the whole fry for a minute or two, then add gravy thick in sufficient quantity to make a sauce, a small pinch of powdered sweet herbs and pepper, spices and salt to taste. Put in the minced livers and a glass of port wine. Let the sauce boil for twenty minutes, and at the time of serving add a small piece of fresh butter and the juice of half a lemon.

SCALLOPED SQUASH.—If for any reason cooked squash be left over from the family dinner, a nice dish can be made of it the next day in the following manner: To a cupful of cold squash allow a beaten egg and three table-spoonfuls of milk, warmed until a table-spoonful of butter rolled in flour melts on the top, but not until the milk scalds. Mix up well, pepper and salt to taste, and put the mixture into a buttered pie-plate, sift fine crumbs thickly over it, and brown delicately in a brisk oven. Send to table before it falls. It is very nice.

APPLE CAKE.—A pleasant variation on the jelly and cream filling used for double cakes may be made of apples. Beat one egg light in a bowl, and into it a cup of sugar. Add to this the strained juice and grated rind of a lemon. Peel and grate three firm pippins or other ripe, tart apples, directly into this mixture, stirring each in well before adding another. When all are in, put into a farina kettle and stir over the fire until the apple custard is boiling hot and quite thick. Cool and spread between the cakes.

CHEESE SANDWICHES.—Cut thin slices of bread, buttered on the loaf before each is cut, and spread with grated cheese, in which has been worked a little melted butter, a very little made mustard, cayenne pepper and salt to liking. Put two together, buttered sides inward, for each sandwich, if the slices are small; if large, cut in half and fold over upon the mixture. They are very nice.

THE CHEMIST'S AID INVOKED.—A correspondent of the Scientific American asks: "Cannot the chemist, with the aid of non-injurious chemicals, assist us to improve on present methods for the clarification of raw and cold cane-juice, and so that it can be done without the aid of fire heat?" He suggests that the subject is of sufficient importance to our Southern planters to make it an object for them to call for a general consultation of our chemists in regard to the matter."

LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD AT THE DOOR OF HER GRANDMOTHERS' COTTAGE.

Red Riding Hood.

Will not our little ones be delighted with this fine large picture of their favorite heroine, Little Red Riding Hood? Perhaps some of their Christmas books contain the story of her adventures, but we think hardly any of the pictures will be so fine and so life-like as the one the WATCHMAN gives them for a New Years' present. The brave little girl is now at the door of her grandma's cottage, and is expecting soon to enter and delight the dear old lady with the good things in her basket. But she has dangers to brave. The horrid wolf shows his face at the window. But you know, little children, that Red Riding Hood is not harmed, although the naughty wolf plans to injure her. Cheer up, little Riding Hood; you will soon be out of danger, for the woodmen will come and kill your cunning enemy.

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSEMENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

The above was adopted by the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., April 5, 1883.

Favorable to Advertisers.

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

Questions Answered.

This is the way the Michigan Herald comes at us:

The PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN presents a draft of a "model reinstatement law." We desire to ask our esteemed contemporary a question or two which will perhaps pave the way to an intelligent understanding of the question and at the same time serve the purpose of criticism.

Following are the "questions" and our answers seriatim:

Has the present reinstatement law ever raised a doubt as to whether the candidate for readmission or reinstatement should be re-examined or as to who should pay the fees required for such examination?

No, and yes. No to the first, for it is one of the conditions of membership in the first instance. Yes to the last, for some Jurisdictions require the Lodge to pay the Medical Examiner.

Has the present reinstatement law ever raised a doubt as to whether the degrees should or should not be conferred on a candidate for readmission or reinstatement?

We don't know whether it has or not, but the doubt seems quite generally to exist, judging from the frequent inquiries in relation thereto.

Has the present reinstatement law ever raised a doubt as to whether the money paid by the applicant for readmission or reinstatement belonged to the Beneficiary or General Fund?

Yes.

Has the present reinstatement law ever raised a doubt as to the minimum amount below which Grand Lodges may not go in their provisions relative to readmissions or reinstatements?

No doubt as to the minimum amount, but many doubt as to who has and who has not authority to say more than the minimum amount.

Does the "model law" proposed by the WATCHMAN in the portion thereof that is contemporary with the present and the old law provide anything more than a specific requirement to pay an "advance assessment" in addition to the requirements of the present law?

We "grope" but do not "tumble." If the Herald will tell us what he means by "contemporary," we can answer with some degree of confidence. It seems to us, however, that to provide for the payment of an advance assessment is just as necessary in a reinstatement law as in the law regulating original admission, or admission by card. If not why not?

Does not the "model law" omit to require the report of such readmission and reinstatement to be made to the Grand or Supreme Recorder, and might it not be possible that "scarcely two persons would construe it alike," as to the necessity for making such a report.

The "model law" omits to say anything about reporting to Grand or Supreme Recorder the reinstatements, for the reason that all that is provided for in the duties of Recorders. It might be well, however, to repeat the duty in the reinstatement law. It would do no harm at any rate.

If it is essential in order to prevent misunderstanding that the law should be made so plain that no misconception can be placed upon it, why not insert therein all the conditions necessary to reinstatement or readmission as well as a part of them.

If we grasp the full score of the foregoing, we answer, certainly.

Will the WATCHMAN be kind enough to point out briefly the points of superiority in that portion that is contemporary with the present law.

Here we are in trouble again. To even guess what our good brother is driving at, is too much for us. This time it is contemporary instead of contemporary. But com or con, it is all the same to us. We give it up.

We would remind the WATCHMAN that the committee (of which the editor of the Herald was chairman,) was not appointed to revise the law but simply to rearrange it so as to provide that members might be reinstated on the same financial basis as new members, and it was found impossible to revise the verbiage of the old law so as to make it acceptable. And all the opposition in the Supreme Lodge was directed against the financial and not the legal requirements. The WATCHMAN will therefore see that the committee had not the license in construction that is afforded to a proposer of a "model law." And we are of the opinion that had the committee been vain enough to have proposed such a law as the WATCHMAN has constructed that the battle on its passage would have been five or six times as long as it was and it would not have escaped from the fight with one amendment only, but would have been considerably cut up, and it might possibly have been referred to the Committee on Laws and Supervision to perfect.

The Herald will excuse us if we say what he seems to think was a calamity averted, would have been quite differently regarded by us. The law needed more than one amendment, and failing in that had better been referred almost anywhere, rather than passed in the shape it did.

We do most sincerely hope that the Supreme Lodge at its next session will take this thing in hand again and fix it so we shall know just what to do in case a person holding a final card, or one suspended finally for non-payment of assessments or dues, or both, shall apply for reinstatement.

DISTRICT DEPUTIES and other officers throughout the State, who wish sample copies of our paper to distribute among members, can receive them free of charge by applying at this office. All are requested to help make us known more and more and increase our circulation.

THERE is a movement on foot to organize a Degree of Honor Lodge at Merced. We are informed that it will be a success, as the Workmen have the material there for it among both sexes.

Official Changes.

Since the last issue of the WATCHMAN, Deputy Grand Master Chas. E. Wilson, of this city, and Grand Lecturer Henry Vrooman, of Oakland, have respectively tendered their resignations of office, which resignations have been reluctantly accepted by the Grand Master.

In their places have been appointed E. Danforth, heretofore energetic District Deputy of District No. 1, of this city, and E. M. Reading, well known as the efficient Secretary of the Guarantee Fund, as Deputy Grand Master and Grand Lecturer, respectively. The WATCHMAN is glad to see these offices filled by men who are so eminently qualified by experience, energy and talent as are Brothers Danforth and Reading, and we hope and trust that great good may result to the Order from their administration of its affairs.

Society Halls.

During the latter part of November, Mr. M. H. De Young sent a circular letter to the different Lodges, Councils, etc., of the various Orders in this city, accompanied by a diagram of the building about to be erected by him on O'Farrell street. Valley Lodge, No. 30, A. O. U. W., issued a call to the various Lodges of the city, asking them to appoint a committee of three on conference to consider the proposition of Mr. De Young. The committee met on December 8th, in the rooms of the General Relief Committee, 14 of the 18 Lodges meeting down town being present. J. A. Calhoun, P. G. F., of Franklin, No. 44, was selected as temporary Chairman, and James M. Baird, P. M. W. of Unity, No. 27, as temporary Secretary. A motion was then made and carried to make the temporary officers the officers of the permanent organization. A sub-committee of seven was appointed to interview Mr. De Young, and ascertain upon what terms and conditions he would lease the Lodge halls in his proposed building. This committee waited upon Mr. De Young, stated the object of their visit, and Mr. De Young stated he would submit a proposition to them in writing. Subsequently E. F. Loud, P. M. W., Chairman, received a proposition to lease the proposed three front halls for the term of 10 years, at an annual rental of $320, the halls to be thoroughly furnished in the most approved style, and to be kept in order, cleaned daily, etc., but the Order to pay for the gas, which was estimated at about $40 per annum, making a total of $360 annual rental. If the halls were all rented upon the six evenings of the week, the rental would be an average of $20 to each Lodge per month, but usually there is one night in the week—Saturday—which is difficult to find tenants for, so that in all probability the average will be about $25 per month. This the committee took into consideration. The halls mentioned by Mr. De Young in his proposition are to be 27½ x 44 feet, and while they are amply large for the majority of the Lodges, would not accommodate half a dozen of the largest Lodges, and the desire is to have a building with halls suitable for all the Lodges. This was also taken into consideration by the committee, and it was unanimously decided that the proposition of Mr. De Young was not practicable for the Order. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we consider it advisable and tending to the advancement and best interest of the A. O. U. W. in this city, for all the Lodges and the headquarters of the Grand Lodge, to be located in a building of central and convenient location, and fitted up for the sole use of said Lodges.

That the best means of accomplishing this end will be by leasing a building, or by the purchase of a suitable lot, and the erection of a building containing the necessary accommodations.

We therefore recommend that each of the Lodges in this city appoint a delegate for the purpose of forming a hall association, to devise means to either lease a building, or buy a lot and erect a building thereon."

The delegates appointed will meet at Relief Committee rooms, Shields' Building, 32 O'Farrell street, Wednesday evening, Jan. 16, 1884.

The subjoined in regard to a hall building for the Orders is from the real estate article of the Daily Evening Bulletin, of the 21st of December:

Property of Fraternal Societies—Ancient Order of United Workmen Proposing to Build.

The general prosperity and welfare of a community are to a great extent shown by the character of its public buildings, schools and churches, as well as by the appearance of local business houses and residences. In some degree, also, the same facts are shown by the buildings erected and maintained by the fraternal societies in its midst. There is scarcely a town or village of any size in the United States which presents any signs of activity that has not its Masonic Temple, Odd Fellows' Hall and other society buildings. The two societies mentioned, being the oldest established, have, perhaps, more buildings than any others; but in San Francisco, in addition to the buildings owned by these two societies, we have the Druids, the Red Men (Improved and Independent, each with a building of its own), the B'nai B'rith and the Knights of Pythias, the latter having a lease. Besides these, there are also various national societies owning hall property, notably the Cambrian (Welch), two or three German Turner societies and the Irish-American Society.

A general movement is now on foot among the members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in this city, looking toward the securing of hall property of their own. As this society is second or third in point of membership in this city, there seems to be no good reason why it should not own and maintain hall property. The only drawback, perhaps, would be that it is not to a very great extent, so far, a cumulative society. A few of the Lodges pay weekly sick benefits and have from $2,000 to $5,000 in their treasuries, but most of them have used their surplus funds in paying death assessments for members whenever a double levy was made in one month. The total number of assessments levied during the year was only 17 upon the death benefit of $2,000, and one of the Lodges paid $3,000 or $4,000 of its surplus funds from receipts for dues into this beneficiary fund instead of calling the amount in from members. Should the hall project be entered into, this surplus could be turned into hall stock, if deemed desirable. Several, if not all, of the others paid from two to four of the double assessments levied during the year from their general funds. One of the Lodges, Excelsior, No. 126, meeting at the Mission, has, during the past two months, erected a hall of its own on Mission street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth.

There are 23 Lodges of the Order in this city, with an aggregate membership of between 7,000 and 8,000. Of these, 18 meet in the central portion of the city and five in the outlying districts. As the Order embraces within its membership many of our prominent business men, it is thought that much individual stock would be taken. Experience in the Masonic, Odd Fellows, Druids and B'nai B'rith has shown that where the institution is carefully and properly managed, hall stock is a better investment than placing the money in bank. The last named institution is said to have paid during this year 11 per cent in dividends.

THE WATCHMAN points with pride to its full and varied Lodge Local department in this issue. For this we are largely indebted to the courtesy of valued correspondents from the majority of counties in the State. This is what makes a paper like ours especially valuable and interesting, and our sincere thanks are hereby tendered for such favors, both past and prospective. A few of our correspondents have, however, evidently forgotten that one of the first rules of writing manuscript for print is to write on but one side of the paper. Please observe this and save us much trouble. Also in writing proper names either in election returns or elsewhere, take especial care to make them plain. Compositors and proof readers are often blamed for distortion of names, which no-doubt were perfectly clear to the writer, but hardly intelligible to them.

SILVER SPRAY, NO. 3, will have a collation at the installation of their officers on the 14th inst.

A Sparkling Review of his Southern Tour—An Interesting List of Questions for G. L. Representatives to Ponder.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—My promise was that you should have the impressions of my recent trip, and after much delay the promise is redeemed. It may be pertinent to say something of the country.

The San Joaquin Valley

Is destined to be the vineyard of the world. Money and pluck will overcome its dryness. This will be done by planting every fifth or sixth acre in forest, and by damming up the Sierra snows. From these dams, canals will irrigate every foot from Stockton to Sumner. Let Stockton open a deep channel to the bay, and she will wear the crown of the Pacific as a factory center. Nature has been prodigal in her facilities; let man take the treasures.

Los Angeles.

Has become the home of culture and wealth, and a sanitarium. In time she will become a paradise where love may bask in the radiance of softest sunset splendors, and art catch an inspiration tender and sweet from the surrounding grandeur of earth and ocean blended. Here the luscious softness of other skies will be transmitted to the canvas and embodied in marble.

Santa Cruz and Monterey.

Here pleasure will raise her shrine for the devotion of this coast. Hither the millionaire with his tyrannic greed, the trader with his "cinching corner," the lawyer with his "technical case," the lover who "sees a Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt," the parson with his religion born of a fat salary, the politician with his conspiracy for "spoils," the mamma with her marketable daughters, the widow with her inevitable grace and witchery, the clerk with his lordly consequence, the tourist with his gossipy tongue wet with the salt of universal earth, and the honest farmer, who supports them all, will come and leave their golden testimonials as a tribute to a perfect nature dressed in the marvels of art.

A Quartet of Fair Counties.

The most careless thinker will see that Alameda, San Joaquin, Santa Clara and Sonoma counties are the subject of nature's sweetest blandishments. These four counties will sustain multitudes when the State shall have her five to ten millions of people; these will be gardens for the exhibition of a refined supremacy in agriculture, science, art and mind. Here will be born conceptions that shall thrill, fascinate, fire and electrify through all coming time. Now these are generalizations, and yet time will verify the prophecy.

The Lodges Visited

Are generally prosperous. However, in some there is apathy, indifference—a damning, cold, speculative spirit that sees only money. The attendance at the public speaking was good, while the Lodge rooms were frequently full. Everywhere the utmost respect was paid to myself and wife. We were the recipients of many graceful courtesies and refined kindnesses. This was especially exemplified at Visalia, Bakersfield, Los Angeles, Watsonville and San Jose by the elegant attention of the ladies. The mention of these is no reflection upon those unnamed. At Santa Cruz we pleasantly rode over the town with Grand Overseer McPherson and wife. They proved splendid guides to nature's wondrous beauties. Nor will gallantry allow me to forget a joyous afternoon spent in the company of Brother Baskerville, and Brother Coblentz and wife out at Pasadena. The magic of the scene was surely enhanced by the sparkle, thrill and splendor imparted to the chat by our friends.

Every appointment was kept. The routine consisted of exemplifications of the secret work, frequently of conferring degrees, a fraternal talk in the Lodge room, and then a public address. So the trip was not one of dalliance, but one of travel and labor, of fun and keen enjoyment.

If the benefit to the Lodges equalled our general pleasures in the trip, then benediction!

Suggestions to New Representatives.

In conclusion, it may not be amiss to suggest to new Representatives, that at the next Grand Lodge there will probably be discussed the following questions:

Define what proofs shall be required from non-resident heirs or nominees.

Should not the Beneficiary Certificate bear a name as nominee?

Define the method of rehearing when a brother has been expelled under a misapprehension of facts.

Define the status of the Fraternal Institute.

Should all Lodges pay Sick Benefits per week?

Relief Committee in San Francisco and elsewhere.

Should not semi-monthly meetings be governed by law and not by the discretion of the Grand Master.

Has a Lodge the right to reject a brother whose Beneficiary Certificate is suspended for assessments?

Should smoking be allowed in a session of the Lodge room.

These are live questions. Fraternally yours, in C. H. and P.,

J. T. ROGERS, G. M. W.

UKIAH, Cal., January 4, 1884.

PAST GRAND MASTER BARNES of the A. O. U. W., thus counsels a would-be "jiner": "While it is proper for a man who has a family to provide for sickness and death by joining beneficial societies, and also for instructive and valuable association for himself, it is neither requisite nor correct for a man to belong to so many societies that he has neither time nor money for his family. Above all things, do not fix matters so that you will be more valuable dead than alive."

BRO. E. S. FINCH, Financier of Pacific, No. 7, has invented a Financier's Ledger, which for clearness, simplicity, labor-saving and general comprehensiveness, is the best thing of its kind that we have seen. It is prepared to accommodate several years entries. Lodges desiring to investigate such things should communicate with him.

PROF. N. L. Le NOIR, Organist of Pacific, No. 7, of Oakland, had charge of the musical Christmas festival of St. John's Episcopal Church of Oakland, which was a great success. One of the numbers on the programme, a Christmas Chant, was his own composition.

OWING to the great number of reports of Lodge elections, we have been compelled to assign these reports the place usually occupied by the directory, but as it is in the same line of reading and fresh, we think no one will complain.

A LODGE in Philadelphia issued invitations to its members for "a swell affair," inclosing envelopes and requesting the members to answer, as the committee wished to know "how many to provide for." Upon the evening designated nearly every member was present. They were "treated" to dried apples and cold water.

EXTENSIVE preparations are being made to have extra sized and attractive editions of the RECORD and WATCHMAN, on the issues last preceding February 22d, in honor of Washington's Birthday.

GRAND LECTURER READING will pay an official visit to Oak Leaf Lodge, No. 35, of Oakland, Monday evening, the 21st inst.

REPORTS from all parts of the State give encouragement for the successful conduct of the work for the coming year.

HARMONY LODGE, No. 6, has changed its place, of meeting from 35 Eddy street to 713 Market street (Pythian Castle).

Other Jurisdictions.

THE Select Knights have a membership of 4,618. There are only 720 beneficiary members. Only 1,945 are at present seeking "the bubble reputation" in street parade with uniforms on—the remainder have not as yet provided themselves with "soger clothes." Indiana Recorder.

SINCE the organization of the A. O. U. W. there has been 3,588 deaths among its members. To the designated beneficiaries of these deceased brothers the enormous sum of seven million one hundred and seventy-six thousand dollars has been paid. We can well afford to be judged by our fruits. Overseer.

AN exchange prints the following question and answer:

Q.—If only five members of a Lodge are present on the night of meeting, none of the five being officers, who takes the chair?

A.—The janitor of the hall takes the chair; in fact, all the chairs; and the Grand Lodge should take the charter.

In an item given by a fraternal journal, speaking of a celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the establishment of the Order, which occurred at Alleghany City, Pa., these words occur: "Grand Recorder McNair read a letter, dated Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., from the President of the United States, Brother Chester A. Arthur, regretting his inability to be present." From which we judge that the President is a member of the A. O. U. W.—Call.

YES, Brother Chet is "one of the boys," who always regrets his inability to attend Lodge meetings, but is with us heart and soul. He pays his dues and assessments in $20 gold pieces, in advance, and was one of the very first to forward a crisp $1 William for the Empire State Workman for the coming year. The A. O. U. W. is the only fraternal co-operative organization to which he belongs and he believes it the best of all now in existence.—Empire State Workman.

THE Fraternal Censor copies a labored algebraic article from an English author who is seeking to make a clear contrast between assessment insurance and the "regulars," and then comment upon it in the following facetious style:

This undoubtedly settles the question of life insurance in the mind of the average reader.

Now then, following out the spirit of the above proposition, we have:

$f \times l$  — which represents the comparative —worth of fraternal and regular insurance.

$2v - (1-r) A_x$ ,  $A_x$  ($2,000) representing the amount guaranteed by our certificate and always paid;

And

$2v - e (1-s) D_l$   $2v$  being amount of policy in regulars,  $e$  representing  $D_e$  (D—little)—what the widow and orphan usually get.

One of the quickest settlements of a death claim yet reported comes from Brooklyn, New York. Morning Star Council, No. 680, Royal Arcanum, paid to the widow of their late Bro. M. J. Judge her benefit of $3,000 within twenty days from his decease.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

This is doing very well, indeed. But a glance over the records of the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., of Pennsylvania, reveals several paid in much shorter time than the above "one of the quickest." In the cases of Sam'l E. Phillips, of Penn Lodge, No. 10, the payment was made in four days; Conrad Schuler, of Erie, No. 44, in five days; Chas. Douglass, of Union, No. 86, in seven days; J. Kosher, of Central, No. 19, and M. Saroco, of Union, No. 86, in 10 days; U. Daidler, of Gen'l Taylor, No. 50, in nine days; C. W. Lytle, of Erie, No. 44, in eight days; Francis Funk, Jr., of Quaker City Lodge, No. 116, in 13 days.—Protector.

LEVITY DURING OUR CEREMONIES.—There is nothing that so grates upon my ear as levity during our ceremonies. I would as soon think of mirth at a funeral. It shows an utter lack of appreciation of the intent of our ritual. So out of place is mirth during our work that I have no patience with the parties guilty of such improprieties. My dear brother who reads this, are you guilty of this crime against our holy teachings! If so, let me ask you to meditate alone upon the lessons learned at our altars. Then ask yourself the question, where is there room for mirth or idle jest? If those lessons teach frivolity and ungentelemanly acts, then is our teachings vain. —Wisconsin Advocate.

NO WORK having been done within the prescribed time, the Mexican government has forfeited the concession made to General Grant for a submarine cable connecting the two Republics.

Statistical Rain Table.

Table with 12 columns (MONTHS 1850-1883) and 1 row (Total). The table lists monthly rainfall in inches for each year from 1850 to 1883, with a total row at the bottom.

Arranged according to seasons, showing the amount in inches of each month, during thirty four years, and for each rainy season, to Dec. 31, 1883; also the quantity for every month, and the annual amount of rain.

To Helping Friends.

We shall be pleased, until further notice, to send, free several sample copies of this journal, containing the aims, objects and other valuable information of our Order, to such members as will use them for the purpose of securing subscriptions for the paper by making it better known to those who are at all likely to take it. If preferable, send us names and we will mail the latest copies we have to spare.

A Good Paper for Workmen.

THE PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN is a journal that all members of the A. O. U. W. should be familiar with. It is intelligently devoted to the interests of the Order, and it contains a great deal of news and choice miscellaneous reading and editorials. It is published by Dewey & Co., 252 Market St., San Francisco. Send to the publishers for a sample copy.—Foothill Tidings.

List of U. S. Patents for Pacific Coast Inventors.

From the official list of U. S. Patents in DEWEY & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS PATENT AGENCY, 252 Market St., S. F.

FOR WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 4, 1883.
289,598.—SADDLE GIRTH—A. Ayers, San Jose, Cal.

289,793.—BELT REPLACER—Geo. W. Emer, Oakland, Cal.

289,525.—BOOT—B. Getleson, S. F.

289,409.—MANUFACTURE OF MATTRESS STUFFING—F. Hagedorn, S. F.

289,705.—LOCOMOTIVE COW CATCHER—Wm. Phillips, Marshfield, Or.

289,559.—PUMP AND WATER-WHEEL—Sam'l S. Richardson, Happy Camp, Cal.

289,500.—WATER MOTOR—Sam'l S. Richardson, Happy Camp, Cal.

289,450.—SPRING BALANCE COUNTER SCALE—F. W. Runge, S. F.

289,719.—DEVICE FOR SECURING WHEEL TIRES—L. Shelton, Santa Rosa, Cal.

289,576.—SAW TOOTH—Eugene Smith, S. F.

289,791.—DRY ORE PULVERIZER AND CONCENTRATOR—Adam Wingard, S. F.

FOR WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 11, 1883.

289,800.—FARM GATE—S. Q. Barlow, Petaluma, Cal.

289,899.—MOTOR—C. De Mezerville, Santa Clara, Cal.

290,003.—CABLE GRIP APPARATUS—Dods & Hinds, Virginia City, Nev.

289,900.—PROTECTING IRON WATER PIPES—F. Eaton, Los Angeles, Cal.

289,904.—MOVING STREET CARS ON CURVES—N. A. Fisher, Sacramento, Cal.

289,836.—OBTAINING BORACIC ACID FROM NATIVE BORATE OF LIME—J. B. Hobson, S. F.

289,915.—GRAIN SEPARATOR SHOE—A. H. Johnson, Woodland, Cal.

290,063.—STEAM ACTUATED VALVE—H. Kessler, S. F.

289,844.—HAND STAMP—C. A. Klinkner, S. F.

290,873.—LOCKING DEVICE FOR WHIP SOCKETS—A. H. Lau, S. F.

289,866.—SAFETY BRIDGE FOR RAILROAD CARS—A. B. Smith, S. F.

289,937.—BASIN AND WATER CLOSET VALVE—H. Smith, S. F.

290,131.—HONEY COMB PACKING BOTTLE—S. M. Smith, S. F.

289,942.—PORTABLE FRUIT LADDER—L. H. Titus, San Gabriel, Cal.

NOTE.—Copies of U. S. and Foreign Patents furnished by DEWEY & Co. in the shortest time possible (by telegraph or otherwise), at the lowest rates. All patent business for Pacific coast inventors transacted with perfect security and in the shortest possible time.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through DEWEY & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

KEY-SEAT CUTTING MACHINE.—Geo. W. Bonds, S. F. No. 289,060. Dated Nov. 27, 1883. This is an improvement in that class of machines for cutting or slotting keyways in wheels, pinions, pulleys, etc., where the wheel is made with teeth or cutters on the edge, like a milling tool, and of the exact width of the slot to be cut. It consists of a moving table provided with suitable adjustable jaws and slots and slots for fastening the work to be operated upon, and both hand and automatic feeding attachments to move the work to the cutter, instead of feeding the cutter to the work, as is customary in this class of machines. An automatic relief motion is provided to save the wear of the cutter on the back stroke, as is also an automatic stop to gauge the cut to any desired depth. The cutter and cross-head are provided with adjustments to fix the taper at any desired angle, and they are locked with adjustable steel rollers below and above the cut to prevent springing, thus making the keyway exactly straight.

DIRT SCRAPER.—James Porteous, Fresno, Cal. No. 289,134. Dated Nov. 27, 1883. These improvements in scrapers for leveling land consist in the means for regulating the dump of the bowl. The object in this is to cause the bowl to discharge the load more or less quickly by regulating the distance of its bit from the ground when in the dumped position. In case of a decided depression in the ground, it becomes necessary to discharge the load at once, and this is accomplished by so regulating the dump of the bowl that its bit shall be high enough from the ground to let the dirt escape. In case but a thin layer need be spread, the bit is raised but little and it acts as a scraper, spreading the slowly-discharging earth over a greater surface. This result, namely, the limiting of the dump of the bowl, has been heretofore accomplished by means of a bar set transversely over the top between the ends of the bowl, said bar coming in contact with the draft rods; but the present construction overcomes any objections there may be to the previous method.

SHOE FOR GRAIN SEPARATORS.—Arthur H. Johnson, Woodland, Yolo Co. No. 289,915. Dated Dec. 11, 1883. This shoe is made of light pieces set at right angles to each other, the ends being on top of the sides in order to properly inclose the riddle which is laid on the shoe. Attached to the sides of the shoe are flexible strips (preferably leather) having flexible tongues by which the shoe can be adjusted from the outside to any inclination, or to raise or lower any corner, or otherwise change its position, according to circumstances. A combination of movements is perfected—namely, a side motion of the shoe and an end motion of the grain board. This is beneficial in its effects. It gives a better agitation to the grain than if both moved in the same direction, and thus allows the wind to clean it up thoroughly.

DESIGN FOR BRACELET.—Robert H. Ahn, S. F. No. 14,438. Dated Nov. 27, 1883. Heretofore bracelets have been formed of rounded wires bent into the proper oval or circular shape to inclose the wrist, the ends extending past each other a short distance when in place, and having ornamental end or other devices, the elasticity of the hoops retaining them in place on the arm. This design consists of a hoop or bracelet having its outer periphery concaved so as to show one or more grooves or channels.

GANG PLOW.—Henry S. Palmer, Santa Ana, Los Angeles Co. No. 288,362. Dated Nov. 13, 1883. The improvements consist in details of construction, and the means for leveling and regulating the depth of the plows. The present ordinary construction of levers by which the cranks or crank-axle upon which the wheels are mounted or operated renders it often a matter of some difficulty to raise the plows out of the ground or regulate their depth. It is the object of this invention to render this operation easy.

CABLE-GRIP.—Benjamin F. Carman, S. F. No. 288,960. Dated Nov. 20, 1883. This is a new form of grip for cable-railroad cars, by which the car and cable are connected and disconnected at pleasure. The invention consists in a grip having flexible or pointed jaws, means for retaining the cable between the jaws when partially opened, and a peculiar lever and pawl mechanism for operating the jaws to grip or release the cable.

DESIGN FOR WIRE FENCE.—Gaspar Hunziker, Cloverdale, Sonoma Co. No. 14,442. Dated Nov. 27, 1883. The design consists in the combination of two or more nettings with different sized meshes. The leading feature of the design consists of a series of parallel horizontal sections of netting, having meshes of different sizes, said sections being united at their edges so as to form a panel.

AMERICAN CUTLERY.—A correspondent of a London paper, in a recent issue, says: "About the only advantage English cutlery can claim over American competitors is that which attaches to the traditional reputation. It is a mistaken notion that the former have an advantage over the latter in the matter of steel. American steel made for cutlery and tool purposes is as good as any steel made in Great Britain, and it would be folly to question the fact. The art of steel-making has been brought to great perfection in Pittsburgh; and while it is true that some old houses consuming steel prefer and use the English, it is as much because they are unwilling to make any change in material and methods as because they consider English steel really better." While thus admitting the excellence of our material, this writer says that in "finish" our best specimens of cutlery are certainly unsurpassed by the choicest goods of Sheffield.

THERE has been remarkable activity at all the land offices on this coast in entering government lands since the publication of the report of the Secretary of the Interior, in which he presents good reasons for the material modification of the homestead law and the repeal of the pre-emption and other acts by which title to government land can be obtained. There is an evident disposition to take advantage of the present liberal laws while they remain in force.

A SYNDICATE of stock men is engaged in fencing into ranges a tract of 6,000,000 acres, leased from the Cherokees for five years, at an annual rental of $100,000. It is believed that 1,000,000 head of cattle will be placed on the inclosed grounds by April 1st.

A true friend to the weak and convalescent is Brown's Iron Bitters.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time he intends to pay for it, let him not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing only one cent) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

To Let for Concerts, Lectures, Etc.

The auditorium of Hamilton (Independent) Church is to let for Lectures, Concerts and Choice Entertainments. It is one of the best auditoriums in Oakland; has a fine organ; is comfortably seated, well lighted and conveniently located. Apply to TAGGART & DINGEE, No. 460 Eighth St., Oakland, Cal.

Job Press for Sale or Exchange.

We have just received a new improved Rotary Job Printing press of approved style and make, which we will sell at a bargain or exchange on favorable terms for a Washington hand press. Size of chase inside 7x10 inches. DEWEY & Co., publishers.

REMITTANCES to this office should be made by postal order or registered letter, when practicable. Cost of postal order, for $15 or less, 10 cts.; for registered letter, in addition to regular postage (at 3 cts. per half ounce), 10 cts.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

Ostrich Farming.

It seems that this very interesting branch of poultry farming is reaching success at Anaheim, Los Angeles, in spite of drawbacks which were peculiar and no doubt unexpected. A writer for the Anaheim Gazette gives a review of the experiment so far as it has advanced, and therefrom we take interesting data. It seems that the ostrich farm suffered first and most from its host of friends—including as friends those whose curiosity led them to visit the place. It is a peculiar story, and we insert it because it is so. The greatest trouble, the writer says, was the visitors.

"They came in hundreds and destroyed crops, pulled down fences, trampled down corn and plucked the birds until in sheer defense Doctor Sketchley was obliged to arrest several and have them prosecuted, and not until then did he have any peace. It was during this time that one of the cocks killed his mate, all the birds being much excited, and this particular cock (an extra savage one by the way), was plagued until his rage knew no bounds and in his excitement he rushed upon his mate and kicked her to death. It would have been at that time a good thing if it were possible to have stopped all visitors. But no; the inhabitants seemed to think that the farm was only started for their pleasure. Finally a fifty cent tax was put upon visitors and that stopped their coming."

It seems that the effect of this host of visitors was to induce a distemper among the birds, which was reduced when greater quiet was obtained. During the season from May 1st until October 1st five hens layed 305 eggs, making an average of 61 eggs each. A number of chicks were hatched with the incubators, although many of the eggs proved infertile because of the interference with the birds by the visitors. During the past year they have plucked the birds twice; first in May, at which time the birds had only just landed upon the farm, and all the feathers were in a much damaged condition. However, $500 was realized from that clip. They were again clipped last month and over 2,500 quills of all kinds were obtained from eighteen birds, worth now about $1,000. They still have left on the birds a large quantity of blood feathers which will not be ripe for several months. The superintendent estimates that the entire value of the feathers from the birds for 1883 must be $2,000, averaging $95 to the bird. Those conducting the enterprise have full confidence in doing much better another year.

As was stated in the PRESS recently, another ostrich enterprise is contemplated in San Diego county by the American Ostrich Company, of Boston, Mass. Their birds, 23 in number, recently landed in New Orleans, and will be brought by rail to their farm. Another farm has been started at Palatka, Florida. Their stock consists of three pairs of North African ostriches, which are a different variety from either those owned on the Anaheim farm or by the Boston Company. They are claimed to be neither so large nor hardy, and are not as good breeders, although they bear fine feathers.

The writer in the Gazette has high expectations of the ostrich industry, and thinks that in ten years it will be one of the leading branches of live-stock farming. Ostrich feathers are always in fashion, and as the United States consume about five million dollars worth annually, and the consumption is yearly growing larger, the business can be indefinitely extended. It costs no more to raise an ostrich than it does a sheep, and instead of only getting two dollars worth of wool it is claimed that you get from eighty to one hundred dollars worth of feathers every seven months from each bird.

INFLUENCE OF QUALITY OF SEED UPON THE CROP.—One of the most important conditions of a successful vegetation experiment is uniformity in the seed used. With this in mind, Hellriegel has investigated the effect of variations in the absolute weight, and in the specific gravity of seeds upon the growth of the resulting plants. He finds that, of seeds (of barley) having the same specific gravity, the heavier seeds produced at first more vigorous plants than the lighter. As the plants continue to grow in good soil, the differences gradually diminished, until, at the time of harvest, they had entirely disappeared. When the plants grew in poor soil, the effect of differences in the seed was more lasting, and even affected the total weight of the crop. Differences of specific gravity in seeds of the same weight produced no recognizable effect upon the crop. The stage of ripeness of the seeds affected the development of the plants in the same direction as it did the absolute weight of the seeds; the riper seeds being heavier, and producing the most vigorous plants, and the differences being most manifest on a poor soil. Essentially the same results were obtained in experiments with potatoes. The attempt was also made to raise potatoes of greater or less specific gravity, by selection; the heaviest or lightest being continually selected for seed. The experiment was continued through three seasons, with a negative result.

THE TRANSMISSION OF POWER.—In a prize essay by Herr Beringer on the transmission of power for long distances, it is stated that electric and wire-rope transmissions (the latter up to a length of about two-thirds of a mile) are the best. Above that distance, electricity is to be preferred. The power of a hydraulic motor may be transmitted to distances of 12 miles without becoming more expensive than steam power generated on the spot. For electrical transmission another 6 miles may be added to the distance, so that in a locality where cheap water power exists machines may be actuated by electricity with advantage within a circumference of 18 miles. Beyond that distance, however, steam motors are more economical. If there is no water power, and the erection of a central steam engine becomes necessary, a wire-rope system works with greater advantage, and is only to be rejected in towns, because, in such cases, wire-rope traction loses greatly by the necessary branching off. The erection of a separate motor becomes cheaper where energy of 10 horse-power and above is required. Water and air are far exceeded by electricity for transmission of power, and if motive power is to be transmitted 6 miles from a central steam motor, it can be done economically only by electricity.

MENDOCINO COUNTY contains 2,000,000 acres all told, of which 64,000 are under cultivation, and 500,000 are timber land. Maximum price per acre, $100; minimum, $2; average, $10. There are about 1,000 ranches in the county belonging to about 800 owners. Maximum rent of land per acre, $15; minimum, $1; average, $2. There are about 10,000 miles of fencing in the county, costing $300 a mile. The maximum wages paid to farm hands per month, including board, is $30; minimum, $20; average, $25—said laborers finding employment during all the months of the year. The daily hours of labor range from eight to twelve. According to the Assessor's report, there is not one unemployed laborer in Mendocino county. Within the county bounds there are only twenty-five miles of railroad, and none of the highways are macadamized.

AN IMMENSE WATER POWER.—Experts say that Broad river, at Anthony Shoals, Georgia, has a volume of 19,000,000 cubic feet of water per minute, and its velocity is 175 feet per minute, its fall in a mile and a quarter being ninety-two feet. The horse power is calculated to be 37,286, while Lowell, the finest developed water-power in the United States, has only 16,000 horse power.

The Elko Independent says that the west-bound train, between Green river and Granger, on the Union Pacific, recently encountered a herd of 1,200 or 1,500 antelope. The snow was quite deep and drifted in places, and when they were first encountered many of them were killed.

A PERMANENT restoration of exhausted and worn-out functions follow the use of Brown's Iron Bitters.

General Relief Committee, A. O. U. W.

No. 32 O'Farrell St., San Francisco.

OFFICERS:

President.....HARRY J. LARK
Vice-President.....A. F. BELL
Secretary.....C. C. GILMORE
Treasurer.....C. W. NEVIN

REGULAR MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE:

Second and Fourth Saturday Evenings of Each Month,
AT 8 O'CLOCK.

A member of the committee will be in attendance each evening (Sundays excepted) from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and on Sunday mornings from 11 A. M. to 12 M., for the purpose of receiving and attending to applications for Relief and Employment, and no application will be entertained outside of the above hours and place.

All communications and business connected with this committee should be addressed to the Secretary at the above permanent headquarters.

The Lemmon Herbarium.

This Herbarium has been removed from the Blake House to a permanent place at 1205 Franklin St., near Fourteenth St., Oakland, one square east of the Post Office, where plants of the Pacific Coast, including Arizona, may be determined on application, and instruction given in botany during the winter. Sets or single specimens of the rare and new ferns of the Pacific Coast for sale.

Music Teaching.

MISS BESSIE VINNICOMBE, teacher of the pianoforte and vocal music, will give instructions at pupil's residence, when desired, and at Brayton Building, 363½ Twelfth St., near Franklin, Oakland, Cal.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W., and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

THE FRATERNAL RECORD.

A Representative Home Journal for Fraternal Societies—Issued on the first and third Saturdays of each month—Subscription, in advance, $2 per year.

The FRATERNAL RECORD is recognized as a standard fraternal newspaper on the Pacific coast, and one of the leading society journals of the age. It is the official organ of several leading Orders, and the recognized representative of various other prominent fraternal and beneficiary associations flourishing west of the Rocky mountains. Among the Orders represented in its columns are the following, the first six mentioned, however, being more fully represented in the organs of their own which we have established:

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS,
ORDER OF EASTERN STAR,
INDEPENDENT ORDER CHOSEN FRIENDS
AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR,
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
INDEPENDENT ORDER ODD FELLOWS,
KNIGHTS OF HONOR,
ANCIENT AND LADIES OF HONOR,
ANCIENT ORDER OF FORESTERS,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST,
PATRIOTIC SONS OF AMERICA,
UNITED ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS,
IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN,
KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN RULE,
ORDER OF MUTUAL COMPANIONS.

The RECORD is also one of the best home and family papers on the coast, being extensively and handsomely illustrated, and well-filled with original and choicely selected matter, conveniently arranged and carefully condensed matter pertaining to the household, health, culinary and general information. It is a welcome visitor to every member of the household.

The RECORD is issued by reliable and experienced publishers, who are liberal and enterprising in meeting the wants of their numerous patrons. Having the countenance and support of many of the best writers and most active members of the more than ordinary class of citizens, they are enabled to make their journal superior in influence and usefulness in one of the most wide-awake and progressive portions of our Union.

The publishers will endeavor to make every number a credit to the Orders represented, and a desirable representative to present to their neighbors and friends at home and abroad.

All members of the Orders represented, who are familiar with its columns, will readily see the advantage of subscribing and assisting in further enlarging the circulation and advancing the influence of the paper as rapidly as possible.

A limited number of first-class advertisements will be received at very reasonable rates for its circulation and good standing.

Free sample copies sent, on application, to all those who desire to assist in extending its circulation.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this the oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

New Workman Diploma.

"The Windsor."

This popular first-class family hotel is located at the corner of Fifth and Market streets, San Francisco, and its present proprietors are the Warschauer Bros., who have occupied that position for the past six years. Being successors of their father, who had been in the hotel business in this city for over thirty years, the experience of these young gentlemen has enabled them to make "The Windsor" what it is to-day—a success in every respect. It is a handsome three-story structure, with large, airy and sunny rooms, furnished in elegant style, and its spacious dining room is undoubtedly one of the pleasantest in San Francisco. Everything about it has a clean, neat and inviting appearance, and polite and attentive waiters are there to attend to the wants of the guests. Situated as it is in the central portion of the city, with eight lines of cars passing its doors, leading direct to the ferry, to the Park, to the ocean beach, and to all other sections, makes it a very convenient stopping place for all classes—the tourist as well as the merchant. The proprietors have recently extended their business, and are now prepared to accommodate transient custom. A free coach is run from all trains and boats to the hotel, and we feel justified in recommending "The Windsor" to our interior readers, with the assurance that they will receive gentlemanly and satisfactory treatment, at terms within the reach of all. The terms are $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per day, according to the location of the room. Special rates are made for families by the week or month.

Candidate for Admission.

"My son," said an Indiana man to his nine year old boy, "you are about to enter into the mysteries of the great world around you. Before doing so it will be necessary to pass a severe and searching ordeal. Are you ready for the trial?"

"Yes, sir"

"Where have you been to-day?"

"Been fishing."

(Murmurs of applause from his fond mother.)

"Did you run away from school?"

"Yes sir."

"Have you been inside the school-house for the past week?"

"No sir."

"What did you do yesterday?"

"Stole some lead pipe and sold it to the junk shop for money to buy a matinee ticket."

"Do you go to the theater often?"

"Twice a week."

"My son, the examination is satisfactory.

I now have the pleasure of presenting to you one of the emblems of your future profession in this world, as the boss honest boy of the city. It is a little hatchet. What will you do with it?"

"Trade it off for a pint of peanuts and two fire balloons."

"Correct; the candidate is ready for initiation. His mother will provide herself with a skate strap and take him into the bath-room and administer it to him in the first degree. No other business being before the Lodge, I declare in closed until the next regular meeting."

How is this for originality of nomenclature? Philadelphia is said to have a fraternity called the "Benevolent Order of Buf-faloes," the different subordinate bodies of which are called "Herds," and the meeting places receive the euphonious and highly suggestive name of "Corrals."

FRATERNAL matters are in a stirring condition all over the coast, the unusual commotion being incident to the elections and installations of officers for the ensuing terms in most of the Orders.

It would be an easy thing and a very wise thing, too, for a wife to save a dollar a month to meet assessments, or to see that her husband did so, and thus make sure that in the event of his death she should not be left without the $2,000 the Order pays. If women are careless on this point and death comes unlooked for, the disaster will fall on them and their children, and therefore, in the interests of both, they ought to ascertain that their husband's standing in the Lodge is good. Before the 28th of each month every member's wife should take the chair and ask, "Has the assessment for this month been paid?"—Canadian Workman.

"Square the Year."

There are not many customs we came to borrow from the Chinese, but there is one excellent one they have of settling up all their accounts at least once a year, that it would be handy to have grafted on to our Western civilization. For instance, it would be of great assistance to the publishers of this journal to have all its patrons renew their subscriptions promptly, save the expense of collections, avoid the changing and shifting of the position of the names on the printed mail list, and prevent some of the chances of errors occurring in addressing and mailing our very large list of subscribers. We, therefore, kindly urge upon all those who possibly can to renew their subscriptions early.

This is an excellent period for all not paid in advance to remit and place their credit ahead for 1884. Verily every enterprising publisher holds at a premium his list of promptly paying patrons. We hope our friends will not delay forwarding their postal orders because a single subscription is small in amount. We need the support of every intelligent person interested in the objects to which our paper is devoted. It is the interest of all such that the WATCHMAN should be well sustained.

We have endeavored in every way to make these issues so valuable to its readers as to render it almost indispensable. No man can read it who will not likely find at least one or more single copies during the year, containing something worth many times the subscription price.

CLEANING BRASS.—The government recipe for cleaning brass, used in the arsenals, is said to be as follows: Make a mixture of one part common nitric acid, and one-half part sulphuric acid in a stone jar; then place ready a pail of fresh water and a box of sawdust. Dip the articles to be cleaned in the acid, then remove them into the water after which rub them with sawdust. This immediately changes them to a brilliant color. If the brass is greasy it must be first dipped in a strong solution of potash and soda in warm water; this cuts the grease so that the acid has the power to act. The Manufacturer says that rusted steel can be cleaned by washing with a solution of half an ounce of cyanide potassium, in two ounces of water, and then brushing with a paste composed of half an ounce of cyanide potassium, half an ounce of castile soap, an ounce of whiting and sufficient water to make the paste.—Cornwall Reflector.

TO TIN A NEW SOLDERING-IRON.—The old fashioned way is to file your iron or copper on the point into the shape you want it, put it into a clean fire and heat it until it will melt solder easily, wipe it clean and rub it on a pine board with rosin and solder until the point is tinned as you want it. The new way is to heat as above and wipe clean, then apply soldering fluid (made from zinc dissolved in muriatic acid), to the point where you want the tin, and rub it on a board with solder as above.

THE ARLBERG TUNNEL.—The fragments of rocks dividing the eastern and western galleries of the Arlberg Tunnel were removed on the 19th of November, in the presence of a notable assemblage. Baron Von Friedenthal, the Austrian Minister of Commerce, delivered an address in German and Italian. There was much enthusiasm manifested on the occasion. Subsequently a special train passed through the tunnel from the west.

ASBESTOS ENAMEL.—Powdered asbestos is used by M. Erichsen, of Copenhagen, for making an enamel or coating to be applied to pipes, walls, and so on. The powder is mixed with soluble salts, such as silicate of potash, and mineral or other colors which combine with silicic acid, so as to form a product which resists the action of oxygen, heat, cold or damp. The coating furnishes a refractory glaze, which protects the material it is applied to, whether wood, gas or water pipes, and stone or brick buildings. When applied to masonry or wood the surface of these is first washed with soap and water. In preparing the enamel the refuse asbestos only need be employed. It is also proposed to apply the coating to boilers in order to protect the plates against a too intense fire.

DURING the year 48,114 money orders were issued through the San Francisco Post Office, equal in value to $926,115 02; fees, $8,731 03; the orders issued by Postmasters were $285,719, making total receipts of $3,802,042 05. Since the passage of the law establishing postal notes 1,709 have been issued, representing $3,858 63. There were also paid out 143,561 orders, amounting to $2,793,605 44; deposited with the treasurer, $803,500. The total distribution amounted to $3,801,213 79. Of the amount paid out there was $22,202 71 on 9,437 postal notes.

THE Immigration Association report the following number of arrivals for the year 1883, from points to the eastward: January, 1,399; February, 1,673; March, 4,115; April, 6,824; May, 6,576; June, 5,106; July, 3,814; August, 4,034; September, 5,071; October, 4,587; November, 5,071; December, approximation, 2,660. Total for the year, 51,530.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold
fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and share holders on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practical
miners in this country.

The PRESS gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.

New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific Coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator, and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer,
will find profit by its reading.

Subscription, $4 a year in advance. Sample copies, prepaid, 10 cents.

DEWEY & CO.'S Scientific Press Patent Agency.

Inventors on the Pacific Coast will find it greatly to their advantage to consult this old, experienced, first-class Agency. We have able and trustworthy Associates and Agents in Washington and the capital cities of the principal nations of the world. In connection with our editorial, scientific and Patent Law Library, and record of original cases in our office, we have other advantages far beyond those which can be offered home inventors by other agencies. The information accumulated through long and careful practice before the Office, and the frequent examination of Patents already granted, for the purpose of determining the patentability of inventions brought before us, enables us often to give advice which will save inventors the expense of applying for Patents upon inventions which are not new. Circulars of advice sent

EDUCATE THE GIRLS.

THE HARMON SEMINARY,

Berkeley, Alameda County, Cal.

A FIRST CLASS BOARDING SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES.

THE CHARACTER OF THE INSTITUTION:

It is the aim of this institution to furnish the best attainable education for young women. The imparting of useful information and mental culture is attended by the most intelligent effort to develop true womanly qualities, and to instill principles of good taste and sound judgment. Thus, the institution possesses a family character in its best sense.

The charges for tuition and board are made as low as possible without sacrificing excellence, so as to place the School within the reach of those whose means are moderate. It is a principle of this School that those who are wealthy as well as those whose means are limited, should, as a part of their education, be taught to practice economy, and by their example discourage extravagance in dress and personal expenditure, either for ornament or utility.

It is not an ambition of this School to bring together a large and imposing array of pupils. Its numbers are limited; hence each pupil receives that close personal attention and instruction rendered impossible where multitudes are gathered together.

THE NEXT TERM WILL OPEN JANUARY 3, 1884.

Investigating Committees.

A correspondent in the Candidate, discoursing upon the present system of "Investigating Commit," tees pronounces them useless. According to this writer the true way to investigate a candidate's character is to inquire, not of his friends, but of his enemies. He would do it in this wise:

When you start out to visit a person who has been proposed for membership, put on a bullet-proof coat, take a large Colt's revolver—fully loaded—in your pocket, within easy reach, and have a policeman's club up your coat sleeve. These are simply precautionary measures.

You enter the applicant's store and inquire in an authoritative tone: "Is Mr. Smith in?"

On the approach of that gentleman you tell him that you are a member of the Investigating Committee come to investigate him, and that he must answer the questions truthfully and unreservedly. Then you must hurl the following interrogatories at him:

How many times have you failed in business?

Did you swindle your creditors at each failure?

How often have you been in the penitentiary?

What for?

Have you ever been in State's prison? If not, why not?

How many times have you been married?

What has become of your other wives?

How many children have you—and why?

Whose wife did you run away with last?

Where does the man live?

Have you ever been President or Cashier of a bank, and how much did you embezzle while such?

How often do you get drunk?

How many times, in all, have you been arrested?

Do you make your living in the business I now see you in, or do you play faro, keno, poker, roulette, three card monte, rouge-et-noir, or speculate in stocks, grain, or lard?

Are you engaged as a bunko steerer; if not, how long is it since you have given up that occupation?

How much capital have you invested?

From whom did you steal it, or in what

Studies of old-time characters and costumes are always of interest. The engraving on this page gives the reader a glimpse of a fine lady of Cologne, as she might have been seen 400 years ago, crossing a foot-bridge, with her pet poodle and her train-bearing lackey. No doubt such an impressive appearance must have produced a sensation even in so staid an old town as Cologne.

UNDER the new law no member can be suspended for delinquency on assessments till the 27th of the month, and not then if the Financier has failed to notify the member of assessment or assessments according to law. In case of such neglect the Lodge must pay for the member transferring from its General Fund to the Beneficiary Fund, an amount sufficient for such purpose. A Lodge cannot legally take any part of the Beneficiary Fund to pay for delinquent members unless it first puts money therein for such purpose. That fund does not belong to the Lodge. The Lodge is only its custodian for the time being. When called in by the Grand Lodge, the Grand Lodge becomes its custodian and can use no part of it except in payment of death losses.

Every notice of Lodge elections received at this office has been passed to the printer almost as soon as received, and we have not the slightest reason for favoring any one Lodge more than another in this respect, nor have we done so. On the contrary, we have sent blanks for election returns to every Recorder in the State, with the request to fill out and forward to us at earliest convenience.

WE have received advance sheets of the semi-annual reports of the officers of the A. O. U. W. Relief Committee of this city, a detailed notice of which we reserve for a future issue.

The Fireside.

Fairy Lore.

Written by MARY RICHARD CORRY.

She was slender and fair, with golden hair—
The sweet wee maiden whom I remember.
Then it was May and the birds were gay—
Now it is far in the bleak December.

The flowers and trees in the summer breeze
Whispered and gossiped all day together.
The bees, who knew they had work to do,
Were blithe and brisk in the fair, bright weather.

The child's blue eyes from the smiling skies
Borrowed the color and light and glory;
The soul was filled with a thought that thrilled,
Caught from a wonderful, half-read story.

So 'mid the flowers, through the fleeting hours,
She sought for fairies, so deftly hidden;
She buried her nose in the sweet, red rose,
And peeped in the lily's heart unbidden.

She heard a whirr, a rustle and stir
Down in the hollyhock flower so slender;
But the wee, live thing had a spiteful sting,
And not the touch of a fairy tender.

The white pink lent but its sweet, pure scent,
But not an echo of fairy laughter;
The tulip cup in her face looked up,
And held no secret to follow after.

With heart and might till the fading light,
She followed her quest with a growing wonder;
And went to bed, with her small, wise head
Filled with thoughts of a world beyond her.

Still, in her nest, with the feet at rest,
The peace of the night on her fair face falling,
Silent she lay, the thought of the day
In magical, mystical dreams recalling.

And into the deep, fair realms of sleep,
There shone sweet eyes in the darkness beaming,
And a tender word in the darkness stirred,
Whose music echoed through all her dreaming.

"Sweet be your sleep, while the bright stars peep
With glancing eyes through a fleecy curtain;
And take all things that the glad day brings,
And sigh no more for a joy uncertain.

"A day will come when the flowers, now dumb,
Shall chant their music in fairy numbers,
And a fine old ear shall clearly hear
As memory wakes from her noon-day slumbers.

"A rose may hold, for a heart grown old,
A tale of a love in the old time given;
And the mignonette, by the night dews wet,
The smile of a dear child called to Heaven.

"The fragrance brief, of a fair, green leaf,
Shall whisper of girlhood's favored lover;
And thoughts that flow from the long ago
Shall fairy love to thy heart discover.

"And the faded eyes with a pleased surprise,
Seeking the flowers in their summer glory,
Shall light on the truth they missed in youth,
Hid in the heart of the fairy story."

The Tramps and the Flies.

Written by M. L. W. C.

I don't know whether any members of the tramp fraternity ever wandered into the farming districts of the State, but I have heard of their peculiar characteristics when in San Francisco, and I know that all the housekeepers, without exception, in the vicinity of Oakland, could tell, as I can, a long and harassing tale on the text, Tramps. Perhaps the most particular tramp with whom I have dealt rang the bell and asked for a pair of shoes. He sat down on the step to try on those given him, and in five minutes handed them back, saying: "Thank ye, mum, but them ain't a fit; they're too big for me."

The same week an Italian stopped to beg "an onion and a leetle salt" to eat with a piece of bread; and an old Frenchman leaned upon his cane with one hand, and removed his hat with the other, in the most polite manner imaginable, as he asked for a pocket-handkerchief!

One member of the fraternity was sitting upon the doorstep when the door was opened, and he remarked, in an easy, off-hand manner: "Ah! good morning, madam! I have called this morning to propose that you do me a little favor. I will explain that I am suffering from chronic dyspepsia, and sleeping around in the fields makes me worse, and therefore it would be a real gratification to my feelings to have you lend me the price of a passage from here to San Francisco."

We may have been hard-hearted, but his feelings were not gratified that morning.

One dilapidated straggler from the ranks of the "tramp brigade" found the front door, but could not discover the gate again, and went staggering about the dooryard for some twenty minutes, tumbling against the fence in various places, and mumbling imprecations upon the people who had removed the gate since he came in.

Young "hoodlums" from San Francisco often turn up at our back doors, on this side of the bay. This variety of the genus tramp travels in pairs, and during the winter a pair mounted the back-door steps and asked for a drink of water.

The tender hearted Irish woman who opened the door recognized countrymen, and fumbled in her pocket to find a piece of money for the two poor young things, as she went across the kitchen to draw the water; but before she got back to the door they had flown, and the old woman's quick eyes instantly detected the loss of a half empty blacking box and a worn-out shoe brush.

Two young Jews were seen in confab near the gate a few days since, after which one of them came to the door and asked for an old pair of pantaloons, saying that he had on his best, and was about to go to work as a gardener in the neighborhood and would like a poorer pair. The trowsers given him were old indeed, yet after displaying them to his companion, who had seated himself in the street with his back to the fence, the first hopeful walked down the street and the second young man came in turn, and begged for a coat and a pair of shoes.

Tramps are considered annoying, troublesome, exasperating; but they are not generally supposed to be dangerous to our welfare in any way, and therefore it is the duty of the writer, before summer sets in, to give the community a timely warning.

It has been made known that a certain improvident company of gentlemen, associated together for the purpose of manufacturing flytraps and flypaper, went to great expense in establishing their factories before they reflected that just in proportion to their success, one year, would be their non-success, in a business point of view, the next. In short, and as might have been expected, the time came when the flies had all been destroyed, and ruin stared in the face this flytrap and fly-poison manufacturing company. It was necessary that a bold step be taken, and it has since transpired that this step was discovered and made.

That company has added a new branch to its former business. It now manufactures not only flytraps, but also the flies that are to be entrapped. In other words, before it was too late, these enterprising gentlemen secured the flies necessary to start with, and by means of a patent steam incubating process, are now able to, and actually engaged in supplying the country with 75,000,000,000,000 house flies annually. Their business enlarges yearly, and yearly are their other and more legitimate wares—traps and poison—more in demand. They hope still further to increase their facilities, but even now a visit to their factories is not without interest. The young flies, as soon as hatched, are marshaled in squads and placed under the tutelage of a competent old fly, who teaches them to wade in butter, swim in cream and molasses, buzz around a sleepy man's nose, and crawl, hop, walk, skip and jump over, around and upon a bald-headed man's cranium.

It will be readily understood that without these little accomplishments the flies would not be half the nuisance that they are, and it would not be so necessary to get rid of them by means of traps and poison. So bald-headed men are hired at four dollars a day for the young flies to practice upon.

This fly factory is situated in New Jersey, and when the flies have completed their education it becomes necessary to distribute them over the country. Agents are hired for this purpose, and these agents are called tramps. Here, then, is the real origin, history, nature and true inwardness of the tramp. He is found everywhere, as he is paid to be, from Maine to Florida, from New Jersey to California; and while he is lounging around, begging for diners and dodging the wood piles, he is also watching his chance to leave behind the door, under the steps, or in any other corner, a card bearing two or three thousand flies, which the first day of warm weather will set to flying around. The tramps carry a good supply of these cards up their ragged sleeves, and an industrious tramp is said to distribute more than 30,000 flies in a single day. These facts are simply appalling, and there is only one way of stopping the nefarious business, viz., to kill all the tramps as fast as they make their appearance in town. It would be impossible to find anything worse than this to set at the score of the tramps, and we are indebted for so much knowledge to an enterprising newspaper, which a few months ago exposed the particulars.

A scientific gentleman of England, well known to the world, has shown us, however, that the flies themselves are far more noxious in character than is commonly supposed. Gangrene in the hospitals, and many other diseases, are due solely to the propagation in the human system of animal germs of life which are in the air at certain times and places. These minute disease germs the house fly is more often than not the means of establishing in a human lodge-ment. And it certainly has never been pleasant to reflect that the same little creature which we find swimming in the milk-pitcher may have been, not so many hours ago, teasing some unfortunate patient in the small-pox hospital.

The fly itself harbors parasites in the shape of animalcules which are visible under a very ordinary microscope, and which, when part of the fly is immersed in milk or water, will float off into the liquid for awhile and then return to the fly's body. Experiments are now being made to determine, if possible, if these fly-parasites are liable to infest the human body and to produce there any discomfort or disease. It is already suspected that many of the cases of death from trichina which have occurred in the pork-packing districts of the Western States, have been traceable to the transporting agency of flies and not to the eating of pork.

The other day I was idly examining several objects under the microscope. I was delighted to see the pollen, yellow and dust-like, on a portion of a flower, resolved by my instrument into a regular mass of tiny, perfect and transparent egg-shaped bodies or cells, the prettiest little eggs in the world. A piece of the leg of a fly on the flower interested me so much that I examined closely several others, and what I saw I did not find particularly pleasant to view. Imagine a large leg with coarse pores in the skin and covered rather closely with strong black hairs, these hairs glued together in places with dust and other impurities, and even harboring tiny worms, and then ask yourself, as I am doing, why we do not take a more determined stand to rid our kitchens and our dining-table of the little pests. In so laudable an endeavor it would even seem justifiable that we should exterminate the tramps.

Unheard Music.

Men say that far above our octaves, pierce
Clear sounds that soar and clamor at heaven's high gate.

Heard only of bards in vision, and saints that wait
In instant prayer with godly-purged ears;
This is that fabled music of the spheres,
Undreamed of by the crowd that early and late Lift up their voice in joy, grief, hope or hate,
The diapason of their smiles and tears.
The heart's voice, too, may be so keen and high
That Love's own ears may watch for it in vain,
Nor part the harmonies of bliss and pain,
Nor hear the soul beneath a long kiss sigh,
Nor feel the caught breath's throbbing anthem die
When closely twined arms relax again.

Housekeeping in India.

Our ironing man was quite an elegant-looking personage, always well dressed, and with the mark of his sect handsomely painted on his forehead, with his fine turban, gold earrings, white robe and stately mein, he would have passed for something better. In answer to an inquiry of how many children he had, "No children," he replied, with a doleful shrug of the shoulders, "no children; only three girls." The cares of housekeeping in India are at first discouraging. At your first meal you discover that whole armies of ants are carrying off the crumbs which have fallen from the table. The meat-safe must stand with its legs in oil or water; you must carefully tuck in the mosquito netting around your bed. In the morning you must shake your shoes lest you should intrude upon a scorpion or centipede. The gray squirrels, not content with injuring the fruit, will make inroads upon your provisions of the house when an opportunity occurs. The crows are innumerable; they thrust their bills in the butter or take the bread from the plate unless constantly watched. Add lizards, bats, mice, musk-rats, sparrows and monkeys to the list of a Madras housekeeper's visitors, and you will believe that some care is needed in house-keeping, house-cleaning and house-walking. The white ant, a small, semi-transparent insect, in appearance most harmless, is in reality the most destructive. The habits of the white ant are peculiar. They live in houses partly under the earth, but frequently build up hills two or three feet above, and pierced in every direction with halls and galleries. They issue from their homes in long lines, each one carrying a load of mud. With this they form a covered way about the size of a pipe stem, under which they pass to and fro, extending their gallery. They do not cross a floor or climb a post except under this cover. In the morning you will find a line of hard, brown clay commencing at an unseen hole in the mortar floor, extending, it may be, up a door to the ceiling. You break away this gallery and find a troop of white ants hurrying back and forth, extending their road and boring or furrowing the floor.

THE PHENOMENA OF DEATH. A Philadelphia physician has made a special study of the phenomena of death, both through his personal observations and those of others, and his conclusion is that dissolution is painless. "I mean," he explains, "that it approaches as unconsciously as sleep. The soul leaves the world as painlessly as it enters it. Whatever be the cause of death, whether by lingering malady or sudden violence, dissolution comes either through syncope or asphyxia. In the latter case, when resulting from disease, the struggle is long protracted, and accompanied by all the visible marks of agony which the imagination associates with the closing scene of life. Death does not strike all the organs of the body at the same time, and the lungs are the last to give up the performance of their functions. As death approaches, the latter gradually become more and more oppressed; hence the rattle. Nor is the contact sufficiently perfect to change the black venous into the red arterial blood. An unprepared fluid consequently issues from the lungs into the heart, and is thence transmitted to every other organ in the body. The brain receives it, and its energies appear to be lulled thereby into sleep—generally tranquil sleep—filled with dreams which impel the dying to murmur out the names of friends, and the occupations and recollections of life."

LAGER beer, which thirty years ago was practically unknown in this country, is now made by 2,500 immense establishments, with over $150,000,000 of capital invested. The value of this production each year is over $200,000,000.

Truth.

"Lost your situation? How did it happen, my boy?"

"Well, mother, you'll say it was all my old carelessness, I suppose. I was dusting the shelves in the store, and in trying to hurry up matters, sent a lot of fruit-jars smashing to the floor. Mr. Barton scolded, and said he would not stand my blundering ways any longer, so I picked up and left."

His mother looked troubled.

"Don't mind, mother; I can get another situation soon, I know. But what shall I say if they ask me why I left the last one?"

"Tell the truth, James, of course; you wouldn't think of telling anything else?"

"No, I only thought I'd keep it to myself if I can; I'm afraid it may stand in my way."

"It never stands in one's way to do right, James, even though it may seem to, sometimes."

He found it harder than he expected to get a situation. He walked and inquired until he felt almost discouraged, till one day something seemed to be waiting for him. A young looking man in a clean, bright store, newly started, was in want of an assistant. Things looked very attractive, so neat and dainty that James, fearing that a boy who had a record for carelessness might not be wanted there, felt sorely tempted to conceal the truth. It was a long distance from the place from which he had been dismissed, and the chances were slight of a new employer ever hearing the truth. But he thought better of it, and frankly told exactly the circumstances which led to his seeking the situation.

"I must say I have a great preference for having neat-handed, careful people about me," said the man, good humoredly; "but I have heard that those who know their faults, and are honest enough to own them, are likely to mend them. Perhaps the very luck you have had may help you to learn to be more careful."

"Indeed, sir, I will try very hard," said James, earnestly.

"Well, I always think a boy who tells the truth, even though it may seem to go against him—Good morning, uncle. Come in, sir."

He spoke to an elderly man who was entering the door, and James, turning, found himself face to face with his late employer.

"Oh, ho!" said he, looking at the boy, "are you hiring this young chap, Fred?"

"I haven't yet, sir."

"Well, I guess you might try him; if you can only," he added, laughing, "keep him from spilling all the wet goods and smashing all the dry ones, you will find him reliable in everything else. If you find you don't like him, I'll be willing to give him another trial myself."

"If you think so well of him," said the young man, "I think I shall keep him myself."

"Oh, mother!" said James, going home after having made an agreement with his new employer, after such a recommendation from his old one, "you are right, as you always are. It was telling the truth that got it for me. What if Mr. Barton had come in there just after I had been telling something that was not exactly so!"

"The truth is always best," said his mother; "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

Philosophy of Eating.

Were men to exercise the same judgment in regard to their own food that they do in feeding domestic animals, there would be less illness on account of errors of diet. For a matter of such universal importance it has been the subject of many absurd theories.

The world seems to be divided between those who "eat to live" and those who "live to eat." The proper line may be drawn somewhere between these extremes. There is little to choose between a glutton and one who eats too little from a sentimental notion that it is vulgar to eat; and that the less one can eat, and still manage to live, the more refined and spiritual one becomes. If a man has no control over his appetite, and no judgment as to the quantity of food he requires, it would have been better had he belonged to a lower order of animals, subject to the control of a higher intelligence. Neglect or refusal to partake of sufficient food to sustain the body in its full vigor should be regarded as evidence of disease, requiring the attention of a competent physician. Nature will not patiently submit to be abused or cheated.

The quantity and quality of food required in each individual case depends on the size and health of the person, and on his occupation. A person of sedentary habits should regulate the diet to the requirements of the system, remembering that it is safer to err on the side of eating hardly enough than too much. Over-eating produces accumulation of fat, which is a disease of itself, and increases the quantity of blood, rendering one liable to heart disease and apoplexy; and paradoxical as it may seem, insufficient food tends to produce the same diseases. Either condition causes derangements in the circulation that may induce some troubles.

If we follow the indications of nature we are safe as to foods. What the appetite craves is usually best for us; the stomach notifies us when we require food, and when we have eaten enough. It is often the last mouthful that invites an attack of dyspepsia.

"Variety is the spice of life." In nothing is this more applicable than as to foods. Select a list of foods that experience has taught us are most acceptable, and then from the list get a variety for each day of the week. Salt meats should be used sparingly, because they are more indigestible than fresh. Pies and rice puddings try the digestive organs severely, and cannot be safely indulged in by adults, except they have vigorous out door exercise. The quantity and quality of food should depend upon what is required of the individual; just as the amount of fuel requisite depends on the work a steam engine has to perform.

A wise regulation of the food supply can be made to supersede the use of medicines to a very great extent.—Journal of Health.

WHEN TO TAKE MEDICINE.—The chief causes of disease are errors in diet, errors in dress, intemperance, impure water, unwholesome food, defective teeth, and blood poisoning from inhalation of impure air and noxious gases. Disease induced by any one of these causes, almost invariably manifests itself by disorder in the functions of the liver; there the alarm is sounded first, and if not attended to promptly the trouble is liable to extend to other vital organs. Dyspepsia, constipation, chronic diarrhoea, disease of the kidneys, dropsy, rheumatism, catarrh, consumption and various forms of skin diseases often proceed directly from derangement of the liver. Attention to the liver forestalls other diseases. The remote cause of a majority of our ordinary ailments, is taking cold; the natural functions of the body are retarded, and waste material is retained in the system long enough to do mischief. The usual remedy is to take a cathartic or a laxative in order to remove it. But a more convenient and a more natural plan, in ordinary cases, is to cut off the food supply for twenty-four hours, and trust to nature to do the rest. Instead of food, a few teacupsful of hot water drank during the day will hasten the desired result. Whenever the bowels become constipated there is an uncomfortable feeling in the system, often accompanied by restlessness and anxiety of mind. The above suggestions, if followed strictly, will bring relief more promptly than medicine and without its inconveniences.

THE YELLOW FEVER FUNGUS.—Dr. Domingo Frere, of Rio Janerio, claims to have discovered the yellow fever fungus. He has named it Cryptococcus Zanthogenicus, and finds that animals inoculated with it soon show all the usual signs of the disease before death and on dissection.

Poisonous and Troublesome Plants of California—No. 2.

Aconitum Fischeri—"California Monkshood"—"Blue-Weed."

The ranchmen of the high valleys of California are often heard discussing the probable cause of certain crazy fits and other sicknesses that afflict their sheep, cattle and sometimes horses. If the poison lily, described in a previous article, is at hand, the mischief is generally very properly laid to the account of that rogue secreted in the meadows.

But in wooded regions, where the mountain streams seldom have meadow lands bordering them, the mischief is often charged to a certain laurel shrub called "Sheep poison," or "Calico bush." And while this charge is often correct, yet it is most frequently an error, the culprit being a very innocent and indeed very handsome flower growing along the streams, and known as "California Monkshood," or generally "Blue-weed." Animals affected by this very hungry and the feed very scarce, or the picket line short, the mischief is the sooner done.

Now, the plant that produces all this trouble is a species of Aconitum—thank goodness, the only one of that poison genus found on this coast. It is an herb, often growing three to six feet high, with large, nearly arbuticulate leaves, cleft into three to five lobes, and mostly at the base of the stem. The latter is erect, unbranched, and terminating in a loose raceme or spike of large showy blue or whitish flowers, the uppermost of its five sepals being arched like the cowl of a priest, suggesting the popular name of monkshood. The species of monkshood which is so celebrated as a medicine is Aconitum Napellus, indigenous to Europe, but often met with in our gardens, where it finds a welcome because of its large, curious flowers and long time of blooming.

The genus Aconitum belongs to the larger order Ranunculaceae, which includes 31 genera, comprising over 550 known species of plants. They are distributed over the earth, but most abundantly in the northern temperate and frigid regions.

With few exceptions, the whole order is

"CALIFORNIA MONKSHOOD," OR "BLUE WEED"—Aconitum Fischeri.

Monkshood stagger and reel about, lie down and rise again frequently, turn about uneasily, bite at their sides and gripe and groan as if in great pain. Not unfrequently lingering sickness, loss of appetite and death ensue.

Any good purgative medicine, if administered at once, will afford relief, as the distress is caused by the acid biting principle called aconite, which resides in every part of the plant mentioned.

The instinct of animals generally protects them against poisonous plants, but often want of other food tempts them to eat, and sometimes their taste has been perverted so as not to constitute a criterion.

Sheep are most commonly affected by eating Monkshood, and this results from confinement upon limited ranges for fear of coyote; or mayhap, from hurrying them over high passes where there is little food, and that little is strange to the animals.

But often a band of milch cows are halted for the night on a green spot of meadow, the owner thinking himself fortunate in finding so rich a lushing ground. The treacherous blueweed is devoured with the succulent grass, and sickness or death follows.

Frequently horsemen picket their animals to the alders by stream banks, and wonder soon after what ails their beasts. If the animal is pervaded with acid or narcotic properties, which are deleterious if not poisonous, but which, by intelligent treatment, are rendered innocuous or medicinal.

Scarcely any are edible for either man or beast. Heleborus, another highly medicinal plant, belongs in this order, but no species of it is found on this coast. A variety of one of the species of Actea, or bane-berry, grows luxuriantly in our high swamps.

The bright red berries the size of peas, borne in a short spike, often tempt the appetite when one is fatigued and hungry from long journeys over the mountains. The few but very large and decomposed leaves will serve to distinguish it. The genus Aquilegia, or columbine, has four species on this coast, all beautiful and curious with their large, bright-colored corollas, each ornamented with five long, tapering spurs. While the columbines are prized for setting off the table bouquets, like bell-glasses and Chinese lanterns in a grove, yet children and invalids are often injured by their odors, especially when they are fading. The same may be said of the larkspur—Delphinium—fifteen species of which may be found here.

It is also true, but not generally known, that all the buttercups and crowfoots are poisonous. Take one petal of the common yellow buttercup of our California meadows and lay it on the cheek of an infant, and soon a red spot or blister will be formed. Sore lips among children is often caused by putting flowers of this order into their mouths. The happiness of many a bright picnic girl has been mysteriously destroyed soon after she had collected her lovely bouquet.

Children returning from a ramble in the country often have headache or fever solely on account of the deleterious plants with which they have come in contact. Let careful parents learn and remember that snakes and noxious insects are not the most dangerous to their playful children, but also some of the beautiful flowers in their gardens as well as on the common.

These facts suggest the need of remedies. The best remedy is prevention, and this can come about only by knowledge. So it would be not only a pleasant undertaking, but a profitable investment to have children instructed in the rudiments of botanical science, at least so far that they may be able to detect and avoid poisonous plants like these so closely related to the deadly Aconitum described and figured in this paper.

Household Hints.

Household Ensilage.

"E," writing to the London Standard, says it may be interesting to some to know that the farmer's wife, in the Netherlands, has her silo. This is an earthenware jar about two feet high. Into one such in summer time she shreds kidney beans; into another she puts shelled green peas; into another broad beans; and having thus formed a six-inch layer she sprinkles on the top a little salt, and presses the whole firmly down. Then comes another layer, with another sprinkling, and so on, until she has come to the end of her vegetables, leaving a light weight on the top, which serves to keep all firmly pressed and exclude the air. When more vegetables are ripe she repeats the process until the jar is filled. A good substantial weight it then placed on the top and the opening covered with brown paper, and her object is attained, viz.: Ensilage for her family, i. e., vegetables preserved green for winter use, more or less good according to taste, when brought to table.

COLLARED CATTLE'S HEAD.—Scald the head a few minutes, then scrape with a knife to remove all the hair. Clean thoroughly; divide the head and remove the brains. Boil till the bones will remove easily, which will be in about two hours. When the head is cleared of bones flatten it on the table, sprinkle over a thick layer of parsley, then some thick slices of ham; then some hard-boiled eggs sliced thin, and put a seasoning of pounded mace, white pepper and nutmeg between each layer; roll the whole up in a cloth as tightly as possible. Boil for four hours, and when taken out of the pot place a heavy weight on it as for other collars. Do not remove the cloth and bindings till cold. For the above you will require the yolks of six hard-boiled eggs, four tablespoonfuls of minced parsley, four blades of pounded mace, and half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg.

LEMON CHEESECAKES.—Take  $\frac{1}{2}$  pound of butter, 1 pound of loaf sugar, six eggs, the rind of 2 lemons and the juice of 3. Put all into a stewpan, carefully grating the rind and straining the juice of the lemons, keep stirring the mixture until the sugar is dissolved, and it begins to thicken; when of the thickness of honey, it is done; then put it into small jars, and keep in a dry place. This mixture may be made in large quantities, as it will keep for three or four months. When made into cheesecakes, add a few pounded almonds, or candied peel; line some patty-pans with good puff paste, rather more than half fill them with the mixture and bake for about a quarter of an hour in a brisk oven.

CHICKEN PIE.—Put into a saucepan one quart of water, an onion, a little chopped parsley, a piece of celery, and pepper and salt; simmer for an hour, then put in the chicken, cut into convenient pieces, and stew until thoroughly cooked. Line a dish with good pie crust, then put in the chicken in layers, with pieces of hard-boiled egg between each layer; add to the gravy a small piece of butter rolled in flour, and a quarter of a pint of cream; let it just boil, and pour over the chicken; put on the top crust, and bake until the pastry is done.

SEED LUNCHEON CAKES.—1. 1 lb. flour,  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. butter,  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. white sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one teaspoonful of caraway (best ground), and a little milk. Bake at once in large or small cakes. 2.  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. flour,  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. butter, 3 oz. white sugar, a teaspoonful of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of carraways, 1 oz. candied peel, two eggs and a wineglassful of milk. Bake one hour and a quarter in a tin lined with buttered paper. Four or six ounces of currants or sultanas may be used instead of the carraways.

ITALIAN MACAROONS.—Blanch a pound of almonds, pound them fine with the whites of four eggs, add  $2\frac{1}{2}$  pounds of the best white sugar, and pound all together; add the whites of six more eggs, and bake, adding slips of blanched almonds on the top of each macaroon before putting in the oven.

Lodge Locals.

Recorders are invited to correspond. Lodges may also send suitable reading here for "Council of the Order."

OUR CITY LODGES.

San Francisco, No. 4.

San Francisco, No. 4, the oldest City Lodge, has been very successful during the last term in giving monthly socials and entertainments. The first one for this term, which was also their seventh anniversary, was given in Cosmopolitan Hall, on Wednesday evening, 23rd inst. This large hall was so well filled with Workmen and their families to an extent that nothing but standing room was left. Quite a number of our leading Workmen and several Grand Officers were present. The following programme was offered: Part First—Address, Wm. H. Fuller, M. W.; piano solo, C. E. Ehman; recitation, Mrs. L. Aronson; piano solo, Miss Fanny M. Danforth (daughter of Deputy Danforth); recitation, Henry Benhajan (encore); duet, piano and violin, "The Val d'Andorre," Master J. and Miss K. Gruenbaum (son and daughter of Brother Henry Gruenbaum), encore; tenor solo, S. Koppel, accompanied by Mr. H. G. Unna. Part Second—Recitation, "The Georgia Volunteers," Master Alexander Levison (encore); vocal solo, Mrs. L. Aronson; piano solo, Miss Fannie M. Danforth (encore); recitation, Henry Benhajan (encore); tenor solo, S. Koppel (encore), accompanied by Mr. H. G. Unna; duet, Master Morris and Julius Gruenbaum. This very pleasing and instructive entertainment called for many compliments from visitors, and Fanny M. Danforth and Miss K. Gruenbaum were each presented with a large basket of flowers. The selections of Miss Danforth were difficult pieces, and rendered in a most artistic manner. Miss K. Gruenbaum and her brothers, Morris and Julius, rendered their pieces in a high degree of excellence. They may be properly termed a musical family, who have the best advantages for a thorough musical education.

Harmony, No. 9.

After the installation of the officers of Harmony, No. 9, L. Johnsen, the efficient Recorder, presented Wm. J. Brownrigg with a very fine solid gold P. M. W. badge. In reviewing his services as an officer of this Lodge he said his record was a long continued success. Six months after he became a member of the Lodge he was elected Guide, and each successive term advanced to the office of O., F., and M. W. Brother Brownrigg accepted this souvenir with evident satisfaction, thanked his warm-hearted and generous brethren for this gift and renewed his loyalty by pledging his best efforts for the future welfare of Harmony Lodge. Engraved on the jewel are the words "Presented to P. M. W., Wm. J. Brownrigg, by the members of Harmony, No. 9, Jan. 15, 1884." A little celebration was had afterwards, and all went merry as the marriage bell.

Unity, No. 27.

On Tuesday evening, January 22, there was a large attendance in Unity Lodge, No. 27. After the business of the Lodge had been finished, a part of which was to appoint a Committee on applications, Brother T. D. Martin, the veteran Financier, took occasion to review the history of Unity Lodge, during the last term, under the administration of Brother J. N. Block, M. W., and incidentally his labors since he was a member of Unity Lodge, being a term of over two years. The appreciation in which he was held by the members of Unity was shown in his unanimous re-election as M. W., an unusual occurrence for Unity, 27. As an earnest of their regard and esteem he presented him a very fine solid gold P. M. W. badge, on which is the following inscription: "Presented to P. M. W., Jas. N. Block, for services rendered, by the members of Unity Lodge, No. 27, A. O. U. W., Jan. 22, 1884." It was a complete surprise to Brother Block, and although a ready speaker, he seemed to be choked in utterance, and could only thank his brethren of Unity, hoping that his efforts and services in the future would in some measure repay them for the many tokens of esteem that they have shown to him. It was one of the grand meetings of Unity, No. 27, and will be remembered by all who had the pleasure of being there.

Valley, No. 30.

Valley, No. 30, will celebrate the fact of its having 1,000 members, together with its anniversary, during the session of the Grand Lodge in April. Arrangements are now being made, and like everything that this Lodge does, a most successful as well as immense gathering may be looked for.

Sts. John, No. 73.

Sts. John Lodge, No. 73, gave a musical and literary entertainment in Shields' Building, this city, recently. The hall was filled with the families and friends of the members and the evening passed very pleasantly. Grand Lecturer Reading delivered the address.

Excelsior, No. 126.

Excelsior Lodge, No. 126, met in Excelsior Hall, on Mission street, between 19th and 20th, on Thursday evening, 17th inst. This was their first meeting in their new hall, and as it was generally understood that this would be an installation night, there was a large attendance. In a previous issue we gave a general description of this A. O. U. W. hall, and a good cut of the building. The Lodge room is 29x55 feet, with ceiling 17½ feet from the floor, and painted with light tint of blue, and frescoed by District Deputy, Frank S. Poland. The canopies were made by Brother Walcom, and are neat and artistic. The black walnut chairs for members are from the Indianapolis Chair Manufacturing Co. The pedestals, desks and large chairs for the officers were made to order by Brother R. Herring, and the fine brussels carpet was furnished by Messrs. Hardie & Darling. It seemed to those who inspected this superb Lodge, that every appointment and fixture had been studied and carefully considered with a view to perfection. This is shown in the well regulated system of ventilation, which was well tested on this evening. There were over 100 members present, while the air was pure, without open windows and drafts. The installing officers were Deputy Poland, acting as G. M. W., Deputy McKay, P. G. M. W., Deputy Carroll as G. F., Deputy Jordan, O., and Deputy Lemont as G. G. Brother Poland delivered the installation service in a very pleasant, correct and dignified manner, and without the use of a ritual. After installation, Brother Southwick, M. W., entered upon his duties, and as such proved himself worthy of his responsible position. The thanks of the Lodge were tendered to the several Deputies for their labors in installing the officers of this Lodge. Deputy Danforth, E. F. Loud, P. M. W., E. M. Reading, of the Guarantee Fund, and others, made short congratulatory speeches. A resolution was offered commending everyone who had been instrumental as projector, contractor or artist in erecting and furnishing this temple dedicated to the A. O. U. W. As it took in the entire Lodge, an amendment was offered to take in the rest of mankind, and so the subject dropped. The Librarian, Brother Sam Booth, announced that an entertainment would be given on the 18th to procure funds for the library. It was a grand meeting and a grand event.

Olympic, No. 127

This Lodge held a very enjoyable meeting Tuesday evening, January 15th, on which occasion Rev. Robert McKenzie was initiated. Pertinent speeches under the head of "Good of the Order" were made by E. F. Loud, P. M. W., of Valley, No. 30, E. Danforth, D. G. M., Brothers Cummings and Adams, of Olympic, Brother Lewis, father of the Order in this city, the WATCHMAN representative and others.

Memorial, No. 174.

A public installation of officers elect of Memorial, No. 174, together with a very select literary and musical programme, on Monday evening, January 14th, was witnessed by a very large and highly pleased audience. Fraternity Hall, their Lodge room, was elaborately decorated with emblems, streamers and esthetic flags, while over all were these words in large letters: MEMORIAL, NO. 174, A. O. U. W., WELCOME. The following programme was well rendered: Address of welcome, Jas Wallace, M. W.; piano duet, "Il Trovatore," Messrs. I. Simon and C. S. Hoffman; recitation, Henry Benhajan (encore); vocal solo, Mrs. F. Yslas (encore); violin solo, piano accompaniment, "Fantisie Pastorale," Master Albert H. Rademaker, Miss Hattie Rademaker; violin solo, J. W. McKenzie; address, E. M. Reading, P. M. W.; installation ceremonies, F. S. Poland, D. D. G. M. W. and Grand Officers; vocal solo, Miss Minnie Kind; cornet solo, I. C. Coggin (encore); recitation, "The Dude," Mrs. E. Holland (encore); guitar serenade, W. H. Bischoff; violin solo, Master Magnin; recitation, Prof. H. C. Eastman; accordion solo, L. H. P. Miller; closing remarks, I. Crosthwaite. As will be seen by the number of encores the programme was a fine one and well appreciated, reflecting credit not only on its participants, but also upon those who designed the entertainment.

Evening Star, No. 23, D. of H

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—This Lodge now numbering 44 members in good standing and two applications and with the prospect of a considerable increase of applications in the near future, is growing slowly but surely toward prosperity. The Lodge now meets at Unity Hall of the Foresters' Building, No. 20 Eddy street, in a cosy, beautifully fitted up Lodge room with all the necessary conveniences for the proper carrying on of the work of a D. of H. Lodge. Evening Star decided to become a sick benefit Lodge on June 1, 1882, paying a benefit of $2.50 per week to commence with. The members after due thought considered that this new idea would tend to strengthen the Lodge. The dues will now be 50 cents per month, and the initiation fee for the present the same—one dollar. The Lodge has decided to celebrate its anniversary by giving an invitation entertainment and ball about the beginning of March. The committee having it in hand will do all in their power to make it a pleasant time for those that attend. In a future issue of the WATCHMAN due notice will be given of the date of the anniversary celebration. The installation of officers took place on the evenings of January 3d and 17th, 1883, D. D. G. M. W., F. S. Poland, being the installing officer, with a large delegation of Golden Dawn, No. 10, present. At the meeting of the 17th we had a visit from the Sisters Meek, of Unity Lodge, of Grass Valley. They expressed their pleasure at the reception given to them. The Lodge had a good time singing, etc., concluding with a spread in the banquet hall. This Lodge will do its best to become a live Lodge, and to make its stars shine as bright as the day.

FREDERICK BIRCH.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Haywards, No. 18.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On January 15th it was our privilege to be present at the installation of the officers of Haywards Lodge, No. 18. For several weeks the brothers of this enterprising Lodge had been preparing for a grand time on the installation of their officers. Invitations had been sent to the various Lodges in Alameda county to be present. The result was all that could be desired, as nearly all of the Lodges were well represented. Promptly at the regular hour of opening, Brother Bullock, M. W., called the Lodge to order. It was interesting to note the rapid and easy manner in which the order of business was disposed of. At the proper time for installation, Brother S. S. Cunningham, D. D. G. M., made the announcement that Brother Chas. E. Alden, D. D. G. M., from Oakland, was present with his efficient "team," and it gave him pleasure to ask Brother Alden to take charge of the installation ceremony. The officers installed are noted elsewhere. While it has been our privilege to witness often such interesting ceremonies, we take pleasure in saying that on this occasion the entire work was exceedingly well rendered, and certainly Brother Alden and his faithful few are entitled to great credit.

Then came the good of the Order. Brother J. W. Watson, P. M. W. from Brooklyn, No. 3, was introduced as the orator of the evening. Brother W. was in his most happy mood, and right earnestly and in glowing and eloquent terms did he respond, giving as brief introduction the founding of the Order by Father Upchurch, the work it has already done, and the bright future for its mission if only the brethren will prove true to their trust. His remarks were listened to with marked attention. Then came songs and short but pointed speeches from many of the brothers, all tending to show that their hearts were in the noble work. The Lodge was then closed, and 100 strong, hearty and noble Workmen marched to Haywards Hotel, where all partook of roast turkey, chicken, cold ham, ice-cream, etc., to the satisfaction of all.

At a late hour, the brothers returned to their homes, feeling it was good to have met with the brothers at Haywards.

PRESTO.

Oak Leaf, No. 35.

Oak Leaf Lodge, No. 35, had a delightful meeting on Monday the 21st inst., it being the occasion of an official visit from Deputy Grand Master, E. Danforth and Grand Lecturer, E. M. Reading. The visiting brothers were introduced by Past Master Donaldson, and were received in a neat speech of welcome by the Master Workman, Brother L. L. Wallace. Under the head of "Good of the Order" Brother Danforth was introduced and spoke at some length, referring to the business of the coming Grand Lodge and to the claims that will be made in that body by the Relief Committee of this city. He also spoke of the proposition to build a hall for the Order in this city. Brother Reading was then introduced and was warmly received. He thanked the Lodge for their cordial reception and immediately proceeded to eulogize the founders of the Order in this State, and paid a glowing and beautiful tribute to the noble pioneers who had given the State one of the most efficient means of protecting families from want ever known. In referring to the origin of the Order, Brother Reading's eloquent picture of the trials and difficulties that were overcome, the heroic fortitude of its founders, its grand triumphs and its mighty power as a fraternal organization of the land created an enthusiasm seldom seen in a Lodge room. After the close of Brother Reading's speech a recess was taken that the members might be introduced to the visiting brethren. The meeting and reception extended to Brothers Danforth and Reading will not soon be forgotten by the members of Oak Leaf Lodge, No. 35. On the Lodge evening preceding this, a WATCHMAN representative was also present and beheld the conferring of the J. W. charge to a candidate by the newly elected M. W., Brother Wallace, in a manner seldom if ever excelled by the veterans in the work.

Mission, No. 56.

Mission Lodge, No. 56, of Mission San Jose, dedicated its new hall Saturday evening, the 5th inst. The hall, which occupies the second story of the new $3,000 building, was built especially for this Lodge by Past Master Ehrmann, and has been leased by the Lodge for a term of five years. Over $700 has been spent in the furnishing and fitting up of the hall, and they now can boast of a Lodge room whose superior cannot be found outside of San Francisco. The exercises on the evening in question consisted of a public installation, and a dedicatory address by T. C. Huxley, Master Workman elect, who traced the history of the Lodge from its organization to the present time, and gave many words of counsel and good cheer. Mission is in a condition to appreciate its new quarters, having met so long in a hall facetiously dubbed by some of its members "the sweat-house." It gets its new quarters on even better financial terms than the former.

COLUSA COUNTY.

Confidence, No. 117.

Nicholas Nelk, Recorder of this Lodge, writes from Williams, Colusa county, under date of January 9th: "As regards Lodge matters, I will state that we get along very well and hold our own, but have nothing of especial interest to mention. I will try and get a list of subscribers in the near future for your valuable paper. As for myself, I could not get along without the WATCHMAN very well, for it has so much useful information which does me good to read."

Colusa, No. 66.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Complying with your request, I send you list of officers for present term. The officers were installed on the evening of January 8th, by District Deputy, Moses Stinchfield. The Lodge has never had a better set of officers, and a boom is expected this term. In fact, the boom has commenced already, two applications coming in the first meeting. Colusa Lodge is over five years old, and has had but three deaths, which not only speaks well for the climate, but for the care exercised by the Lodge in admitting members. The Lodge now has 81 members.

Yours in C., H. and P.,

A. M. PEARSALL, Acting Recorder.

DEL NORTE COUNTY.

Organization of Willows Lodge, No. 28, D. of H.

District Deputy J. H. Kimball organized the above named Degree Lodge in Crescent City on the 13th inst. Members of Bay City Lodge, No. 111, with their wives and daughters, entered as charter members to the number of about 60. The officers for the first term were elected and installed as follows: C. L. Rose, P. C. of H.; L. Persons, C. of H.; Mrs. M. H. Clendenin, L. of H.; M. Hoalton, C. of C.; W. S. Riddell, Rec.; D. S. B. Taylor, Fin.; H. Barman, Receiver; Mrs. N. N. Brown, S. M.; O. J. Gates, I. W.; R. B. Dickson, O. W. The appointed officers were as follows: J. H. Kimball, A. to C. of H.; Mesdames H. Barman and A. Gregor, First and Second Maids of Honor to L. of H.

HUMBOLDT COUNTY.

Bay City, No. 111.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—As I never have informed you of what we were doing here in the northern part of the State, perhaps a few notes from here may be interesting. We have a prosperous Lodge of A. O. U. W. here numbering 92 members in good standing and although we have been in existence over four years, we have only lost one member by death and that was accidental. We have members enough to have full Lodge meetings, but I am sorry to say that the attendance at our meetings is not what it should be, and in order to awaken an interest among the members we have started a Lodge of the Degree of Honor, hoping that if we can get the ladies interested they will urge their husbands to attend our meetings, and as they are really the parties to be benefited they should do so. I installed the officers of Bay City Lodge, No. 111, last Wednesday evening, and on Saturday evening instituted the Lodge of the Degree of Honor. I enclose you a list of the officers installed in each Lodge, and I am in hopes in future that we shall have good meetings and have a boom in the Order.

Yours in C. H., and P.,

J. H. KIMBALL, D. D. G. M.

Eureka, January 20th.

OFFICIAL VISITATIONS.—Deputy Grand Master Danforth, and Grand Lecturer Reading will make an official visit to Willows Lodge, on Monday, Jan. 28th, and to Yolo Lodge, Woodland, on Tuesday, Jan. 29th.

LAKE COUNTY.

Oliver Lodge, No. 220.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—I suppose you would like to hear from this section of the country. Oliver Lodge, No. 220, holds its own. We had only one initiation last year but hope the year '84 will swell our number more than last year. Our officers were duly installed by P. M. W., D. Poston, acting as D. G. M. W., and Brother J. L. Read elected Representative. Inclosed you will find names of officers for the ensuing term. D. L. BROOKS, Recorder.

Middletown, Jan. 19th.

MENDOCINO COUNTY.

Mendocino, No. 70.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—On January 2d, Mendocino Lodge, No. 70, prepared Lodge room, supper room and hall for celebrating the installation ceremonies publicly, with banquet and dance to follow. Dispensation having been granted, and District Deputy A. O. Carpenter being in attendance, the rites were promptly entered upon at the regular Lodge hour, in the presence of a large attendance, the families and invited friends of members. Everything passed off smoothly and without a break, and after the closing declaration by the installing officer, an adjournment was had to the banquet hall, where uncertain hours and certain good things were disposed of to the sound of merry chat and laughing repartee. After the last chick and child was seated, the younger members and friends wended their way to Murray's Hall and danced until the "wee sma' hours ayant the twal" warned them that good health and good sense demanded an adjournment. This Lodge numbers 61 good members, and is wide awake and progressive.

The 3d was ushered in by drifting rain, yet nevertheless the District Deputy departed in good season for Westport, No. 207.

Thirty miles away, where another set of officers were to be presented to their brethren under the seal of rank conferred. But for the inclemency of the evening, this, too, would have been public. As it was, many friends had gathered upon the strength of mere rumor, but were doomed to disappointment. After the ceremony was concluded, exemplification of the work by the M. W., C. N. Bear, and District Deputy Carpenter, and the discussion of knotty questions heretofore raised in the Lodge, kept the brothers until midnight. This Lodge is growing steadily, has a fine corps of officers, and has exhibited a truly fraternal spirit in assisting afflicted brothers, and carrying assessments for indigent and dilatory ones. As

Navarro, No. 200,

Was to hold its installation on the Saturday following, the installing officers had no daylight to burn for the Westport brothers. Forty miles of mud and rain, with a half day with the Mendocino officers in the work, took up all of the two days intervening. Number 200 is just that per cent ahead of some Lodges in fraternal feeling and good cheer, and had as usual prepared a fine supper to close the labors of the year. Her incoming officers were found singularly well up in the work, and were installed without delay. This Lodge pays weekly sick benefits of six dollars per week, and in connection with the Good Templars, owns its hall. The supper room below was crowded with waiting wives and daughters; and supper, blindman's bluff, social converse and jollity lasted until midnight. Navarro Lodge has generally rotated its principal officers, and is one of the few country Lodges where they have their charges so as to deliver them effectively and impressively.

Gualala, No. 221.

Held a public installation on the Monday following, having elected almost an entire new set of officers. Instead of promoting its officers, this Lodge has adopted the plan of giving all its members a chance to officiate in some capacity in its government. Its Past Master has been returned to the principal chair, however, as being the best qualified therefor, by reason of experience and knowledge of the secret work. The work of installation concluded, the assembly was dismissed and the work of the Order entered upon. This, with a fine lunch provided by the thoughtful wives of members, kept the Lodge busy until after midnight. This Lodge pays five dollars per week sick benefits, and has had one brother upon its sick list for some months. It is earnest, progressive, and intelligent, and full of fraternal feeling, having a membership of 31.

Ukiah, No. 33.

From Gualala ninety miles travel took the District Deputy to Ukiah to again officiate at the installation of No. 33's officers, which was done without parade or eclat. After all but one had been duly installed, Grand Master Rogers was called upon to install the District Deputy as Outside Watchman, which was impressively done, but closed with hilarity and jocose remarks. Ukiah, No. 33, has 68 members, and works its way with extreme care. It was organized nearly five years ago, has not had a death, and only one serious illness during that time. What Lodge can produce a better record?

X.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Thinking you might wish to hear something from the home Lodge of our G. M. W., I have concluded to drop you a line or two. Our attendance is not as large as I could desire, but if any one of our brothers doubts the real fraternity existing, let him attempt to tear himself away from the true, genuine, manly support of such brothers as constitute Ukiah Lodge, No. 33. We suffered a great loss when our former Recorder, Brother D. H. Tucker, left us for San Francisco. This evening the members are invited to the residence of our Master Workman, to a reunion in honor of Brother H. Price, our Financier, who leaves for Seattle next week. He has been Financier for the term of two years, and as such has been brought into close contact with every individual member. At our last meeting there was universal expression of regret at his departure, but he goes in the confident hope and expectation of meeting genuine fraternity in the breasts of our Order wherever duty may call him. The parting is especially regretted between him and the G. M. W., as Brother Price has worked in his office ever since April, in the capacity of amanuensis. Yours fraternally, Ukiah, Jan. 19th. N. E.

MODOC COUNTY.

Lookout, No. 211.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—It is so seldom we see any communication from this part of the State that I trust a few items would not come amiss. We labor under a number of inconveniences in this section, speaking from a fraternal standpoint. We are, with the exception of Alturas Lodge, about 100 miles from a Lodge of our Order, so that we have but few opportunities of personal fraternal exchanges. I have been a member of this Lodge nearly ever since its inception, and most of the time a constant attendant at its meetings, and have in that time met with but one brother not a member of this Lodge. Notwithstanding all this, our Lodge is healthy and prosperous, and we are well up in the work as we understand it. We have 24 members, and during the two years since the Lodge has been established not one single member has been delinquent on assessment. On Jan. 11th, its second anniversary, the Lodge gave a reception. The entertainment consisted of songs, a lecture, readings, a supper and social dance. The opening ode was sung by the choir and members. Brother D. D., P. M. W., W. D. Morris, delivered a very instructive lecture on the objects and benefits of the Order. Solos and duets were rendered in fine style by the local talent. Some fine music was discoursed on the organ by Mrs. W. D. Morris. Brother L. C. Carpenter read a telling selection, which was loudly applauded. The closing ode was sung by the choir and members, after which the room was cleared for dancing. At 12 o'clock supper was spread, to which all did ample justice. Dancing was then resumed and indulged in till the "wee sma' hours." There were about 150 persons present, and all voted it the entertainment par excellence of the season.

E. ETZENHOUSER, Recorder.

SACRAMENTO COUNTY.

Union, No. 21, Sacramento, No. 80, and Lily of the Valley, No. 11, D. of H.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Last Saturday evening was a grand occasion for the six hundred Workmen of the Capital City. It was the time set for the public installation of the officers of the three Lodges of Sacramento, namely—Union Lodge, No. 21, Sacramento Lodge, No. 80, and the Degree of Honor Lodge, Lily of the Valley, No. 11. It had been raining during the afternoon and evening, but notwithstanding the storminess of the weather the large hall was comfortably filled as early as eight o'clock, and a considerable number came in after that hour. District Deputy S. A. Wolf, Past Master Young, and Past Master Eugene Gregory officiated in the installation ceremonies. After the ceremonies of installation were concluded, Mr. A. S. Hopkins, Chairman of Ceremonies, addressed the audience, briefly outlining some of the objects and aims of the Order. His remarks were well timed and highly appreciated and applauded by those present. The literary and musical programme which had been arranged for the evening, had been somewhat interrupted by the rain, but a sufficient number responded to bring the entertainment quite up to the anticipations of the audience. The first was a piano solo, by Miss Mamie Roth, a miss of ten or twelve years of age, and it elicited enthusiastic applause; the recitation of "The Soldier's Welcome," by little Blanche Ficks, only five years old, was very good, and she was followed with a recitation, by her younger sister—"The Soldier's Day," which was highly applauded. Next came a song by E. F. Ashworth, that was indeed first class; then a reading, Miss Annie Davis; duet, for flute and piano, "La Fille de Madame Angot," C. A. Neale and Miss Jessie Cameron; song, Misses Annie and Mary Davis; song, Pearl Jackson and Edna Godley; reading, Miss Annie Ash; song, Joseph Wiseman; song, Mrs. W. C. Fitch; song, Pearl Jackson and E. Godley; piano solo, Gertie Gerrish. The programme being finished the audience rose and sang the closing ode to the tune of "Sweet Bye and Bye," and were dismissed, all highly pleased with the evening's entertainment.

AT NO. 252 MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.
(ELEVATOR 12 FRONT STREET.)

GRAND LODGE A. O. U. W. ENDORSEMENT.

Resolved, That we consider the complete form in which the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN has for several years published the list of subordinate Lodges of this Jurisdiction, with the names of their presiding and recording officers, and time and place of meeting, is a great convenience and benefit to our Order, and we would recommend that each and every Lodge continue the publication of its card, and afford such other support to our excellent society paper as their means will allow, and further, urge each member of our Order to give it countenance and material aid.

The above was adopted by the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., April 5, 1883.

Favorable to Advertisers

The WATCHMAN enjoys a very large and influential circulation. It is certain that no other periodical is now patronized by a better class of industrial, professional and business men. In fact, our subscription list embraces many of the foremost business and representative men throughout the towns and cities of the coast. We have pride in making our paper "clean and handsome," and first class in all respects—to the benefit of both our readers and advertisers.

Increased Death Rate.

Since the advent of the New Year, death notices have been coming into the office of the Grand Recorder at a rate quite astonishing, compared with that of the six months previous. Two assessments are to be called for February, and probably two more will follow for March. Such must certainly be the case at the present death rate. But we remember the same state of things existed last year, therefore we conclude that the winter season is less favorable in a sanitary point of view than summer. The difference, however, is greater than we had before supposed. And yet, though our death losses should be so great as to necessitate two assessments each and every month, still the assurance of $2,000 each Workman has guaranteed to him in the Order is so cheap, that no one of good common sense ought to grumble. It would take a constant payment of $24 a year for more than 83 years to pay into the treasury of the A. O. U. W. an aggregate sum as great as will be given back at the death of the member paying. Few who join expect to live that long, we presume. They'll not do it if they do expect it. No one ever has, and it is pretty safe to say no one ever will pay to the Order much more than one-fourth of what it will pay to his beneficiaries in return. Then how will the Order stand on its legs? the querist will ask. Simply by using the money paid in by persons joining and leaving the Order before they die, we answer.

ANOTHER Lodge that owns its own hall is Lookout, No. 211, of Modoc county.

The Important Question.

In the ranks of the A. O. U. W., in this Jurisdiction, are many lawyers and judges of courts, some of them, no doubt, as able in their profession as any in the State. We have every reason to believe that they, as a class, bear as much love for the Order as any other class, and are ready to do any reasonable service in its behalf.

One grave matter confronts us, and our legal brethren are, above all others, best qualified to help us out of the difficulty. It is one to which we have before referred, but its importance prompts us to present it again, lest in the press of minor things that will demand the attention of the Grand Lodge at its next session, this may not receive that careful and wise attention its importance demands. We refer to the matter of giving notice to members of assessments. The law requiring such notice to be given is one of general application, and a part of the Beneficiary Law, which we have no right to abrogate nor disregard. Under it each and every member is entitled to a written or printed notice of each assessment issued by the Lodge, and without such notice it is clear that he cannot be legally suspended or any of his rights, under this Beneficiary Certificate, impaired. In case of litigation, if the plea of want of notice had to be met, we should have to prove the serving of the notice in accordance with the law, or lose the case; that is, we should have to prove the serving of a written or printed notice on the member personally, or by mailing the same, post paid, to his last known address or place of residence. Such proof should not be left to the chance of being able to bring the Financier into court to testify. That thing we might not be able to do, or if getting him, he might not be able to swear positively, after the lapse of many months or perhaps years, to the performance of that duty. It appears to us that this business should be made a part of the records of the Lodge, and so definitely stated that no reasonable doubt could possibly arise in the minds of court or jury, that notice had been legally served. But here again, arise many difficulties. The records of a Lodge might be burned or otherwise destroyed. To record the name of each member every month with date and fact of sending legal notice would in many of our Lodges put such an additional amount of work on Financiers as to necessitate the payment of no inconsiderable salaries to such officers. But somehow this work must be done and done well, or we shall surely pay dearly for the neglecting of it. We solicit suggestions as to the most feasible plan to accomplish the desired object. We ask our good brethren learned in the law to give us the benefit of their knowledge on matters of this character. We ask our old society men, experienced in legislation, to frame an enactment that shall not only meet the legal difficulties as may be suggested by our legal brethren, but that shall be simple and easily carried out, if that be possible.

District Meeting.

Circular of Grand Lodge Committee on Amendments.

The following circular has been addressed to the various subordinate Lodges throughout the State. We publish it in order that each member may have an opportunity to read and consider its provisions carefully, to the end that he may vote intelligently upon it when it comes up in his own Lodge:

STOCKTON, Cal., Jan. 3, 1884.

To all Lodges Subordinate to the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., State of California—GREETING:

1st. The undersigned, the Committee on Amendments to Constitution and by-laws, in compliance with the instructions of the Grand Lodge at its session, held in San Francisco, Cal., April, 1883 (see proceedings, page 123), herewith submit for your careful and prompt consideration "Proposition No. 8, Amendment No. 15," Bureau of Relief.

2d. Each Lodge, upon receipt of the amendment, is respectfully requested to give due notice to each member of the Lodge of the time of meeting at which said proposed amendment will be taken up for consideration, in order that, as far as possible, full and impartial expression may be had relative thereto.

3d. The committee being directed to present a printed report on the first day of the next Grand Lodge Session, the M. W. and Recorder of the Lodge are earnestly requested to forward, immediately after the Lodge has voted upon the amendment, the result of its action, under seal of the Lodge, to Eugene Lehe, Chairman of Committee on Amendments, Stockton, Cal.

4th. Trusting that each Lodge will at once see and realize the importance of immediate action, owing to the approaching time of the Session of the Grand Lodge.

We remain respectfully yours in C. H. and P.,

Proposed Constitution for the Bureau of Relief.

PROPOSITION NO. 8. AMENDMENT NO. 15.
CONSTITUTION OF THE BUREAU OF RELIEF, UNDER THE JURISDICTION OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CALIFORNIA.

ARTICLE I, SEC. 1.—That a Bureau of Relief, to be known as the General Bureau of Relief, A. O. U. W. of California, be, and such Bureau of Relief is, hereby established, which shall be constituted by the annual election of one delegate from each Lodge within this Jurisdiction.

SEC. 2. The officers of said Bureau shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer, each of whom shall hold office for one year, and until their successors have been duly elected.

ARTICLE II.—The delegates to such General Bureau of Relief, for the first year or fractional part of a year, shall be elected at the last regular meeting in April, and thereafter said delegates shall be elected annually, at the time of the election of Representatives to this Grand Lodge.

ARTICLE III.—It shall be the duty of such General Bureau of Relief to take charge of such sojourning brothers who may be sick, and grant such relief as the exigencies of the case may require. They shall have power to grant relief to destitute sojourning brothers in good standing; to assist, in cases of emergency, brothers who may not be in good standing; to relieve widows and orphans of members of the Order, who are, in their judgment, worthy and proper.

ARTICLE IV.—The delegates from Lodges located in the city and county of San Francisco shall constitute the Central Bureau of Relief, with full powers to make by-laws and act. The delegates from cities and towns where one or more Lodges is located, and the Master Workman, Foreman and Overseer, shall constitute auxiliary branches, with full powers to make by-laws and act in the cities and towns where they are located. The delegates from all other Lodges, and the Master Workman, Foreman and Overseer of such other Lodges, shall constitute executive branches in like manner, with full power to act in their respective localities. All delegates shall possess full power of voice and action in the meeting of the General Executive Bureau of Relief, when present.

ARTICLE V.—All Executive Bureaus auxiliary to the General Bureau of Relief shall immediately report any case coming under their care to the General Bureau, and when any sojourning brother has been under their care, shall draw upon said General Bureau for the amount expended by them for therelief or burial of such brother. They shall also report from time to time all opportunities for employment, and the character thereof; also, the names and qualifications of all brothers desiring employment in their respective localities, to said General Bureau of Relief. The General Bureau shall take action immediately to secure such employment for the brothers reported as desiring the same.

ARTICLE VI.—All amounts expended in the relief or burial of sojourning brothers, shall be refunded by the General Bureau of Relief, upon proper demand and vouchers; and such General Bureau of Relief may collect from the Lodge where such sojourning brother holds membership, such amount as he may be entitled to receive from the funds of such Lodge under their by-laws, and the balance, if any, shall be taken from the Common Fund of the Bureau.

ARTICLE VII.—For the purpose of supplying funds necessary for successfully carrying out this scheme of charity and benevolence in the Order, the Grand Lodge may levy and collect a general tax, not exceeding in the aggregate ten (10) cents per capita per annum upon the membership in the Jurisdiction of California.

ARTICLE VIII.—It shall be the duty of each Lodge within the Jurisdiction of California to furnish such General Bureau of Relief with a copy of its by-laws, which shall be kept on file by them, and to advise them promptly of amendments which may be made touching the matter of benefits.

ARTICLE IX.—It shall be the duty of the General Bureau of Relief to submit to this Grand Lodge, at its annual session, a full report of its proceedings during the year.

ARTICLE X.—The annual meeting of such Bureau of Relief shall be held one day preceeding the annual session of the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., of California, in the city or town where the Grand Lodge will be held.

ARTICLE XI.—The General Bureau of Relief shall furnish to every Lodge in this Grand Jurisdiction, five printed copies of its Constitution, as amended, and of its by-laws, as soon as it can conveniently be done.

THE GOOD WORK SPREADING.—The following letter we are permitted to publish:

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 20, 1883.

C. C. Gilmore, Secretary General Relief Committee, A. O. U. W.—DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: I see by the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN that you are Secretary of the Relief Committee. I am desirous of organizing something similar in Portland, and wish information as to the constitution, income, resources and something of results achieved. Fraternally yours, in C. H. and P. A. THOMPSON.

[Brother Thompson is an attorney at law. We are pleased to see our leading Workmen interested in this branch of our Order. — EDS. WATCHMAN.]

DATE OF ISSUE.—We shall do our very best to get this paper out uniformly "on time." If a subscriber, however, does not get the paper the day expected, do not wait for the date of the next issue before inquiring first at the P. O., for sometimes there may be a delay on the part of the mail as well as ourselves.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BUILDING.—Any project contemplating the extension and expansion of benevolent principles, and the carrying into a more complete and methodic form of execution, appeals to the better judgments of men, and readily enlists their financial as well as moral support. The Knights of Pythias, though of comparatively short existence, have made many commendable steps toward an exalted position in the ranks of fraternal societies, and the Hall Association of this city have determined to raise funds to purchase a lot, and in due time to erect a "Castle Hall." To this end, a benefit in aid of the "building fund" will be given at the Grand Opera House on the evening of Tuesday, January 29th, at which time Dion Boucicault's comedy of "London Assurance" will be presented by Louise Rial and company. Great exertions are being made to make it a success, and it promises to be all that is expected. In the city of Baltimore, not long since, a grand fair was given, in which the Lodges of the State took part, and from which several thousand dollars were realized. There appears to be no good reason why this city cannot vie with Eastern localities in aiding and promoting so laudable an effort. We hope the Opera House will be crowded to its utmost by the friends of the Order.

Hall Association.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—The delegates elected from the various Lodges to form a Hall Association met on Wednesday evening, the 16th inst., at Shields' Building, when 20 Lodges were represented by the following brothers: Thos. Murray, San Francisco, No. 4; H. J. Lask, Golden Gate, No. 8; W. M. Thackeray, Harmony, No. 9; C. L. M. Curry, Yerba Buena, No. 14; J. N. Block, Unity, No. 27; E. F. Loud, Valley, No. 30; Edwin Danforth, Spartan, No. 36; J. Hoesch, Magnolia, No. 41; E. Alexander, Myrtle, No. 42; C. N. Peyson, Franklin, No. 44; Louis Hess, Hercules, No. 53; J. Rosenberg, Washington, No. 60; L. G. Schord, Burns, No. 68; H. G. Gray, Sts. John, No. 73; F. W. Rossback, Olympic, No. 127; Geo. A. Bordwell, Excelsior, No. 126; E. M. Reading, Fidelity, No. 136; Bro. Sherry, Friendship, 179; M. A. Clark, Memorial, No. 180; J. Latham, Triumph, No. 184. Bernal Lodge, Bay View Lodge, Noe Valley Lodge, Aurora, Evening Star and Dawn of Hope Degree of Honor Lodges were not represented.

The meeting was called to order by Brother Hoesch, of Magnolia, and Edwin Danforth, of Spartan, was chosen temporary Chairman, and J. Hoesch, temporary Secretary.

A resolution was unanimously adopted that it was the sense of the Committee that a lot should be bought and a hall built, and not to lease any property.

It was resolved to recommend back to the Lodges to instruct the delegates to incorporate a Hall Association.

A resolution was also adopted that it was the sense of the Committee to incorporate with $60,000 capital stock, in support of which it was stated that $30,000 could be bought on eliquidated Eddy, Turk or Tyler street, at $500 per front foot, while $30,000, and that a suitastories high with three stores on the main floor, with a large public hall and four Lodge rooms, with offices for the Grand Recorder, Guarantee Fund and Relief Committee on the second floor could be built for about $20,000. It was also shown that the receipts of the four Lodge rooms at $20 per night would realize $480 per month. The offices of the Grand Recorder and others would bring in $100 per month, and the three stores would also bring in a rental of $100 each, and that the public hall would at least bring in $20 per month, making a total income of about $900. The expenses of janitor, gas, water, taxes, insurance, etc., would be about $250, leaving a profit of $540 per month, or nearly one per cent.

An amendment was offered that the capital stock be $100,000, with 10,000 shares at $10 per share. The amendment was adopted, on the ground that it would not be necessary to sell the full amount of stock but would be better to have enough than too little.

Brothers Block, of Unity, Alexander, of Silver Spray, and Loud, of Valley, were appointed a committee to see in reference to a lot, and the probable cost of such, that the committee may be better able to proceed with getting the stock taken.

All the delegates expressed themselves as in favor of the project, and seemed pleased that the movement was taking so well.

Many of the Committee expressed themselves as willing to at once subscribe for stock, and had the subscription list been open, several thousand dollars worth of stock would have been subscribed for the first evening.

Mention was made that many of our business men were just waiting for the opportunity to subscribe for large blocks of stock.

The matter of procuring a home for the Order, with headquarters for its Grand Officers, and a place for the Grand Lodge to meet seems from present indications only a matter of a little while, when once the preliminary arrangements are completed.

That the Lodges have selected a committee of men who mean business is easily seen by the manner in which they have taken hold of the matter.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

ALL of our city Lodges are steadily gaining in membership. At their last meeting night Valley had six candidates, Washington two, Golden Gate two, and Unity fifteen.

L. C. WINSTON, Recorder of Pasadena Lodge, No. 151, writes: "Our Lodge is increasing—material the best. We have never had a death in our Lodge, and don't want any."

EVERY member of the A. O. U. W. should procure a copy of the splendid Christmas number of their fraternal paper, the WATCHMAN, and let their friends and their families know what a splendid institution they belong to.—Russian River Flag.

Academy of Sciences.

The regular meeting of the California Academy of Sciences was held on Monday evening, President Davidson in the chair. Capt. Tierney, of the whaler Rainbow, presented quite a large collection of curios secured from islands of the South Pacific. Dr. J. B. Trembley, of Oakland, presented specimens of dendrites.

Prof. G. W. Peck, of Milwaukee, sent a box containing twenty species of spiders, properly classified. Included in these were eight new species. Some of this class of animals have a wide geographical range of distribution, shown by one of the specimens being common to this State, Washington Territory and the Island of Madagascar.

The following members were duly elected: Dr. Mouser, J. C. Mexia, Mexican Consul; W. F. Smith, H. R. Taylor and J. Laboulye. A paper was read by E. J. Mclera, C. E., on the subject of "The Storage of Electricity," illustrated by diagrams on the blackboard and by means of a set of instruments.

The Secretary read the following list of appointments by the Council for the year:

Publication Committee, George Davidson, Chas. G. Yale and Dr. H. H. Behr. Curators: Birds and mammals, E. F. Loring; radiates, reptiles and crustacea, J. J. Rivers; fishes, Miss Rosa Smith; ethnology and osteology, A. B. Stout; botany, E. L. Green and Mrs. Mary K. Curran; entomology, H. H. Behr; conchology, Josiah Keep; mineralogy, J. T. Evans and W. M. Wolfe; geology and paleontology, Melville Attwood.

DURING the year past $631,166.77 in gold dust and bullion have been shipped from Astoria, Pendleton, Or.

A MP was recently found frozen to death in a sleeping car near Caliente.

"Some of My Faults."

A paper read before the recent session of the State Teachers' Association, by C. M. Tucker, of Santa Paula, Ventura county.

"You have abundant material to choose from," said one of my sarcastic fellow teachers. "You want to lash other teachers by accusing yourself of all manner of faults you were never guilty of," asserted another who evidently had but little faith in the veracity of my pen.

"You haven't any faults," said one of my small-boy admirers, who must be excused on account of his youth and ignorance, for making such an unwarranted assertion.

"You have only two faults," admitted another lad of 12, who was only a little less blind than the other. "You like to tease small boys" (I admitted that); "and your other fault is a great big one, bigger than all of mine," for I had just told him some of his faults, which he tried to excuse by reminding me of mine.

Of course, if my faults as a teacher were peculiar to myself, it would do no good to read this sad catalogue; but there are other teachers who have faults similar to mine, and this honest confession may help some of them to see their faults more plainly. John Smith is one of these, and in order to save my own character as much as possible, and avoid the too frequent use of the pronoun I, you will excuse me if I tell you of my faults by going after John Smith, as he has many faults that I have, and some which I have not, and you may have the Yankee privilege of guessing which are his individual faults and which are common to us both.

John Smith is a pretty good teacher, if he does live in Ventura, and he has many good qualities, including a diploma; but like every other teacher (present company excepted) he has failings. John Smith is partial to certain pupils; so am I. But we differ in our partiality. I am fond of small boys—he of big girls; so we may differ in our way of displaying the same fault.

But let me beg of you, when I mention one of John Smith's faults, if you have any doubt whether that fault may be mine also, to remember the rule of common law—to give a man the benefit of a doubt.

The teacher is said to be the school; so the faultier the teacher, the worse the school. A cross teacher makes an irritable school; a lazy teacher, an idle school; a careless teacher, a heedless school.

How many of us teachers never get cross, careless or lazy? If outside matters are going wrong, or the last meal does not agree with one, can the voice keep perfectly even and the brow unruffled? Will sharp words not occasionally slip from the tongue, or a little impatience be shown to a pupil not up to the mark? But if I were asked John Smith's greatest fault, and the greatest fault of nine-tenths of our teachers, I should emphatically say, "laziness." Down in Ventura, John Smith has the reputation of being exceedingly industrious—for a teacher. He taught thirteen months in the last school year; he can walk thirty or forty miles a day if need be; he makes his own fires and is his own janitor, so the people think he is not lazy. Back in his own home they knew him better. His father let him study for a teacher, because he was too lazy to make a good farmer. He was a great admirer of honest hard work, that father. So was my father. He bought a mowing-machine, but he used to walk behind it because it was sheer laziness to sit upon the seat and let the poor horses pull him and the machine; but his son sits upon a seat to do his work, and the seat is cushioned and has springs underneath and a comfortable back to lean against.

What is the cause of laziness? Is it not a want of sufficient interest in the work? I know a teacher so lazy that he often falls asleep in his school-room. Put a gun upon his shoulder and he can tramp all day after a deer. I know a schoolma'am who could not possibly walk a mile and a half to the school-house; but she can dance all night and teach school the next day, or pretend to. An uninterested teacher makes an indifferent school. If you find yourself longing each day for four o'clock to come, or feel glad when Friday evening or vacation comes around, you lack interest in the school and you will be lazy in the school-room. Laziness crops up under many guises. A dull pupil, who should receive twice the care given to a bright one, is put off with about the same amount of attention as the other, under a specious plea of impartiality. Sympathy and assistance outside of school are given to a favorite pupil with far more graciousness than is shown to one not liked so well. Pupils are told steps they could have studied out, because it is easier to tell them than to teach them to do by themselves. Lessons are given out of the book, because it is easier than to put work upon the blackboard. Disagreeable tasks are deferred until it is too late to perform them properly.

But though lazy to the backbone himself, John Smith cannot endure to see idle pupils. He sometimes says to them, knowing they do not see how lazy he really is, "When you see me idle in the school-room, I give you leave to play also." There is genuine work and there is a counterfeit make-believe. Some of the laziest teachers that I know of keep constantly at their kind of work, but their labor is mechanical, and lacks life and enthusiasm. Some pupils, apparently lazy, study hard at times, exhaust themselves and play in school, as they have a right to, and get scolded because they do not plod along like their dull neighbor. But you say, "Scold him because he sets a bad example to the other boys." So I do; but I secretly feel ashamed of punishing an innocent boy to help along his slower neighbor.

Why do you teach school? Did you ever try to answer this question honestly and unreservedly? I like to teach; I like children; I like a certain amount of authority. I like to study child nature; I like the spare time I get, the few hours of work per day and only five days in the week; and last, but not least, I like the cash at the end of the month. These are the main things; habit makes almost any work light. I began teaching before I was seventeen, and have taught for more than nineteen years. (The ladies will please not calculate how old I am, as age is a tender subject to old bachelors as well as to ladies.) When one has taught that long most of his teaching runs into easy ruts which it is but little labor to follow; he will not be so ready to take up new methods, to devise new ways, to follow out lines of original investigation as he used to be. I suspect the main reason why we do not teach the same way year after year is because we get tired of the sameness and want a change.

John Smith don't always do as good work in the school room as he knows how to do. It is no excuse to say: "I do as good work as most of my neighbors." He should not think of the extra trouble and loss of influence and popularity resultant from striking out too far from the ordinary school current, and should not give away because pupils like that work best which they are accustomed to, and which makes the least demands upon them for original thought and research. But Smith does let these things have weight; besides, the course of study which we have to keep within a school teacher's mile of generally forbids anything especially original. Here let me tell you one fault I am not guilty of. You remember the question in our annual reports: "Have you followed the course of study," etc. Now I don't lie and write "Yes," as John Smith does, but I say "approximately," which has an india-rubber meaning. But I humbly confess I do follow the course of study more closely than my conscience approves of.

The most of us teachers have a certain liking for bright pupils. We like to see immediate results. This liking for bright pupils is mixed up with a love of approbation, a little vanity, and several other traits not very commendable. For example, six months ago Smith had two girls and a boy begin school. Two of them are now almost through the Second Reader; the other, a five-year-old girl and dull, is but half through the First Reader. Now, when I came to visit his school it was not at all necessary that he should very carefully explain to me what a very short time the two bright ones had been attending school, nor shake his head so mournfully over the dullness of the little girl and her irregular attendance. I hope none of you ever point to your bright ones with an air that says, "Good teacher," and excuse your poor work by sighing, "dull pupil!"

I expect you all put your dull pupils forward as prominently as your bright ones when you have visitors, but Smith don't. He don't wish to hurt the dull ones' feelings by having them fail before visitors, you know. Here in S. F. you teach so that your pupils may gain a certain per cent at examination times, and the most successful teacher is the one who can "boost" the most pupils into a higher grade in the required time, regardless of how they get along afterwards. That is the next teacher's lookout.

In country districts we do things differently. There the most successful teacher is the one the neighborhood likes the best. We have to promote to keep in favor, but we shift around so much that we can promote at the close of our term, as the law foolishly tells us to, and the next teacher may get along as best he can. Now, suppose J. S. is the next teacher. What ought he to do with these pupils improperly promoted? Turn them back, of course. But he don't always do it. He temporizes by inserting oral work to review the back studies. He gives the pupils more help than is good for them. He tries many devices to avoid the storm which would follow summary treatment, until he gets entrenched in the good graces of the district; and by that time the pupil probably does not need turning back. The truth is, he does not make the welfare of the child his first consideration; his own interests look too large at times for the pupil's good.

We have often been lectured through the educational journals for giving the pupils too much learning and too little education. J. S. does not escape this fault. Learning makes so much more display at first; it is so much more easily given; it satisfies parents and pupils so much better; in fact it is better all round—except for the child. Smith compromises matters. If he has plenty of time he gives them education. If he is hurried he sighs and substitutes learning, and feels thankful the children don't know how they are cheated.

Closely connected with this matter of learning or education is the question of what to teach and how much time to be given to certain studies and when to teach them. Here also, Smith falls short of my idea. He is fully persuaded that technical grammar for children is a fraud and a delusion; yet he teaches it, or pretends to teach it. Five-sixths of the higher geography is comparatively useless to children;

yet when they finish the primary, he consults the course of study and puts the class into the higher book. I hope to live to see the day when some good writer will publish a complete course of geography in one small book. John Smith is also fully persuaded that music should be taught in all the grades; yet, as he would rather teach any other study, he neglects music most sadly.

He regards natural history, especially the study of fruits, grains, domestic animals, and the insect enemies of the field and the orchard, of the highest importance. He believes the true way to successfully combat our enormous losses by disease and small predators, is to form cabinets for each and every school, and enlist the aid of the children in trying to exterminate these unwelcome guests. But his belief is passive and expends itself in an occasional talk, a fiftieth object lesson, and a few words of advice.

He does not believe that word analysis, except as a little word study from the readers, should be taught in our common schools, but for every five minutes Smith gives to natural history he gives at least fifteen minutes to word analysis. Why? Partly owing to the course of study, and partly because his unfortunate training in Latin and Greek made word analysis a pastime to him.

Suppose some of you that are skilled in percentage take a list of the studies that should be taught and are taught in our public schools, and mark down their relative importance using arithmetic at 100 as a basis. See what fraction of the whole amount each study represents. Multiply each fraction by five hours, which represents the average time you really teach a day, and opposite the results place the time you really do give each study. I think the result will astonish you a little.

As Smith gets older I find he pays less attention to the play-ground. At times he enjoys playing games with the children, and the children enjoy it too. But as age checks the flow of blood, and the body becomes stiffer, one is apt to think he has work to do in the school-room and not time enough for play.

This is wrong. A teacher's place at play-times is on the playground. He need not actively engage in play the whole time, but he should encourage suitable games by talk and by participation. Every good game for fair weather should have plenty of exercise in it, and running is the very best of exercises. I say fair weather, and it is fair weather for active exercise whenever it is not too warm. A little rain, or even a Scotch mist, won't hurt active, warm-blooded children. Such games as marbles and tops are of little value for any purpose, and a teacher should encourage the playing of better games. "Pull-away," "base," and such games wherein young and old can join heartily and socially, though they may result at times in torn clothes and a hard tumble, are more useful to the child than geography or arithmetic. I never appreciated the folly of San Francisco School Directors more than when I visited some of the finest school buildings in the city—buildings that cost tens upon tens of thousands of dollars, fitted up with fine furniture and apparatus; and for a playground for hundreds of pupils, saw a cooped-up back-yard hardly big enough to swing a cat in, and for fear the sun should dry the ground too much, there was a big board fence and some sheds to stable the boys in rainy weather. The fence might have been put there to keep the neighbors from trespassing upon the school yard. Only one teacher was in any of these pens during recess, and the extent of his play was to shake two boys by their collars for too rough play. The only good I could think of for such places would be to use them for penitentiaries and put into them the San Francisco School Directors and the teachers who rest satisfied with such attempts at playgrounds.

The health of our children is worth more than a whole block of lots in any part of the city, and the children's health depends upon their playground more than upon any other one thing the city supplies. If teachers played more with their pupils they would insist on better grounds, and it is wrong for me or for you to avoid this daily play, for fear of loss of dignity, or some other folly or laziness. Obey the rules of the games; do not be umpire if you can avoid it, in disputes, for children don't relish playing with bosses; and when you can no longer enjoy a play yourself you are old enough to quit the school room for good.

Not only do we refuse to play with the children as we should, but a few teachers constantly pull off a little time from the recesses by allowing class-work to interfere. A teacher has no right to keep pupils at work when they have earned their play. A lazy pupil will seldom be hurt if his recess is shortened, but it is the bright ones, and those willing to stay, who will be most injured. Of all the vicious educational humbugs which have arisen in my time, I regard this no-recess doctrine as the very worst. Instead of fewer recesses we need more. An hour at a time is long enough without a recess, and an indoors recess is almost as good as none. The education a boy gets at recess is not valued enough. He needs contact with other boys, good and bad, rough and gentle. You cannot fence a boy away from evil, and if he runs against the barbed wire here and there he would not be so bad off as a boy who don't know anything of what he should do. Let the young colt run against the barbed wire a little, and wisdom and hardihood will restrain him more than a lecture. A burnt child will mind the fire and it is folly to be continually pulling a young one away from the stove.

Much has been written about children's lunches; and here let me observe that if those teachers who are crying "No recess," should switch off on the no-lunch track, they would be wiser. Our children are stuffed from the hour of their birth until they get old enough to stuff themselves, and then, as the habit is formed, they keep on stuffing until their stomachs are worn out. If a baby cries they feed him; if he throws up the food he does not want, they stop his mouth with a bottle. When he gets larger and comes in with a stubbed toe for sympathy and a rag, he is given a piece of bread and butter with a thick covering of molasses or sugar, so as to entice the rebellious palate into acquiescence, if not belief, that it is wanted. I try to feebly stem this tide of excessive and unhealthy food, but I get swept on the rocks of custom and public opinion. Mothers think they know better what to feed their children than any old bachelor could tell them. The pupils find a conflict of opinions, and home influence naturally prevails. I tell my pupils that spirituous liquors, tobacco, tea and coffee are injurious, especially to growing children; I read to them what others have said; I point out sad examples, that they may see near at hand, and I have pretty good success in getting them to let whisky and tobacco alone. But the mother says, laughingly, when I go to her house for supper, "Tom usually drinks tea and coffee with the rest of us, but because the teacher is here he told me to put water by his plate to-night." What can I do but smile and say, "I am glad Tom is good when he is with his teacher," and if I add a word about the injurious effects of tea and coffee, politeness dictates that my speech should be very short.

If I fail in dealing satisfactorily with the food question, I think I make even less of a success on clothing. No one doubts that a child should have some clothes on, but how many is another question. If health and decency alone are the guides, a shirt and trousers are enough for the average boy. Suspenders are not so cheap as buttons nor as good. Boots and shoes are a nuisance, and often endanger the health in rainy weather. The less covering a child has for head or feet the better, as a rule. Never send children indoors for a hat or a bonnet, and it won't hurt you to play out of doors a whole recess without your own hat. What are hats and bonnets good for anyway, except to weaken the eyes and make the head bald? Oh, yes, they do save the expense of washes to remove freckles. I forgot that. As for tight shoes and the other follies people indulge in for looks and for fashion, teachers must be very persistent if they keep children from such things.

I often feel that we are not solicitous enough about the moral training of pupils. If they keep clean and respectful, and do not fight, swear, use tobacco or hurt others upon the playground, we content ourselves with bits of good advice thrown in at stray times, and try to believe we have fulfilled the section of school law relating to morals and manners.

We are apt to fail in morals and manners in other directions. Making rash promises is one of Smith's failings, and though he always tries to keep a promise when made, he gets into many a scrape by not being careful enough to think what he says. Then some days John feels more indulgent than at other times, and permits things he would not allow on other days. On the days when one feels cross it is so easy to blame pupils for what is really our own fault. "If the teacher goes to whip you again, tell him it isn't your fault that his victuals don't agree with him," advised a Ventura father to his boy in my hearing. It is strange how differently the same thing affects different persons. A certain Ventura schoolma'am is said to whip twice as many boys per day on the average since she was engaged to be married than she found it necessary to flog before that happy event took place. I never tried it, but it seems to me that that medicine would operate the other way with me. If some good looking lady wants to be sure of the effect, 1884 is near at hand and is a multiple of 4. The trouble is that, instead of being guided by fixed rules of conduct laid down by our conscience after careful reasoning, we suffer ourselves to be swayed too much by the feelings of the moment. Uncontrolled power is what few mortals are strong enough to stand; and to shake Jim Brown just because you are angry with him and can shake him, may soothe your feelings to-day; but if you really have Jim Brown's welfare at heart it is nine chances to one that you will be sorry you didn't use a little judicious tongue instead of injudicious biceps. A judicious use of the tongue is good; but like many another thing it is a good servant and a bad master. We think many things in the schoolroom that it would never do to say. You may justly think a child a dunce, but call him slow when you speak of him to others. It is admissible to tell a child he is lazy; for though it is worse to be lazy than dull the name does not offend. There is a mistaken notion about laziness and strong drink that is very prevalent. Both are wrongly supposed to be failings of smart men rather than ignorant ones. Laziness of body is almost invariably associated with laziness of mind; and surely where one wise man gets drunk, you can easily find five drunken fools. John Smith's fault which seems to be a laziness of mind, does not have a pretty good effect upon his body. Others are likely to be misled by John carries this a little farther, and overrates himself, but under other teachers. From the high of his experience, he looks down unsympathizingly upon their failures. He feels offended if all his pupils don't consider him the best teacher they ever had or ever will have. He thinks it no more than right that every teacher who precedes or succeeds him in a district should be accounted a failure. This is wrong, but it is so common that it has passed into a proverb that two of a trade can never agree.

There is another old proverb which says, "There is no use crying over spilled milk." John Smith is (figuratively speaking) bathed in continual tears over slips which he cannot prevent, over the lack of cream in this one, or because the butter of this class won't gather quickly enough under his vigorous churning, or because another class has turned to clabber under his mistaken management. It is not work but worry that wears out many a teacher prematurely.

Very few teachers are perfectly honest with school supplies. If one could have exact statistics it might surprise school trustees to learn the very small amount of paper, pens, pencils, ink, etc., our teachers purchase for private use. We go after public officials for stealing, but how many of us are guiltless? And why should one teacher use twice or thrice as many slate pencils as another, to say nothing of other school supplies? Waste of property entrusted to our care is as bad as stealing. And some even steal time. As a Ventura teacher told me, "The teacher rings the bell just at nine and it is five minutes before he begins school. Recesses are two or three minutes longer than the twenty minutes the law allows. Noon is an hour and five minutes, and the pupils are dismissed a little before four o'clock." Teachers should keep a daily record of the exact number of hours and minutes taught each day, and if they have not averaged full time their wages should be docked.

Very few teachers keep record of their experience, though I do not know of a business which more strongly demands it. A good bee-man will tell you the date his No. 104 swarmed; whether the queen is purely mated; how many pounds of honey it produced, how long it took to draw out a frame of foundation and have it full of brood and honey; for he keeps a record book of every colony in his apiary. But who keeps a record of his pupils and of their advancement lesson by lesson; how long it took this one to comprehend simple subtraction, or to learn to spell so many words? Does he puzzle over the reason why the table of sixes is more difficult to remember than nine times, or why the child knows that 6+7=13 because 6+6=12, but remembers that 7+8=15 because 8+8=16, instead of remembering it from 7+7 as he logically should do? John Smith has his pupils begin with 2x1 and learn the tables in their order up to 10x10 or 12x12, without any regard to the comparative difficulty of remembering the different tables, and all the school arithmetics I know of are made by John Smith's first cousins. I say emphatically that a teacher who does not continually experiment in the school-room and keep a record of such experiments is not a teacher, but an imitator of other teachers, or else an educational guesser.

But I must not weary you with this enumeration of my faults and those of John Smith. A complete catalogue might require a quarto volume for their full description, and so I will close by asking you to forgive J. Smith for his faults, and forget my faults, which I am sincerely endeavoring to mend. I sometimes think faults are like lice; it is a misfortune to have them, a shame to keep them without trying to get rid of them, and a sin to charge them to an innocent man's door. Let us use a searching fine-tooth comb ourselves before we blame our neighbors overmuch.

THE STRUCTURE OF HAIR.—A single hair now enables the anthropologist to judge in what division of the human species he will class its owner; there is no mistaking a Chinese for a European, or either for an African. The cross section of this single hair, examined microscopically by Pruner's method, shows it circular, or oval, or reniform. Its follicle curvature may be estimated by the average diameter of the curls, as proposed by Moseley; its coloring matter may be estimated by Sorby's method. There has been even a systematic classification of man published by Dr. W. Miller, of the Novara expedition, which is primarily arranged according to hair, in straight haired races, curly haired races, etc., with a secondary division according to language. Though we cannot regard such a system as good, the wonder is that it should answer so well as it does; indeed, nothing could prove more clearly how real race distinctions are than a single bodily character should form a basis for rationally mapping out the divisions of mankind.—E. B. Taylor, in Nature.

TO PREVENT THE SMELL OF RUBBER.—The following mode of preventing the disagreeable odor given off from the rubber tubes employed for conducting illuminating gas is given by a German paper: Mix equal volumes of thirty-six per cent alcohol and good linseed oil, shaking the mixture well until homogeneous; moderately stretch the tube, and apply the mixture by putting a few drops on a small rag and rubbing the tube until it is quite dry. Repeat the application three or four times at intervals of a few days, and it is said to render the tubes perfectly gas tight, without impairing their flexibility or color.

From the official list of U. S. Patents in DEWEY & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS PATENT AGENCY, 252 Market St., S. F.

FOR WEEK ENDING DEC. 18, 1883.

290,305.—POTATO DIGGER—A. Adam, Reno, Nev.

290,530.—SINGLE HARNESS—C. W. Burgdorf, Petaluma, Cal.

290,316.—COOKING STOVE—Robt. E. Burns, S. F.

290,629.—SMELTING REFRACTORY ORES—J. Campbell, S. F.

290,404.—HOISTING CAR—L. D. Davis, Salt Lake City, Utah.

290,410.—DIRT SCRAPER—D. A. Faulkner, Sac.

290,337.—VAPOR LAMP BURNER—Ludwig & Wainwright, S. F.

290,348.—GANGWAY LADDER—C. Olsen.

290,603.—SEWER TRAP—L. A. Pelletier, San Jose, Cal.

290,352.—PORTABLE DOOR FASTENER—E. F. Pfund, Sac.

290,358.—EDGER—Jas. A. Robb, S. F.

290,481.—BOX COVER ATTACHMENT—Belle M. Sahlein, S. F.

290,607.—AUTOMATIC LAMP EXTINGUISHER AND WICK TRIMMER—Smiley & Stombs, S. F.

290,653.—WINE AND CIDER PRESS—Henry Tyack, Grass Valley, Cal.

290,298.—DUMPING CAR—Geo. J. Wheelock, Oakland, Cal.

290,509.—GATE—J. B. Whiteman, Centerville, Oregon.

10,799.—TRADE MARK—Geo. Simmonds, S. F.

3,774.—LABEL—Meyer Bros. & Co., S. F.

FOR WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 25, 1883.

290,727.—AUTOMATIC GAS REGULATOR—M. J. Amick, S. F.

290,746.—SAFETY FENDER FOR CARS—P. H. Cooney, S. F.

290,755.—LOGGING ENGINE—John Dolbeer, S. F.

290,756.—LOGGING LOCOMOTIVE—John Dolbeer, S. F.

290,674.—AUTOMATIC BELT SHIFTER FOR ELEVATORS—F. W. Fuller, S. F.

290,776.—PRIVY—F. B. Kendall, Turnwater, U. T.

290,794.—REFRIGERATING APPARATUS—C. C. Palmer, Oakland, Cal.

290,795.—REFRIGERATING APPARATUS—C. C. Palmer, Oakland, Cal.

NOTE.—Copies of U. S. and Foreign Patents furnished by DEWEY & Co., in the shortest time possible (by telegraph or otherwise), at the lowest rates. All patent business for Pacific coast inventors transacted with perfect security and in the shortest possible time.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through Dewey & Co.'s SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

LOGGING LOCOMOTIVE.—John Dolbeer, S. F. No. 290,756. Dated Dec. 25, 1883. This is an apparatus in which is produced a traction and a rope-winding or hauling engine in one mechanism, which the inventor terms a logging-locomotive. It consists of an engine and boiler mounted upon a suitable frame supported upon wheels, which are adapted to run upon a track, and a gipsy or winding drum, mounted upon the forward part of the same frame, and a suitable mechanism by which the power may be applied to drive the wheels and move the locomotive along the track, or to actuate the winding apparatus. The locomotive will haul a train of log-cars to a point near the tender. The locomotive being brought to a convenient place, is disconnected and fixed by brakes or chocks, and the rope, after passing around suitably placed snatch-blocks, so that the pull from the gipsy will be nearly in direct line, is secured to the log, which is often inconveniently or inaccessible located, and it is hauled to the side of the track and loaded upon the car. When the load is complete the rope may be thrown off the gipsy and the locomotive connected, when it will be ready to haul the load to its destination.

SAFETY FENDER FOR CARS.—P. H. Cooney S. F. No. 290,746. Dated Dec. 25, 1883. This invention is of that class intended to be applied to street-cars to prevent people from injury in getting under the car. The invention consists in a two-part swinging or hinged guard having a rubber nose-piece traveling just above the road-bed. The peculiar connection between the guard and the car-platform, the means for effecting its operation, and certain novel cushions and shields further constitute the invention. The object of the invention is to provide a guard or fender which shall be able to accommodate itself to the interior of the car body on its springs, and to the inequalities of the road, remaining at all times in position to ward off injury to persons by preventing them from getting under the car and wheels.

POTATO DIGGER.—August Adam, Reno, Nev. No. 290,305. Dated Dec. 18, 1883. These improvements consist in means for driving the sifters or rakes with a positive motion, in means for adjusting the sifters, and in means for inclosing the gearing. The operation of the implement is as follows: The plow digs out the potatoes, the side runners throw them up to the sifters, which clear the earth away from them, and the cloth gathers them and prevents them from scattering. The revolution of the sifters is positive and certain.

HARNESS CHECK-HOOK.—A. C. Dietz, S. F. No. 288,696. Dated Nov. 20, 1883. This invention relates to harness check-hooks, in which is employed a wide, open ring slipping loosely through a hole in the thickened front end of the check hook, which allows the bight of any strap or check-rein to be introduced, and when it is in place it is allowed to move freely through the ring and hook as the horse moves his head from side to side. The rein can not be disengaged accidentally from the check-hook.

BOOT.—Bernard Getleson, S. F. No. 289,525. Dated Dec. 4, 1883. This improvement in the construction of boots is more especially adapted for heavy boots, such as are used for farming or mining purposes. The leg and foot of the boot are made in the usual form. It is often difficult to remove boots when they have become wet, and efforts to do so will break down the counter. In order to render it easy to remove the boot, the inventor secures a plate between the sole of the boot and the heel layers, allowing it to extend forward far enough to be held firmly in place. The rear end projects out slightly, and forms a catch, which may be hooked over any stationary object to assist in removing the boot, which may thus easily be done. The counter of the boot is never broken, and no special boot-jack is needed.

BOX-COVER ATTACHMENT.—Belle Miriam Sahlein, S. F. No. 290,481. Dated Dec. 18, 1883. This is an attachment for the covers of such boxes as are mainly employed to hold hosiery and fancy small articles. It consists in a box having strips of tape, one end of which is secured to the inside front of the cover, while the other ends are secured to the inside of the box opposite, so that when the cover is in place the tapes will extend across from one side to the other. With this arrangement, box-covers cannot be misplaced.

WINE AND CIDER PRESS.—Henry Tyack, Grass Valley. No. 290,653. Dated Dec. 18, 1883. The improvements covered by this patent consist in various matters of construction, including principally the construction of the body or frame, and means for operating it. The following are means for operating it: The trays for catching the juice, the doors for discharging the cheese or waste, the means for opening the feed door, and a device for previously preparing or pulverizing the material. Each of the improvements has in view the general result of providing a more effective press.

From a Patentee.

CHESTER, CAL., JAN. 12, 1884.

To Messrs. Dewey & Co., Patent Solicitors, S. F.:

GENTLEMEN: My patent reached me this evening, and I take this occasion to tender my thanks for your promptness in prosecuting my application. I also thank you for your precautionary circular, which, while not necessary in my case, is nevertheless important to inventors generally. Again expressing my entire satisfaction with you in this matter, I remain Yours respectfully, E. W. WAGNER.

Newspaper Agents Wanted

Extra inducements will be offered for a few active canvassers who will give their whole attention (for a while at least) to soliciting subscriptions and advertisements for this journal and other first-class popular newspapers. Apply soon, or address this office, giving address, age, experience and reference.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time he intends to pay for it, let him not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing only one cent) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some responsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

General Relief Committee, A. O. U. W.
Room 6, SHIELDS' BUILDING,
No. 32 O'Farrell St., - - - San Francisco.

OFFICERS:

President.....HARRY J. LASK
Vice-President.....A. F. BELL
Secretary.....C. C. GILMORE
Treasurer.....C. W. NEVIN

REGULAR MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE:
Second and Fourth Saturday Evenings of Each Month,
AT 8 O'CLOCK.

A member of the committee will be in attendance each evening (Sundays excepted) from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and on Sunday mornings from 11 A. M. to 12 M., for the purpose of receiving and attending to applications for Relief and Employment, and no application will be entertained outside of the above hours and place.

All communications and business connected with this committee should be addressed to the Secretary at the above permanent headquarters.

New Workman Diploma.

Every Brother Workman should have the New Workman Diploma, a very fine work of art. Sent to any address for $2, or by express, C. O. D. Address C. H. M. CURRY, No. 16 Fourth St., San Francisco.

GOOD TEAMS IN OAKLAND can be had at the City Hall Stables, No. 514 Fourteenth street, west of the City Hall.

Every Member of the A. O. U. W. Should Subscribe for the "Pacific States Watchman."

It is officially recommended by the Order on the Pacific coast.

Splendidly illustrated, reliable and chaste.

The WATCHMAN is published semi-monthly—on the 1st and 15th of the month.

It is one of the best home and family papers on the coast and this feature commends it to all Workmen and all members of their families.

The subscription price is only $2 per year, payable in advance.

It is a worthy representative of the Order, a profitable companion for every member to read and consult, and a friend that each can take pride in recommending to readers everywhere. Its circulation has been of immense benefit to our noble Order and many of its individual members who read and patronize its many enterprising and sterling issues. All Workmen should lend it a helping voice and hand.

Advertisers will find it one of the best means of reaching a class of readers, including many Workmen and others who are large buyers in the aggregate.

Good Agents are wanted at all times, to whom large commissions will be paid.

SAMPLE copies sent free for circulation and examination with a view of increasing its subscription list.

WATCHMAN PUBLISHING CO.,
252 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W. and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN'S progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be part-takers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this the oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinions of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

Lodge Locals.

correspondence from our little Lodge, I, as its humble Recorder, will do the best I can to inform you of our sad past, good present and hopeful future, all of which may interest you and your readers. Until the 19th of November, 1883, our little Lodge was rather prosperously enjoying nice meetings, having 48 good members, all in good standing, and meeting in a well fitted hall. We had every comfort reasonably to be expected of a little town Lodge. But a calamity occurred on the eve of said day in our little village, by which the whole town was destroyed by fire, including our hall, books, charter, working implements, and everything which was good and dear to any Lodge of the A. O. U. W. We were left without anything in the shape of a record, and in fact lost everything peculiar to Workmen. On the 20th day of November, 1883, a day after the fire, where the burned district laid before us with its gray, smoky appearance, clothed in the mournful garment of sack-cloth and ashes, I strolled among the ruins, and my steps brought me to the spot where our little Lodge room stood. By looking around I found the cold steel of our working implements, including the burned seal of our Lodge. I stood for a moment and sadly looked at them, and in my mind heard them whisper to me, "Pick me up and give me back to our proud Order and tell them to go ahead, as we wish to stay by them in the future as in the past." I, as a good Workman, could not resist and did as my mind directed, and with such remnants on hand, gathered up all its members, staunch and true, and with the banner of "Charity, Hope and Protection," met, Phoenix-like, on our next regular meeting night at Academy School Hall, and transacted our business in due form. We soon sent for a new outfit, and now meet regularly at the hall specified above, with as good attendance as ever. We have had already one initiation this year, and also had our newly elected officers installed by our noble D. D. P. M. W., Wm. McWilliams, of Vallejo, who officiated in a very creditable manner. We were unable to render a brief semi-annual report to the Grand Lodge on account of losing our entire records, and therefore wish to be excused by the Grand Officers for our sorrowful neglect. We hope and trust that at our next term we will be able to do better. We will soon be quartered at our newly built hall, as the erection thereof is rapidly progressing, and not until then will I again trouble you with a few lines. Before I close I wish in the name of Dixon, No. 50, to thank our noble Brother, Grand Recorder Pratt for the liberal offer made us in furnishing us with an entire new outfit so promptly, which is really highly appreciated by all our members. With this I will close, hoping and trusting that no Lodge of such a noble Order as the A. O. U. W. meet with such sad experience as Dixon Lodge, No. 50, did. I remain Yours Truly in C. H. and P., S. N. DAVIDSON, Recorder.
Dixon, Cal., Jan. 20, 1884.

Turlock Lodge, No. 182.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Refuge Lodge, No. 15, D. of H., A. O. U. W., installed the following officers at their regular meeting, Friday evening, Jan. 18th: P. C. of H., Sister S. A. Russell; C. of H., Sister F. L. Porter (re-elected); L. of H., sister Julia Brandon (re-elected); C. of C., May Baxter; Recorder, S. V. Porter (re-elected); Financier, C. F. Lander (re-elected); Receiver, Wm. Donovan (re-elected); Sister Usher, Nettie Lander; I. W., Brother H. C. Russell; O. W., Brother Wm. Fulkert; M. E., Dr. J. P. Young. Our Lodge is increasing, and the membership very much interested. After installation a lunch was spread by the Sisters and a good time was had generally throughout the evening. I am sorry to be so late but we were crowded out of our first meeting by the lateness of the other Lodge. Yours fraternally.

Business Notes.

WORKMEN GUARANTEE FUND ASSOCIATION. This Association is gaining numbers among the members of the A. O. U. W. every day, and during the past year they have paid to the families of deceased members $20,000, and carry in the treasury nearly $3,000 more. Since the organization of the Association they have had only three deaths from chronic diseases, a fact which speaks well for the selection of their members. Nearly one third of the entire loss has been occasioned by violent deaths. Bro. Wm. H. Jordan, Past Grand Master, and Brother E. M. Reading, Grand Lecturer, have been re-elected, respectively, President and Secretary. To the members of the A. O. U. W., who join the Fund, the additional $1,000, paid by this Association is a great inducement, and 1,700 of the Order are already enrolled on their books. Brother E. M. Reading, the Secretary, room No. 41, St. Ann's Building, will be pleased to impart any information concerning the Association.

THE PACIFIC FRUIT COMPANY.—This company was organized and incorporated in June, 1883, with a cash capital of $250,000. Their business is a wholesale and commission dealers in California green and dried fruits, nuts, raisins, honey, oranges and produce. They have established agencies in all the principal towns and principal points. Consignments solicited and liberal advances to shippers. Their place of business is at 408 and 410 Davis street, and the directors are made up from our leading citizens. The officers are N. K. Masten, President; C. B. Jennings, Treasurer, and M. T. Brewer, Manager. We congratulate Brother Brewer on his appointment in this responsible position, and hope he will find his new role a pleasant and prosperous one.

BRO. GEO. A. BASLER, No. 17, Seventh St., house and sign painter, makes a specialty of whitening, kalsomining, glazing and paper-hanging. We speak from experience when we say that he is a reliable, honest and skillful workman. He has a large patronage, and those who have employed him speak in the highest terms of his work.

THE "King of Ague" is coming into general use as a reliable specific for ague, chills and fever, malaria, liver complaint, and kidney disease. It is a vegetable compound, invented by Prof. C. L. Robinson. Bro. Frank N. Nicholay-sen, is furnishing the "Sinews of War" to supply all druggists with it.

HODGES' Cloak and Suit rooms, Nos. 8 and 10 Fifth street, near Market, are stocked with the latest styles and an extensive assortment of ladies', misses', and children's cloaks and suits. Bro. Hodge has shown a good deal of enterprise in establishing this mammoth house and maintaining such an extensive and select custom.

BRO. A. J. SANBORN, stair-builder and turner, of Mechanics' Mill, corner of Mission and Fremont, is the leading artisan in his line in this city. He does a large business in furnishing materials and fancy work for the country.

BRO. SONDAY has been appointed local salesman for the well known and popular brand, Saar's best roller made flour. His office is 16, California St.

Successful Patent Solicitors.

As Dewey & Co. have been in the patent soliciting business on this coast now for so many years, the firm's name is a well-known one. Another reason for its popularity is that a great proportion of the Pacific coast patents issued by the Government have been procured through their agency. They are, therefore, well and thoroughly posted on the needs of the progressive industrial classes of this coast. They are the best posted firm on what has been done in all branches of industry, and are able to judge of what is new and patentable. In this they have a great advantage, which is of practical dollar and cent value to their clients. That is this understood and appreciated is evidenced by the number of patents issued through their SCIENTIFIC PRESS Patent Agency (S. P.) from week to week and year to year.

"The Baldwin" Hotel

Ranks high up in public favor and is regarded as second to none in the country. It contains 600 rooms and is elegant and first class in every appointment. Mr. H. H. Pearson, the proprietor, with large and popular experience has the rare faculty of anticipating the wants of his guests. Traveling men in speaking of the Baldwin always do so feeling a sense of gratitude, for it always suggests pleasant associations and good living. It is located on Market street, corner Powell, in the heart of San Francisco. Among its guests are noticed the names of the leading and substantial men of this country.

Job Press for Sale or Exchange.

We have just received a new improved Rotary Job Printing press of approved style and make, which we will sell at a bargain or exchange on favorable terms for a Washington hand press. Size of chase inside 7x10 inches. DEWEY & Co., publishers.

Notice to Members.

Brethren wishing Society Address Cards can be supplied by sending their orders to Cubery & Co., 415 Market street, San Francisco, sole agents for the Pacific Coast of Milton H. Smith & Co., Rochester, N. Y. These cards have the emblem of the Order on one corner, and are universally used in the East, which suggested the idea of establishing a Pacific Coast Depot. Remember the address; Cubery & Co., 415 Market street, San Francisco. Send for samples and price list.

CASTALIAN.—The Castalian is a natural mineral spring water from the Castalia spring, Inyo county, Cal. It was discovered by accident by one of our pioneer miners while prospecting, who, in a spirit of curiosity, used this water as a remedy for a malady that was pronounced incurable by the physicians. After he was cured it has been used by thousands of our afflicted people, and in every case with marked beneficial and curative effect. Professor Thos. Price, M. D., analytical chemist, after making a careful analysis, certifies to its hygienic properties, and says it is a "remarkable water," and after a therapeutic study of it says that it is the most remarkable of any he ever knew or heard of. It is a positive cure for diseases of the blood, stomach, kidneys and urinary organs, and has proved a specific for poison oak and catarrh. Two diplomas for the "Best Natural Mineral Water" has been awarded by California State Fair and Mechanics' Institute. Bros. Forbes & Davenport are sole agents for the Pacific coast. Depot 27 Sixth street.

SOME time ago several of the leading fraternal society members of this city perfected a system of "endowment," in which many of the valuable features of business and fraternal experience have been combined. The idea of the Fraternal Endowment Association is to provide a comfortable sum of money for its own living members, at the end of ten or fifteen years from their date of joining. Many thousands belong to various associations guaranteeing certain amounts to families in the event of their death. The F. E. A. presents a method whereby the living member is himself benefited. The object of the Association is to encourage economy, and provide for the future by a series of regular payments, etc. Their advertisement will be found on our last page, where it will be seen that many of the leading fraternal society men are associated with it.

COMPLIMENTARY SAMPLES OF THIS PAPER are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage, and, as far as practicable, aid in circulating the journal, and making its value more widely known to others, and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $2 a year. Extra copies mailed for 10 cents, if ordered soon enough. Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times), by turning a leaf.

A CURIOUS accident occurred last week at the Sheep Ranch mine, in Calaveras county. Mr. Javaux was ascending the shaft on the tub, when a strand of the wire rope broke after the tub had made an ascension about 200 feet from the bottom. The strand of rope after it had been broken began to unwind with a lightning velocity, and went whirling down the shaft with a dangerous whirl towards the human freight on the tub. Mr. Javaux, realizing his perilous situation, jumped from the tub, and by chance caught on a slippery timber. He was obliged to stay there until assistance came down the shaft.

CLEANING BRASS.—The government recipe for cleaning brass, used in the arsenals, is said to be as follows: Make a mixture of one part common nitric acid, and one-half part sulphuric acid in a stone jar; then place ready a pail of fresh water and a box of sawdust. Dip the articles to be cleaned in the acid, then remove them into the water after which rub them with sawdust. This immediately changes them to a brilliant color. If the brass is greasy it must be first dipped in a strong solution of potash and soda in warm water; this cuts the grease so that the acid has the power to act. The Manufacturer says that rusted steel can be cleaned by washing with a solution of half an ounce of cyanide potassium, in two ounces of water, and then brushing with a paste composed of half an ounce of cyanide potassium, half an ounce of castile soap, an ounce of whiting and sufficient water to make the paste.—Cornwall Reflector.

PAPER GAS PIPES.—Gas pipes are now made of paper, by passing an endless strip of hemp paper, the width of which equals the length of the tube through a bath of melted asphalt, and then rolling it tightly and smoothly on a core, to give the required diameter. It is then sprinkled with fine sand and cooled in water; and when the core is drawn out the inside is served with a proofing composition. In addition to being absolutely tight and smooth, and much cheaper than iron, these pipes have great strength, for when the sides are scarcely three-fifths of an inch thick they will withstand a pressure of more than fifteen atmospheres. If buried underground they will not be broken by settlement, nor when violently shaken or jarred. The material being a bad conductor of heat, the pipes do not readily freeze. What next of paper?

THE London sporting clubs continue to be much exercised by the recent decree against horse-owning and betting by jockeys.

A NEW TREATMENT FOR NEURALGIA.—The latest agent introduced for the relief of neuralgia is a one per cent solution of hyperosmic acid, administered by subcutaneous injection. It has been employed in Billroth's clinic in a few cases. One of the patients had been a martyr to sciatica for years, and had tried innumerable remedies, including the application of electricity no fewer than 200 times, while for a whole year he had adopted vegetarianism. Billroth injected the above remedy between the tuber ischii and trochanter, and within a day or two the pain was greatly relieved, and eventually quite disappeared. It would be rash to conclude too much from these results in the face of the intractability of neuralgia to medication, but if it really proves to be as efficacious as considered, hyperosmic acid will be a therapeutic agent of no mean value.—Lancet.

DEFENSE OF VIVISECTION.—P. Bert, late Minister of Public Education in France, publishes an article in defense of vivisection. He says that savants do not resort to painful experiments upon the bodies of living animals except with heavy hearts. They do it unwillingly, and are often forced to control their own sufferings while so engaged. They are also bitterly opposed to all perversion and abuse of such experimentation by heartless or incompetent persons. Science, however, he says, cannot dispense with vivisection. It is for the benefit of humanity, and essential to the progress and development of human knowledge, and all efforts to prevent its perversion or abuse by legal restraints and regulations must prove useless and futile.

THE hands employed in three of the largest tobacco factories at Petersburg, Va., have struck in consequence of a reduction in wages of 25 cents per 1,000. The strike throws out of employment between 600 and 1,000 men, women and children.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold
fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and share holders on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practical miners in this country.

The Press gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.

New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific Coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific
States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator, and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer,
will find profit by its reading.

"I hereby cheerfully testify to the great efficiency of Dr. Horne's wonderful Electric Truss. It fits like a kid glove, and is easy, reliable and comfortable. Also, a perfect retainer of my painful rupture. I would not sell it for $1,000 and do without it. Yours respectfully, Edwin J. Haskett, Member House of Representatives, Silver Cliff, Colorado, Feb. 13, 1883."

THE PACIFIC RURAL PRESS.

Established in 1870—This is the leading farming journal on the western half of the continent, and second to none in America. It is well printed and illustrated, weekly. Contains an unusual amount of fresh, original farm, household and family circle literature. Careful attention is paid to giving full and reliable weekly market reports.
The following are among its ably conducted departments: Editorials on agriculture and other timely and important subjects of live interest to farmers and their families; agricultural, and other useful and ornamental illustrations; correspondence from various quarters of our new and rich developing fields of agriculture on the Pacific coast, embracing new hints and ideas from progressive men and women in all branches of rural industry;
Horticulture; Floriculture; The Garden; The Home Circle; The Grange; Young Folks; Domestic Economy; Good Health; Entomological; Sheep and Wool; The Dairy; The Stock Yard; Poultry Yard; Swine Yard; The Apiary; The Vineyard; Queries and Replies; New Inventions (and illustrations of new and improved machinery); Agricultural Notes; Items of General News, etc. Its columns are studiously filled with chaste, interesting, fresh and useful reading, devoid of questionable literature for old or young and fancifully alluring clap-trap advertisements. Send for sample copies. Subscription, in advance, $3 a year. Agents wanted, on liberal pay.

Grand Recorder's Department.

HEADQUARTERS of Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., Rooms 40 and 41, St. Ann's Building, corner of Eddy and Powell streets, San Francisco. H. G. PRATT.

GRAND MEDICAL EXAMINER'S HEADQUARTERS—Office, No. 234 Post street, San Francisco, Cal. JAMES SIMPSON, M. D.

REMITTANCES for the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN can be forwarded to the Grand Recorder. Always inclose statement, separate from the Grand Recorder's, of the amount sent for different purposes. Don't forget this.

EVERY few days inquiries are made as to the meaning of the law relating to the reinstatement of members suspended from the Order. The law is not explicit, and until changed or construed by competent authority I can only give my individual opinion of what it means, and advise accordingly, as follows:

1st. Application, re-examination, ballot, etc., must be had as in the case of a new applicant.

2d. The degrees are not to be reconferred.

3d. If suspension was for six months' delinquency on assessments, the applicant must pay:

For medical examinations.....	$2 25
For back beneficiary.....	7 00
For beneficiary deposit.....	1 00
For arrearages of dues up to the time of suspension from the Order.....	.....
Total.....	$.....

The back beneficiary moneys to be forwarded with next remittance after reinstatement, and the dollar deposit to be remitted on assessment of first month after reinstatement, the same as for any other Master Workman.

4th. If suspension was for six months arrearages of Lodge dues, collect from the applicant:

For re-examination.....	$2 25
The amount of dues for, the nonpayment of which he was suspended from the Order.....	.....
The amount of assessments he owed when suspended from the Order.....	.....
For beneficiary deposit.....	1 00
For General Fund.....	1 00
Total.....	$.....

Remittance of beneficiary moneys to be made as in the case before mentioned.

If Financiers will cut this item out and paste in some book for convenient reference it will save much trouble and correspondence.

WITHIN the meaning of the law a clearance card is not deposited till finally left with the Lodge to which the holder is transferred by election. In other words the deposit does not occur till after election. The mere leaving a card with a Lodge to which a member desires to be transferred is not a deposit. A clearance card bears on its face the time to which the holder paid his dues in advance, and is not good beyond that time. A vote on an application by cards taken after the expiration of the card would not be legal.

THE administration of Supreme Master Workman Fish bids fair to see all arrearages on death losses in the Supreme Jurisdiction paid, the bonded debt liquidated, and Iowa substantially reunited. If these things be all accomplished, could any one ask for more glory than would come thereby?

WE acknowledge receipt of a pamphlet

A Needed Reform.

We learn from Supreme Master Workman Fish a little incident that occurred in connection with the anniversary entertainment of the Saucelito Lodge, which affords a good text, as pointing to a needed reform in our Grand Lodge Constitution.

Among the audience present at the entertainment, were somewhere about a score of British sea-captains—men of superior rank, morally, intellectually and physically—whose ships are at present wintering in the

To the minds of thinking people, it would seem that an opportunity like this, if not lost, would be the entering wedge toward the introduction and firm grounding of our great Order in the Mother Country, and perhaps throughout Europe.

The law which excludes them, was doubtless never framed with such a case in view, for it is not the spirit of our legislators to bar out such desirable material, carrying with it prospects of a more magnificent future for the Order than has yet been dreamed of. Supreme Master Workman Fish plainly expressed the opinion that the law that bars them out is clearly unconstitutional, as conflicting with the Supreme Lodge Constitution, and would not stand if put to the test. Would not a revision of this part of our Grand Lodge Constitution be a good piece of work for the coming Grand Lodge?

The Prize Poems.

The response to our prize poem offer has been quite gratifying, giving us a goodly number of poems to select from, most of which are of no small merit. The grandeur of the theme of Fraternity, it seems, has not been overrated as a basis for poetic effort. The selection will be made in time to have the prize poem appear in the issue published nearest to the date of Washington's Birthday, on which occasion, as heretofore noted, it is proposed to get out a splendid extra sized edition, fully fitting in beauty of illustrations, size and carefully prepared articles on patriotic and fraternal themes, to make it a most appropriate memento of the birthday of the Father of his Country. The other poems will be reserved for publication with honorable mention in future issues, in the order of their merit, either over the name or nom de plume of the author, as most agreeable, unless withdrawn by wish of the author.

"The Beautiful Snow."

Our illustration is suggestive of the Arctic temperature, to which the inhabitants around the bay and in the higher sections of the interior of the State have been treated recently. A snow-storm two years in succession in San Francisco is something wonderful, and although the snow-fall of this year was not so heavy as that of last winter, yet it was sufficient to give us a slight coating here, and to make old Tamalpais and other mountains around the bay glitter all day in their silvery sheen. Our artist gives us a picture as he saw it near the bases of said mountains. It is hard to tell in whom the snow creates the most wonder, the charitable youngsters or the hungry birds, who, judging by their lively jumping, find out that the snow makes their toes tingle to an unaccustomed degree.

RECORDERS of the Lodges throughout this Jurisdiction are requested to send into the Grand Recorder's office the names of Representatives to the Grand Lodge at their earliest convenience. In our issue preceding the Grand Lodge we will publish a full and complete list.

A TASTE OF EASTERN WEATHER.

containing information for subordinate Lodge officers, for the State of Kansas, compiled by E. M. Forde, Grand Recorder of that Jurisdiction. Therein are contained instructions to subordinate Lodge officers concerning the manner of keeping their books, making returns to the Grand Lodge, and conducting the affairs of Lodges generally. The information is valuable, and the plan one that might be adopted with profit by Grand Recorders generally, except in cases where they have as good a medium as the WATCHMAN, through which to reach subordinate Lodge officers, where the new plan is not so essential.

near neighborhood of Saucelito. These men, nearly all of whom were family-men, and some of whom are accompanied by their families, paid the closest attention to the addresses of Brothers Watson and Fish, as the objects, aims, history and present condition of the Order were unfolded to them, and were most favorably impressed thereby.

To such an extent was this impression made, that after the other exercises they immediately called an informal meeting of their number, and decided unanimously to join the Order. They were much disappointed when they found that the law of this Jurisdiction would not admit any person, non-resident of this State.

The Fireside.

The Puppy's Mishap.

There was once a little puppy
That was curiously inclined;
He nosed about and nosed about,
To see what he could find.

One day upon an ash heap,
An old tea-pot he spied;
Forthwith he poked his head in,
To see what was inside.

The puppy's ears were very large,
The tea-pot's mouth was small;
When he tried to pull his head out,
It wouldn't come at all.

The puppy barked and whined and howled,
And kept up such a clatter,
John and Mary running can e
To see what was the matter.

John took the puppy in his arms,
And tried to keep him still;
Then Mary seized the tea-pot,
And both pulled with a will.

But all their efforts were in vain;
His dogship found out then
'Tis easier to get in a scrape
Than to get out again.

"We'll take him to the tinman's,"
Then master Johnny cried;
So dog and tea-pot in his arms,
Down the long street they hied.

Then all the people whom they met Laughed till they nearly cried;
They'd often seen a tea-pot, but never
With a puppy's head inside.

The tinman quickly plied his shears,
And set the puppy free;
The way he ran back up the street,
It was a sight to see.

And now, where'er his puppyship
A curious thing has spied,
He puts his nose in as before,
But keeps his ears outside.

— F. L. HUNTER.

How a Baby Saved the Soldiers.

Grizzled and gray, dazed and indolent, looking as if he had missed the train in the progress of his life, as if the world had gone by and left him hopelessly behind—no Christmas turkey for him this year; nor for the twenty years past, I reckon—the old Confederate soldier (who limped about awkwardly, for he had a lot of lead to carry) told me the story the other day in the Shenandoah. If it is untrue or dull, blame him, not me. I only give it as I got it.

General "Jeb" Stewart was hanging on the Federal flank. His midnight camp was pitched on the hillside. Up the hill a little way lay a farm house; two or three hay stacks hung upon the hillside. The worn-out horses fed there and nodded their drowsy heads to the hay. All around on the ground under the trees in camp the troopers lay—black men, white men, brown men, men who were gray and old, little lads, boys who had seen a dozen battles and hardly yet as many years—a mixed and a motley lot, ragged, wretched, hungry. They lay on their bellies before the fire munching roasted corn, gnawing it off the cob greedily, husking it, roasting it, rolling it in the ashes on the coals, singeing it in the blazing fire of old Virginia fence rails. Now and then a shot rang out in the clear still night, away where the tired pickets met too closely for peace; and now and then better disposed men on the picket lines, or more favored and fortunate, met together and reached each other on their bayonets tobacco and old ragged newspapers in a sort of exchange of prisoners of war. The moon rode high and white in the great blue sea above, and all the stars of Heaven looked down in pity and in peace.

Then a song burst out. The black men were singing louder, sweeter, with more pathos and memories of home than the white men. It was a sad, grotesque, weird and unique picture. Suddenly Stuart stood in the midst of the ragged and uproarious lot.

"Discipline! Look here Sergeant Zeb. I want discipline or death. Discipline I say! Do you expect me to fight battles and win victories with a howling mob like this, and the enemy right here waiting to recoil on us the moment we give him a chance? Discipline, I say! Hang your blacks and shoot your whites; or have discipline!"

Silence in a second! And the long, lean men and the sleeping lads pulled themselves together and tried to look and act like soldiers, while the blacks, at the suggestion of their being hung up, melted back from the fitful embers into the night, as if they were a part of it.

Then the weary, bearded chief threw himself on a heap of saddles at hand and forgot his sternness, as he looked about over the wretched group of poor fellows gathered there for a little rest under the oaks.

"Boys, I'm hungry, hungry as a wolf. What have you got to eat?"

A dozen men sprang up, a half-dozen young, beardless troopers rushed forward, and from out the night, back under the trees, there came many black forms. And each and every one, black men and white men, old men and little boys, reached up and thrust into the chieftain's face, with generous alacrity, an ear of roasted corn. Some of these ears of corn had only a few teeth marks in them, being almost entirely intact. Others, again, were pretty well gnawed down to the cob. But they were all alike offered with prompt generosity.

"Corn!" and the Confederate chief shook his head with a grim and sickly smile as he muttered to himself: "Corn! biled corn, roasted corn, raw corn, white corn, red corn—all kinds of corn. No, no, boys, I'm hungry, but I can't eat corn any more to-night."

The men melted back in respectful silence into a broad circle. And there, suddenly, somehow in the center of that circle stood a child, a little boy who had been aroused from his sleep on the pile of saddles in the commotion that attended the chieftain's coming. And now, wide awake, with a little toy flag in one hand and a red apple in the other, this little boy stood there in the midst of these wild and ragged men, with cheeks as rosy as the apple he held in his dimpled little hand.

"If yer hungry, mister capten, general, here's my yed apple," and with this the little boy toddled right up and stood almost between the booted legs of the surprised soldier.

"Sergeant Zeb, where in all Jericho did this child come from? Is it yours? I won't have children around me here. I left my babes at home; can't you do the same?"

"Tain't my poor little chickie, General Stuart."

"Then take it to its mother," thundered the Chief.

"Its mother is dead, General."

"To its father, then."

"Its father is dead, too, General."

"Dead?"

"Dead. Killed in the battle yesterday, when you led over that stone fence by the farm house on the hill, sah."

The Confederate General bit his lips. Then, muttering to himself as he turned half away: "Killed at the farm house where I led. Some poor farmer defending his home and little ones. I can't stand this!"

"Please, sir, Mr. General, won't you take my yed apple? Papa growed it in his orchard. And he buyed me that, too."

Here the child reached its little flag, trying hard to make friends with the seemingly hard man, who was turning away as if to avoid it.

"Sergeant Zeb, where did that flag come from?"

"Had it in its hand when I found it, sah, and it won't give it up, sah; says its father gave it to it for the Fourth of July, sah."

"Foff of July," piped the little waif, waving the little five cent stars and stripes overhead, there in the midst of the dark and gathering circle of soldiers under the oaks.

The General turned, stooped and caught the child up in his arms.

"Keep your pretty little flag and wave it when and where you like. You don't know the difference, and I wish I didn't know the difference. Here, Zeb, take care of this kid. Boys, we killed its father by chance yesterday. Let's take care of it. We can't do less; and, maybe, it will bring us luck. What do you say, boys?"

The wild shout that shook the leaves of the oaks overhead startled the advocate for discipline, and, turning to Zeb, as he strode away into the night for another part of his camp, he shouted, "Silence! and Zeb, discipline, discipline! Dash it, discipline or death, I say," and he was gone.

They gathered about the wide-eyed, rosy-faced orphan with its little flag and red apple, and many a black and white and not-over-clean hand reached out to toy with and stroke the hair of gold that hung heavy as corn silk in summer time over the lad's shoulders.

"I found it in the fence corner," said Zeb, "all a shiverin' and its daddy and its mammy dead, shot down by stray bullets when we stormed the place."

"Yes, and dar war a rabbit, right aside ob him," said a black face back in the dark, over another man's shoulder.

"And golly, we kotched and eat der rabbit," chuckled another black man.

"Wal, we'll keep the kid; keep 'im till the cows come home." And with a grunt of universal approval from all as they gradually melted away, old Zeb hoisted the little one high up on his colossal shoulders, and turned suddenly to look and listen, for there was a shout down the hill and a sudden sharp volley of shots above, beyond the hay stacks. It began to look as if this little squad of raiders had got into a bite. Shouts of the enemy down the hill; shots of the enemy up the hill beyond the hay stacks. Which way should the surprised and panic-stricken soldiers fly? The colossal old Virginia sergeant, with the child on his massive shoulders, was the only officer in charge. The blacks were hiding about behind trees, behind each other, under saddles, blankets, anywhere. The shouts from the advancing enemy came loud and clear from below and very near. The camp-fire, the song of the soldiers, had done the mischief. This little squad of ragged, panic-stricken night raiders was doomed. The leaves began to fall like autumn time over old Zeb, the tall and angular old sergeant.

What a plight for a soldier! A battle on hand and a babe in his arms. The old sergeant came near throwing it away with the heap of negroes hiding away under the saddles. Where was Stuart? The sergeant put his hand to his ear and leaned to listen as best he could between the sharp volleys from below, that were ruining the prospects of next year's acorn crop in the trees overhead. He could hear the clatter of iron hoofs on the ridge to the west. The moon was setting large and round and low. Over the bare crest of this hill and against the moon, he could see the Confederate cavalry pouring in impetuous flight. Stuart, the cautious and wary leader, had escaped.

"Come, men! We must follow our General on foot—any way to get out of this. Come! Up by the hay stacks and on over the ridge."

The strong man started up the stony hill to pass the hay stacks. The child, as if it was afraid it might fall, wound its little left arm affectionately about the great gray shock of hair. And that little act saved it; that accidental show of affection won the old fellow's heart entirely. Why, he would not now have pitched it aside with the frantic negroes for gold.

Up the hill he led swiftly, the men following in groups, knots, singly, armed, unarmed, limping, leaning, erect, in all manners of ways, only so as to escape the ferocious Federals charging up the hill from below. They could see the points of shining bayonets entering their camp, by the light of the burning fence rails as they fled out of it, and the black color had nearly all faded from the flying Confederates as they neared the hay stacks.

Here the gray-headed old sergeant, with the child on his shoulder, paused for a moment right under the hay stacks to get his bearings. The moon had fallen down behind the crest of the hill. It was nearly dark now. The Federal bayonets were only a few steps in the rear. The ragged and demoralized Confederates huddled close and helpless up and after the tall and grizzled old giant, who stood there looking out which way to lead them, with the child on his shoulder, its little left arm hugging the great shaggy gray head, its right one holding the flag.

The tall, gray soldier threw up his great, heavy hand to his brow and looked out under his broad palm to try and see which way to lead.

Suddenly the hay stacks blazed out before him, and the whole scene was bright as day. The Federals had been waiting for the Confederates to come! And now, as they stood there, huddled together and helpless as sheep, they find the hay stacks in their path of retreat, and the Federals stood there behind them, before them, around them, to shoot them down in the light which they had kindled.

It was a matchless and magnificent sight! No scene so bright, no sunlight brighter! It pleased the child, excited and delighted it. What could it care for the long line of gleaming guns leveled only a few rods away in the rear? What did it know of the death hiding down in every gleaming gun-barrel of that compact mass of uniformed men just before? Nothing at all. Its little heart leapt with wonder and delight at the beautiful uniforms, the discipline, the quick action into which every gun was brought instantly to the shoulder. The bayonets were beautiful—the gleaming bayonets all in the bright light.

The child seemed to think this a part of the celebration, and in the fullness of its delight, just as the Federal officer drew his sword and was giving the word "Fire!" the child, holding tight on to the great grizzled head with its left hand, and as if to contribute its part to the celebration, waved its little flag there in the glare and light. And in that awful stillness which comes always before any dread catastrophe, piped out in its shrill little voice, as it raised itself higher for the occasion:

"Foff of July!"

Put it upon record in gold and red that the Federal officer lowered the point of his sword. The heavy breeches of the guns struck the stony ground with a thud. The line of blue divided, and the old gray Confederate, with his little charge on his shoulder, still waving the little flag, passed on through the line, while cheer after cheer shook the bullet-riddled leaves of the oaks overhead.

And this is the story of the old Confederate soldier of the Shenandoah, who had missed the train on the line of progress down in old Virginia. Joaquin Miller.

On the Art of Entertaining.

That there is an art in entertaining one's friends no one can for a moment dispute, neither can they doubt that such an art is attainable by cultivation and care, though they will probably maintain, and with reason, that it is a gift possessed by comparatively few people and that in its spontaneity lies its chief charm. But for people who do not naturally possess the knack, it is necessary to analyze the art, not exactly to lay down rules, but to offer suggestions and to try to find out what are the chief features of this most enviable accomplishment. And the object of this present paper is so to do. How often on returning from a friend's house have we said, "What a delightful evening this has been; Mrs. A. certainly possesses the knack of giving every one enjoyment; her manner is charming to all!" On the other hand, we return from a dull house, where everything is done en regle, but where a predominant sense of stupidity overwhelms us, and if we are at all sensitive to externals, marks us for her own. What constitutes the difference in these two cases? Mainly the manner of our hosts. Manner, then, is of the greatest importance in determining the success or failure of our efforts for the entertainment of our friends. Some people taboo what is called a good manner; they maintain that if the motive be good it matters little whether the manner be graceful or rough. School girls are often of this opinion; they are so afraid of being thought "young ladyish" or affected that they rush to the opposite extreme, and think themselves true and straight-forward if rough and ready. Self-consciousness and shyness are often the causes of this awkwardness; in trying to be something they are unnatural and uneasy; but before experience these gaucheries disappear, and an easy and graceful manner is frequently the happy result. Manner may in itself be of two kinds, the manner which is perfectly well-bred and refined, but withal very chilling, and the manner into which is infused all the charm of a kindly, sunshiny honest nature, with a sincere regard to please. On the surface it bears the stamp of truth; here is no "mere veneer," no courtesy put on, but a graciousness of speech and action which flows from the inner being and is always there. As well as manner, tact, that happy quality which in women is supposed to be inborn, plays a prominent part in the art of entertaining. Tact enters into the feelings of others without showing that it does so; it anticipates wishes, and gives them fulfilment almost before they are wishes; in short, it is useful in a thousand instances, and may well be called another sense.

Poets' Sisters.

To those familiar with the interesting biographies of our poet philosopher "Emerson," the "parcae" of his home and life have become veritable household words. Destiny seems to have been equally generous to our beloved poet Whittier, as his mother, his beautiful sister Elizabeth, and his aunt "Mercy," immortalized in "Snow-bound," formed a beautiful trinity, who ministered to him with loving, helpful ministrations and benediction. From an interesting article in the Boston Traveller, we quote the following sentiments in regard to the beloved sister Elizabeth:

"Mr. Whittier never married, and with the single exception of the exquisite lines entitled "Benedicite," he has given the public no clew to the romance of his youth. His sister Elizabeth, sympathizing with him completely, of a rare poetic nature and fastidious taste, and a delicate dark-eyed beauty, was long a companion that must have made the want of any other less keenly felt than by lonely men in general. The bond between the sister and brother was more perfect than any of which we have known, except that between Charles and Mary Lamb, and in this instance the conditions were of perfect moral and mental health. To the preciousness of the relationship the pages of the poet bear constant witness, and Amesbury village is full of traditions of their affection and of the gentle loveliness and brilliant wit of Elizabeth, whom the people admired and revered almost as much as they do the poet himself."

The writer of the foregoing would doubtless exclude from his exception the beautiful comradeship and love of Wordsworth and his sister Dorothy. Mr. Hudson, the great interpreter of Wordsworth, in one of his lectures on the poet, says: "Surely never has sister done a more delicate service for a brother than Dorothy Wordsworth did for the poet. She was a rarely gifted woman, with eyes of preternatural brilliancy, imaginative, warm-hearted, and keenly responsive to every note of her brother's genius." DeQuincy, who knew her well, describes her as "seemingly inwardly consumed by a subtle fire of impassioned intellect." In many places of his works the poet bears grateful testimony to what she did for him. At this time he tells us it was she who maintained for him a saving intercourse with his true self, opened for him the obstructed passage between head and heart, whence in time came genuine self-knowledge and peace. Again he says that his imagination was by nature too masculine, austere, even harsh; he loved only the sublime and terrible; was blind to the milder grades of landscape and of character. She it was who softened and humanized him, opened his eye to the more hidden beauties, his heart to the gentler affections.

She gave me eyes, she gave me ears,
And humble cares, and delicate fears,
A heart, the fountain of sweet tears,
And love, and thought, and joy.

The first home which they shared together was at Karedown, in Dorsetshire, where they settled in the fall of 1795. Here the two read Italian together, studied nature together, and here, some careful critics of our own day confidently assert, the poet-eyed sister wrote some of the most beautiful poems that bear her brother's name.

Passing by the friendship of Tasso and his sister Cornelia, of Sir Philip and Mary Sidney, of Goethe and Cornelia, of Chateaubriand and his youngest sister Lucille, we close this partial record with one of Byron's poetic references to his sister Augusta:

My sister, my sweet sister! if a name
Dearer and purer were it should be thine;
Mountains and seas divide us; but I claim
No tears, no tenderness to answer mine.
Go where I will, to me thou art the same,
A loved regret which I would not resign.
There are yet two things in my destiny—
A world to roam through and a home with thee.

A FRENCHMAN is teaching a donkey to talk. What we want in this country is a man who will teach donkeys not to talk.

Bucking.

The engraving on this page gives a spirited view of a man in a position which all who know it by experience will appreciate. Bucking is a vice common to equine nature, but developed to a greater or less degree according to the nature of the beast. Perhaps there is no prettier bucking in the world than is done by the bronchos of our coast; and yet other regions may approach it, for our illustration is by an Australian artist, and embodies observation in that country. In the picture a half-broken colt is doing his best to unseat his rider, who, however, despite the plungings and curvetings of his steed, sits as serenely in his saddle as if he were in a chair. To the bush-bred native youth there is no greater pleasure than that of handling an unbroken colt, and the lust for power inherent in man is gratified by the struggle that takes place between horse and rider, invariably ending in the latter obtaining a mastery. The result is not always attained without a few falls, but such occasions elicit from the unfortunate horseman's companions nothing but jeers and gibes. An unfortunate townsman on a visit to the country affords a rare opportunity for sport, and the unfortunate individual generally finds himself astride a well known buck-jumper, and his discomfiture is generally the result. With head down, heels up, and back arched, this equine demon contorts himself into all kinds of positions until the incubus is got rid of, and as soon as the rider lands on the ground he thoroughly realizes the truth of Mark Twain's description of his adventures with a Mexican plug, when he says that "after the performance was over, one had sought the base of his stom-

Sojourner's First Speech.

Sojourner Truth's first public speech, as reported by Mrs. Gage:—"She moved very slowly to the front, laid her old bonnet at her feet, and turned her great speaking eyes to 'em. Hisses came from the audience, but she looked the disapproval down. Nearly six feet high, her head was thrown back and her eyes pierced the upper air like one in a dream. At her first word there was a profound hush. She spoke in deep when I could get it—and bear the lash as well; and ain't I a woman? I have borne thirteen children, and seen 'em mos' all sold off to slavery; and when I cried out with my mother's grief none but Jesus heard me; and ain't I a woman? Den dey talks 'bout dis ting in de head—what dis dey call it? [Intellect, whispered some one near.] What's dat got to do with women's rights, or nigger's rights? If my cup won't hold but a pint, and yourn holds a quart, wouldn't you be mean not to let me have my little half measure full? Den dat little man in black dar, he says women can't have as much rights as men, because Christ wasn't a woman! Whar did your Christ come from? Rolling thunder could not have stilled that crowd as did those deep, wonderful tones, as she stood there with outstretched arms and eyes of fire. Raising her voice still louder, she repeated: 'Whar did your Christ come from?—From God and a woman! Man had nothin' to do wid him!'"

Anti-Meat Eaters.

Perhaps we have all been inclined at times to look upon the anti-meat eaters as a harmless race of people, who, from a queasy stomach or an over sensitive conscience, had made up their minds to deny themselves certain good things which the rest of the world enjoy without compunction. No one is ugly enough to grudge them their dish of oatmeal and apple sauce, and all must admire the heroism that can look over a bill of fare replete with all sorts of provocatives of appetite and pick out asparagus, turnips, potatoes and cauliflower. And if it be true, as many imagine, that a herbaceous diet produces a sweet, placid and patient frame of mind, we would all be glad to see our wives and neighbors take to Graham bread and fruit.

No doubt many are inclined to watch this experiment as a scientific curiosity, in order to see how the law of heredity may affect the meat-eating propensity of the race. The shape of certain teeth seem to be in the way, but then, as Darwin's law of variation in the direction of the best is said to have sprouted the fins of fish into the wings of the eagle, developed men out of apes, and Webster's Unabridged from the chatter of monkeys, it would require a very hard-headed man to doubt that the carnivorousness of the race may be cured, or at least greatly abated.

A very agreeable writer on vegetarianism, whose pamphlet lies before us, insists, from data that certainly looks very plausible, that if meat-eating were wholly dispensed with there would soon come a time when human nature would get rid of all the rude, quarrelsome and combative ways of our fathers. Total depravity would run out. There would be no more ugly husbands and cross wives. Fighting and homicide would cease; even Congress would become a happy family. It is blood that engenders all these bad propensities. He also declares that there would be a wonderful elevation of mental power, as it is certain that a vegetable diet possesses more phosphates—the best fuel for the brain—while meat produces morbid humors which hang in a thick fog around the "dome of thought and palace of the soul." Literature, religion and politics would drop their beefy polemics, their logmatic style, and sparkle with truth and beauty, like a crown radiant with diamonds. All tolerance would cease; there would be an increased refinement of manners, for the apparent reason that a vegetable diet tends to exalt the nervous sensitiveness. It is said a well educated vegetarian has become so delicately organized that he can smell a meat-eater a rod away, and detect in sermon, editorial or song the odious flavor of pork or codfish. Now, if it really be true that a vegetable, watery diet enlarges the brain, clarifies the intellect, gives wing to imagination, promotes sweet reasonableness in style and temper, we take great pleasure in recommending its use to all of our editorial contemporaries.

A GUNBOAT APPROPRIATELY NAMED.—There is in the English navy a gunboat named the Frolic, the ways of which are so frolicsome and free, and which is afflicted with such a constitutional "bias" toward the starboard tack that one set of engines is required to develop 100 horse power more than the other to keep her in a straight line. The eccentricity is inconvenient, but totally inexplicable. Her propellers are of the same type, the screws of the same pitch, and the blades in perfect accord. Ordered to the Cape, her commander found himself going direct for New York, and concluded to put into Portsmouth before he got any further on the way. Now, had it been the Polyphemus, one could have understood it, but for a respectable boat, blessed with a pair of everything necessary to keep her in a straight path, to exhibit such a rakish preference for devious courses, suggests truly painful explanations.

It is said that at a recent Boston wedding the six ushers were chosen from rejected suitors of the bride. It was a grateful act to give the unsuccessful suitors an opportunity to witness the life punishment inflicted upon their successful rival.

THE man who married a girl because she "struck his fancy" says she strikes him anywhere that comes handy now.

ach and the other the crown of his head, but he still wanted several more hands for other afflicted spots." Our artist has caught thoroughly the position, and depicts accurately the action of the horse.

NOT A BAD COUNTRY FOR RAILWAYS.—The Mexican Central railway runs through twenty-one cities with an aggregate population of 896,609, and eight of them are State capitals. In these cities are seven mints, whose annual coinage is not less than $35,000,000, and the agricultural valuation of the twelve States through which it passes is something like $110,000,000.

tones, though not loud, which reached every ear in the house, and this is part of what she said: 'Dat man ober dar say dat women need to be helped into carriages, and lifted ober ditches, and to hab de bes' place everywhar. Nobody eber helps me into carriages, or ober mud-puddles, or gibs me any bes' place.' And, raising herself to her full height and her voice to a pitch like rolling thunder, she asked: 'And ain't I a woman? Look at my arm!' And she bared her arm to the right shoulder, showing her tremendous muscular power. I have ploughed and planted, and gathered into barns, and no man could head me; and ain't I a woman? I could work as much and eat as much as a man—

The Seceders Defeated.

"The Victory is Ours."

OFFICE OF GRAND RECORDER,
ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN,
CEDAR FALLS, Iowa, Jan. 28, 1884.)

EDITOR WATCHMAN: Dear Sir and Brother: It is with much pleasure that I am able to inform you that the suit in quo warranto so long pending, has been settled at last, and in our favor, after an eleven (11) days contest before Judge Utt, in the Circuit Court. His verdict gives us all we ask or claim, viz: Corporate rights, records, name, and in short, everything belonging to and accrued by the Order up to the time of their secession. This is a victory not only for the A. O. U. W., of Iowa, but also for the entire Order, and we think we have reason to rejoice at the result.

Yours in C. H. and P.,

L. O. HOWLAND,

Grand Recorder of Iowa.

We agree with our Iowa brethren that they have a right to rejoice and be glad. They had all along expressed great confidence in the result of the pending appeal to the Courts for their rights, legal and fraternal, but in this confidence we confess we did not share. The decision of a Michigan Court some years since, involving issues somewhat similar, and later a decision in Pennsylvania, had shaken our faith. But in the Iowa case, just terminated, our strength is renewed, and we rejoice all the more because of the misgivings we could not help but entertain. We trust there will be no appeal from this decision, but that it will be acquiesced in by the defeated party as final, and that once more we shall behold a united Order in Iowa.

Perhaps the most important matter that will engage the attention of the Supreme Lodge at its next session will be the disposition of this Iowa business. We hope a liberal policy will prevail, and that no hard or humiliating terms will be imposed on those who choose to renew their allegiance; and yet the law should be vindicated, and its dignity upheld. The ostensible reason for rebellion in Iowa was the levying of Relief Assessments by the Supreme Lodge, in accordance with the law, legally passed by that body. Two such assessments—one of 10 cents per capita, and another of 50 cents—were levied on the whole Order before the formal suspension of the Grand Lodge of Iowa, and it was because of the refusal of that latter body to respond to these assessments that it became necessary to suspend it. Therefore one of the conditions precedent to the reinstatement of any Lodge or member of the rebellious wing of the A. O. U. W. should be the payment of these assessments, to wit: 60 cents per capita. Beyond this we would exact nothing. To all who would show their good faith by paying up this trifle, we would extend complete amnesty and absolution for all past offenses, not even cutting off any honors that may have come to them in the way of rank, even during the time of rebellion. The victor can afford to be generous to a fallen foe. Scars are ugly things. Let us, if possible, cover them out of sight.

The Iowa Workman, organ of the seceders, in its issue dated January 15th, evidently scents defeat in the air, for in its editorial leader it foreshadows the result and shows the determination of the faction to die hard in the following language:

We have delayed publication of The Workman for the purpose of giving the result of the suit brought by the Supremes. It was called up for trial on Tuesday, January 15th, and is now being heard before Judge Utt. It is probable that it will not be concluded until the middle of next week. The suit is being hotly contested by both sides. Messrs. Rogers & Lane for plaintiffs, and Messrs. Fouke, Nichols, Boies and Tollerton for the Grand Lodge of Iowa. It makes but little difference which way it is decided in the lower Court, as it must eventually be determined by the Supreme Court of Iowa. The brethren throughout the jurisdiction need not be alarmed or give themselves any uneasiness in reference to the result of this suit, as not one dollar of their insurance can be affected by the result, be it one way or the other. At the coming meeting of the Grand Lodge the whole matter will be laid before representatives and the situation fully canvassed and understood.

Degree of Honor.

Up to the present time our Degree of Honor Lodges have not met our expectations. The one feature on which, we are fully persuaded their only hope for permanency depends, seems to have met with little attention, and so we are not surprised to learn that two of these Lodges have recently given up the ghost, and several others are lingering between life and death. Their early demise seems inevitable. A few others that now appear in fair condition will follow after, just so sure as history repeats itself, unless they make the beneficiary feature of the law the mainspring of their efforts.

There should be certainly not less than 500 beneficiary members in our D. of H. Lodges before the meeting of the Grand Lodge. There might be if each one of these Lodges, and our Deputies generally would take hold of the business in real earnest. It would be pleasant to see the D. of H. have a good honest trial. Suppose some one of these Lodges arrange with a Physician to examine the whole eligible membership for a stated sum. In most cases such an arrangement could be made so that the cost to each would be a very small matter, say one dollar or less. Then a dollar for a beneficiary certificate, and another dollar for first beneficiary payment—about three dollars in all would cover the entire cost of becoming beneficiary in most instances. After that a regular payment of 50 cents per month, aside from the trifling amount for dues, and all the expenses would be told.

Again, suppose some one having the prosperity of these Lodges at heart, get up one good strong Lodge of beneficial members so far as possible. No doubt it could be done easily in any one of fifty places. Such a Lodge would be a beacon light to others, illuminating the way to success.

Our other Lodges are prospering to a degree that challenges admiration. If they were merely social and not beneficial, it is fair to presume the contrary would be the case. We therefore conclude that the Degree Lodges would prosper in like manner under like circumstances. If not, why not? Are we really to admit that the presence and participation of ladies in Lodge business will work disaster? Certainly not, while experience does not force us to it. Then why not make the effort that promises success, instead of flying in the face of history, which is filled with records of failure?

Pennsylvania Grand Lodge.

The eleventh annual session of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, met at Greensburgh, Pa., January 8th, and continued in session four days. There was the usual amount of legislation and other routine work, none of which demands special notice except in the case of a subordinate known as Corona Lodge, No. 23. This Lodge has been in hot water for the last year for refusing to obey certain relief calls issued by the Grand Lodge. The reason for its action, The Protector, from which we condense this report, does not clearly state. Suffice it to say that Corona Lodge has been in litigation with the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge with varying results during the past year. The case was submitted to a special committee at this session of the Grand Lodge, and after deliberating until the last day, the matter was settled by arbitration on the following terms:

The committee reported that they had agreed upon a basis of settlement of difficulties, No. 23 to pay at once all beneficiary and per capita tax due the Grand Lodge, the action of the Grand Lodge granting cards to be rescinded, those who had deposited cards to remain where they are, Corona to grant cards to those who desired to leave, those who had gone back to Corona to remain if they desired, and those who had not deposited their cards anywhere to be considered members of No. 23, and card to be granted if asked for, the dues of those paying to the Grand Lodge to be paid Corona Lodge. The committee was authorized to arrange matters on that basis. It retired, and upon entering, stated the moneys had been paid, and an order for dues to No. 23 was ordered. On motion, the charges against Corona Lodge were withdrawn and its representative admitted.

The following Grand Lodge officers were elected for the ensuing term: C. M. Boush, Meadville, G. M. W.; John H. Mowen, Pittsburg, P. G. M. W.; Joseph C. Smith, Philadelphia, G. Foreman; S. A. Kline, Greensburgh, G. Overseer; J. M. McNair, lock box 562, Pittsburg, G. Recorder; O. K. Gardner, Pittsburg, G. Receiver; W. A. Dougan, Meadville, G. Guide; A. G. Carroll, Warren, G. Watchman; G. Trustees—J. McF. Carpenter, W. Pratt Reed, M. D., J. H. Davidson, M. D. Representatives to the Supreme Lodge—W. H. James, Samuel B. Myers and Charles Babst.

THE conclusion of an editorial entitled "Increased Death Rate," in our last issue, has called forth a protest from a brother of an interior Lodge who has written us expressing his disagreement with the WATCHMAN's ideas thereon. We do not expect every one to adopt our views on the subject of "how the Order is always to stand on its legs." They were merely given in that instance as the conclusion arrived at by the most experienced men of the Order. Whether they are sound or not need not effect our relations with each other, for we all know that the Order is sound anyhow. Its successful existence for the past fifteen years proves that. A difference of opinion is always to be expected among the great mass of thinkers on any prominent issue.

SUPREME MASTER WORKMAN FISH has telegraphed to the Supreme Recorder to make a circular containing the full text of Judge Utt's decision in the Iowa case, to be sent to every Lodge in the United States, to be read before the members thereof.

THE Relief Board of the Supreme Lodge meets this month to fix the per capita tax for the coming relief call. Supreme Foreman, Beebe, presides for Supreme Master Workman, Dr. Fish, who will be unable to go East to attend this meeting. The S. M. W. expresses the hope that Iowa will be reconstructed in time to get the benefit of this call, and thus lighten it among the other Jurisdictions.

A CASE has occurred in Nevada where a brother had a very close call towards losing his membership, by deferring his date of receiving the Master Workman Degree until the very day he reached 50 years of age. Grand Master Workman Kinsley referred the case to the Supreme Master Workman, who rendered the following decision: "I think a man may fairly be considered as under 50 until 12 o'clock P. M., or midnight of his fiftieth birthday; so if the M. W. Degree was conferred before that hour, I should think he was entitled to retain his membership. Possibly, there may have been different rulings, but I believe this to be just, fair, and according to law."

The Assessment Notification Question.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—In your issue of Jan. 26th appeared an article on the question of giving notice of assessments to members. This you have justly styled an important matter, and call upon our legal brethren for advice, and a solution of this intricate problem. I am not a member of this distinguished profession, but will presume to offer a few suggestions which have been brought up through discussion of this matter in our Lodge.

My suggestions are these: That the Financier be provided with a "Notices of Assessments Book," similar to that now used for monthly reports by Lodges; that the notices be printed so far as practicable, the same as is now done; that upon each page of this book, and corresponding to the notice (which is to be torn off and mailed), there be left a stub, which shall show the date of notice, No. of assessment, to whom sent, and how, and such other information as may seem necessary. Let this book be kept in a place of security. As it is to be used by the Financier but once a month, it would be no great inconvenience to keep it in some safe. The Financier's Assessment Register should also be kept in a place of security.

In case a suspension has occurred, and more positive proof is required that notice has been given, let the Financier, at the end of each term, be required to make affidavit to the fact that the notices, as indicated by the stubs in his "Notices of Assessments Book," have been duly mailed or delivered by him to the persons therein indicated.

These records should be carefully preserved by the Lodge, and in case the plea of want of notice had to be met, the burden of proof would lie with the contestant and not the Lodge.

This system of notification is a little more expensive and requires a little more labor upon the part of the Financier. But I think it impossible to change the present imperfect system of notification without entailing more or less expense.

Should these suggestions seem unworthy of consideration of publication by you, just consign them to the waste basket and let us hear from the lawyers.

Yours, in C., H. and P.
L. L. HICOK.

Grand Island Lodge, No. 116, Grand Island, Cal., Feb. 2, 1884.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—In accordance with your request in the last issue of your paper, I beg leave to submit the following solution to the question of assessment notice:

In the first place, amend the present law by inserting an Article, requiring the M. W. to enquire on the second meeting night of every month, of the Financier: "Has each member of the Lodge been notified of assessment No. —?" In the second place, let the answer be placed on the minutes.

Should the records of the Lodge be destroyed, proof that the law required such question and answer, would be sufficient evidence. This method would make the attendance of the Financier in court unnecessary. I cannot conceive how the statement or oath of wife or heirs could be received in any court against the official record. How is it possible for any one to swear that such notice was not received by a deceased Brother,

Yours Fraternally,
Stockton, Feb. 5. A. M. CADEN.

[The plan of the first correspondent seems a feasible one; that of the latter, not so feasible for the reason that in such a case, the burden of the proof would rest, not on the plaintiff, but on the Order, or the special Lodge. In this connection we would make mention of a system of blanks exhibited to us by Brother Harry Lask, Financier of Golden Gate, No. 8, of this city, which he has used for several terms, and finds satisfactory, except for the amount of work entailed, which however he thinks could be still further abridged.—EDS. WATCHMAN.]

The "Select Knights" Again.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—I have seen a number of comments upon the article I wrote to you in regard to the Select Knights, and some of said comments have not always been couched in the fraternal language that is expected from brethren and gentlemen, as may be seen from the following extract from the Canadian Workman:

"The opposition of the California Brothers to the Select Knights is as contemptible as it is narrow-minded and unreasonable."

California opposes the formation of any organization under the title of "A. O. U. W.," unless said organization receives its authority, work and system from the Supreme Lodge, for the following reasons:

1. That by the act of incorporation granted to said Supreme Lodge in 1873, the right to use said title, and to have bodies organized under said title, is secured to it, and none other have the right to legally use it.

2. That by the Constitution, all "work," etc., performed under the name of the Order, must come from the Supreme Lodge (see Sections 7 and 8, of Digest). California holds that under the name "A. O. U. W.," the Select Knights confer so-called degrees, and "work" which did not emanate from, nor is authorized by, the Supreme Lodge.

3. That by section 665 of Digest, members are prohibited from visiting or countenancing any Lodges purporting to be "A. O. U. W.," which do not possess charters from the Supreme or Grand Lodge; and that the Select Knights by attaching "A. O. U. W." to their name, and having degrees, etc., conferred under said name, and possessing no such charter from either the Supreme or any other Grand Lodge of this Order, are "illegal" associations, so far as this Order is concerned.

The Censor asks: "Has our Order a patent on its title, and can it restrain its own members from using that title whenever and wherever they may please?" If the querist will take the trouble to look into the laws of other Orders, he will find that the use of a title, etc., is not optional with the membership, nor should it be. The title, like the emblems and the work, are under the exclusive control of the Supreme and Grand Lodges, and not at the disposal of any member or association of members outside of the regular system and rules. The Courts of law have decided that "A. O. U. W." does belong to the Supreme and Grand Lodges, and cannot be used without their consent.

Grand Lodges have the guaranteed right to supervise the welfare of the the Order in their own Jurisdictions, and to adopt such laws and regulations as they may deem for the good of the Order. The Supreme Lodge passes certain laws, for example: "The right to hold public installations," "The establishment of Lodges of the Degree of Honor;" but will any one take the position that a public installation could be held, or a Degree of Honor Lodge established, until the Grand Lodge of the State had passed a law, providing for such?

Admitting, for argument's sake, that the Supreme Lodge had accepted the so-called degrees of the Select Knights, and formally authorized the establishment of the same, will any one presume to say that they could be established in a State until the Grand Lodge of said State had legislated upon the subject? California has right, under its Constitution, to determine such matters, and if it did not wish public installations, Degree of Honor, or Select Knights, it is within its province to exclude them.

A paragraph before us says: "It is not true that the S. K's. have claimed to confer 'advanced degrees,' etc. I would reply that for months in what was claimed to be an official organ of the S. K's., viz., the St. Louis Overseer, that a standing paragraph said the degrees of the S. K's. were 'advanced degrees,' and in an official circular now before me, headed 'S. K. of A. O. U. W.," and signed by officers termed Grand Commander and Grand Recorder, these words occur: "Now, brothers, we hope you will investigate this, the chivalric degree of our noble A. O. U. W.," etc. To all this, I reply it is not, and never was, a degree of the A. O. U. W., and that the so advertising of it is illegal and unauthorized.

One more paragraph and I will trespass no farther. California does not oppose the intention, aims, or objects of the S. K's. It believes that all such associations are of benefit, and its position on these matters is shown by the wonderful prosperity of all such organizations in this State, where these fraternal co-operative societies stand second to no State in the Union. The S. K's. would have received a warm welcome and a cordial endorsement from the members of the A. O. U. W. here, if they had come on their own merits, and legally, without attaching the name of the Order to their title. We believe that illegal, uncalled for, and with the experience of other Orders before us, dangerous, and we claim the right under constitutional laws, to guard this matter in our own Jurisdiction. Drop the A. O. U. W., and the S. K's. are welcome. Continue to use it, and so far as California is concerned, it cannot have the good-will and co-operation of the membership here.

Fraternally,
WM. H. BARNES, P. G. M. W.
San Francisco, Feb. 3.

WE inquired some time ago, of the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN, under what authority of law the Grand Master Workman of that Jurisdiction threatened the members of one of its Lodges with summary suspension, if they joined the Select Knights. The WATCHMAN did not deign to answer our question.—Overseer

[The question must have been overlooked, and we are glad that the Overseer mentions it again, for it gives us the opportunity to refute the rumor, and say that after careful inquiry we are unable to find that the Grand Master Workman ever made such a threat. We think the Overseer must have been misinformed.—EDS. WATCHMAN.]

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.—Tuesday evening, Feb. 12, will witness a grand entertainment in celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the birthday of our martyred President, at the Unitarian Church, under the auspices of the Lincoln Guard of Honor and the Lincoln Association, of this city. One of the features of the occasion will be the delivery of an original poem on Lincoln, by Mrs. Eliza Pittsinger.

"If men dealt less in stocks and lands,
And more in bonds and deeds fraternal;
If love's work had more willing hands
To link this world with the supernal;
If men, when wrong beats down the right,
Would strike together to restore it;
If right made might in every fight,
The world would be the better for it."

DISTRICT No. 4, of which Brother Lemont is Deputy, is taking steps to hold a grand meeting some time this month. Notice of time and place will be given as soon as definite arrangements are made.

Address of Supreme Master Workman Fish.

Delivered at Anniversary Celebration of Saucelito Lodge, No. 20

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—I think some word of explanation, perhaps apology, will not be out of place. I see myself announced on your cards of invitation as the G. M. W. of California. Now all know that the G. M. W., Brother Rogers, is a polished, fluent and most eloquent speaker, while for myself it is but justice to say that my pathway through life has led in other directions, and my gifts, if I have any, are entirely of another kind. I feel honored by your invitation to be present at your anniversary exercises, and thank you for the opportunity you give me for saying in my plain way that I love the Order to which we belong, and believe it has a glorious future in store for it. I need not dwell here upon its history or its achievements, for you all know them as well or better than I do. Enough that in the brief period of 16 years since its organization it has grown to a membership of over 130,000, with a financial liability of $260,000,000. It has actually paid out to the widows and orphans of our deceased brothers over $8,000,000, carrying comfort and consolation to over 4,000 desolated and sorrow-stricken households. Its beneficence has been bestowed where most needed, and where it has been best appreciated. While all good and true men are welcomed to its ranks, as a rule neither the millionaire nor the pauper seeks admission. The honest, industrious laborer, artisan, farmer, artist or professional man; all in fact who honestly toil with head, heart or hands for the general good, in every class of society in our great and free country, here find the means of providing against want, and sufficient for their loved ones when they shall have passed away. In numerical strength the A. O. U. W. will soon overtake, and in character of membership she will now challenge comparison with Ancient Masonry, or more modern Odd Fellowship; and like them I fully believe will increase and endure while there are tears to dry or sorrow to assuage. But protection, while one of its chief objects, is not its only one. First of the mystic words of our inspiring motto stands charity, not mere alms giving, but as was defined by Mahomet, "the wide range of all possible kindness." Thus every good act towards a brother is charity; the removal of a stone from his pathway, any kind word or look, the giving of a cup of cold water.

"For the drying of a single tear has more Of honest fame than shedding seas of gore."

Indeed charity consists of the exemplification of that law of human kindness embodied in the golden rule, given us by the Great Teacher himself: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them."

It is but fitting that this word, the embodiment of man's whole duty to man should stand first in our mystic trinity, and it is worthy of being written in letters of living light. In the struggle for honor and fame, and the mad race for worldly gain, characteristic of this age, men well nigh forget there is anything else worth living for. They rise early and toil late, and "eat the bread of carefulness" to heap up riches, often only for eager and unloving heirs to scramble and quarrel over, forgetting that a man's true wealth hereafter is the good he does in this world to his fellow men. When he dies, in the words of Mahomet, men will say "What property has he left behind him?" but the angels will say "What good deeds has he sent before him?" At the beginning of the new year, how carefully the business man balances his books and counts his cash, and calculates how much he has added to his worldly gains, and if his bank account shows a goodly sum of golden eagles to his credit, what an honest feeling of satisfaction is his. But how few ever balance that other account and seek to find how the books of that other bank stand, where good deeds and kind words are counted against silver and gold and glittering diamonds—good deeds, counted in value by the spirit that prompted them, where the widow's two mites were of more worth than all the rest.

"Good deeds that through the ages,
Living in historic pages,
Brighter grow and gleam immortal, Unconsumed by moth or rust."

SOME of the good Brothers of Lompoc are in a controversy about a "Fraternal Burying Ground." The subject has an exclusively local aspect, as none of the Orders up this way, that we are aware of, are ready to be buried.

A O. U. W. Hall Association.

The delegates to form a Hall Association met on the evening of the 30th ult., twenty Lodges being represented; President pro tem Danforth in the chair, John Hoesch, Temporary Secretary. All the delegates reported, and every Lodge favored the incorporation of a Hall Association, one Lodge being in favor of taking $2,500 worth of stock.

The following motion was adopted:

Resolved, That this committee resolve itself into a Committee on Incorporation, and that each delegate be one of the Corporate Directors.

Motion made that a committee of five be appointed to carry out the incorporation to that effect, and that they be authorized to employ an attorney at an expense of $50, including the incorporation. Carried. The Chair appointed, as such committee, Brothers Block, of No. 27, Loud, of No. 30, Lask, of No. 8, Severance, of No. 14, and Bordwell, of No. 126.

The Committee on Lot and Building reported many places, the consideration of which was laid over and Committee granted further time. A resolution was adopted as the sense of the Committee, that the building should be owned by the Order, and to keep in view the erection of a building that will meet their requirements. On motion the Secretary was instructed to send a subscription list to each Lodge in the city, for the use of Lodges and members.

On motion the Committee adjourned for two weeks, to meet Feb. 13th, at the rooms of the General Relief Committee.

The Committee appointed to carry out the incorporation of the Hall Association, met on Friday, (1st inst.) at the office of Brother J. G. Severance. Brother Block, of Unity No. 27, as Chairman of the Committee, called the meeting to order. On motion, Brother J. G. Severance was engaged as Attorney. It was moved and carried that the articles of incorporation be immediately drawn and filed with the Secretary of State. The Committee then adjourned to Wednesday, the 6th inst., when the articles of incorporation were completed and the same filed and forwarded.

The Committee afore-mentioned met last Wednesday evening. The following were fixed upon as the names of the incorporators for the various Lodges: Thos. Murray, for San Francisco, No. 4; Harry J. Lask, for Golden Gate, No. 8; W. J. Brownrigg, for Harmony, No. 9; J. G. Severance, for Verba Buena, No. 14; G. W. Lemont, for Bernal, No. 19; J. N. Block, for Unity, No. 27; E. F. Loud, for Valley, No. 30; E. Danforth, for Spartan, No. 36; J. Hoesch, for Magnolia, No. 41; J. M. Lyons, for Myrtle, No. 42; J. M. Payson, for Franklin, No. 44; J. Rosenberg, for Washington, No. 60; L. G. Schord, for Burns, No. 68; H. S. Gray, for Sts. John, No. 73; G. A. Bordwell, for Excelsior, No. 126; F. W. Rossback, for Olympic, No. 127; E. M. Reading, for Fidelity, No. 136; Thos. Brown, for Bay View, No. 159; M. A. Clark, for Memorial, No. 174; B. Sherry, for Friendship, No. 179; J. Latham, for Triumph, No. 180; Leon Carron, for Noe Valley, No. 185; I. E. Alexander, for Silver Spring, D. of H., No. 3; E. Holland, for Aurora, D. of H., No. 8; S. Booth, for Golden Dawn, D. of H., No. 10; Z. T. Whitten, for Evening Star, D. of H., No. 23.

As will be seen by the foregoing, all the Lodges in the city (including the D. of H. Lodges), except Hercules No. 53, are represented.

The five Committeemen, consisting of Brothers Block, of No. 27, Loud, of No. 30, Lask, of No. 8, Severance, of No. 14, and Bordwell, of No. 126, signed the articles of incorporation for the balance of the committee.

The articles of incorporation were filed Thursday, February 7th, and immediately transmitted to the Secretary of State for final verification and filing.

QUERY:—What has been the largest number of assessments in one year in California since the A. O. U. W. was organized here?

[Answer:—The largest number of assessments in one year is 19, levied in 1882.—EDITORS WATCHMAN.]

"For God's Sake, Save the Boys!"

A hard drinker of many years said, as he signed the pledge: "I won't do any good. I can't reform; it's too late; but for God's sake, save the boys!" Miss Nellie Bradley.

Like Dives in the deep of hell,
I cannot break this fearful spell,
Nor quench the fires I've madly nursed,
Nor cool this dreadful raging thirst,
Take back your pledge, you come too late;
Ye cannot save me from my fate;
Nor bring me back departed joys,
But ye can try to save the boys.

Ye bid me break my fiery chain,
Arise, and be a man again,
When every street with snares is spread,
And nets of sin where'er I tread,
No, I must reap as I did sow,
The seeds of sin bring crops of woe;
But with my latest breath I'll crave
That ye will try the boys to save.

These bloodshot eyes were once so bright,
This sin-crushed heart was glad and light;
But by the wine-cup's ruddy glow
I traced a path to shame and woe,
A captive to my galling chain,
I've tried to rise, but tried in vain;
The cup allures, and then destroys,
Oh, from this thralldom save the boys!

Take from your streets those traps of hell
Into whose gilded snares I fell,
Oh! freemen, from those foul decoys,
Arise and vote to save the boys,
And ye who license men to trade
In draughts that charm and then degrade,
Before you hear the cry: "Too late!"
Oh! save the boys from my sad fate!

—Frances E. W. Harper.

Yes, God save the boys—and girls, too.

Baby's Answer.

Suggested by hearing a mother call her baby an angel!

If I am an angel, dear mother,
Where are my arrows and bow?
Then give me a quiver and string, mother,
And why don't my little wings grow?

If I was an angel, dear mother,
Your baby you never could see;
For then I would live in the sky, mother,
With God and the angels that be.

If I was an angel, dear mother,
They would make me a cupid, I know;
So that I could make use of my quiver,
My arrows, my string and my bow.

If I was an angel, dear mother,
Your face, then, I never could see;
So I think I would rather be mortal,
And stay here, dear mother, with thee,
San Francisco, Cal. F. M. H.

Parlor Games.

Now that the rains have finally come and there is a prospect of stormy evenings which will compel the young people to seek indoor amusements, we quote for their benefit a few simple parlor games which Helena Maynard describes for the Farmer's Review.

When a hush seemed likely to fall on the little company Jennie said: "I am a respectable young lady traveling with a menagerie."

The others stared, but she said: "Fred, ask me what I have to exhibit."

He did so, and she answered, "An elephant. Now ask Hattie the same question, only, of course, you will say, 'I am a respectable young gentleman, etc.,' and when she asks you what you are exhibiting you must say what I did, and add some other animal, and so on all around. If any one makes a mistake they are out of the game."

The interest of all was awakened at once, and for some time no one missed a word; but as the list became longer one after another dropped out until Harry and Lucy alone were left, and they rattled over the list. An elephant, a zebra, a rhinoceros, an ostrich, a camel, a hippopotamus, a rat, a rabbit, a wolf, an orang-outang, a whale, a buffalo, an owl, a walrus and a boa constrictor, and so forth, until an unlucky slip of Harry's tongue left Lucy the undisputed monopoly of the show business.

"How many can count two hundred?" asked Aunt Sue.

All thought they were able to do that, but upon trying it after Aunt Sue had explained that whenever, in counting around the circle, they came to seven or any multiple of seven, they were to say "buz" instead of the number, as, one, two, three, four, five, six, buz, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, buz, fifteen, sixteen, buz, etc., they found it was a difficult matter, and after much laughter the last one made a mistake before he reached one hundred and fifty.

"Now," said Jennie, "I am going to California, and I am going to take a Jewsharp and some apples with me. Who else wants to go, and what will they take?"

"I will go," said Willis James, "and take my gun and fishing tackle."

"You can't go, Will, but I am sorry, for I would like your company."

"Well, I would like to go, and I will take money and railroad tickets," said Hattie Reade.

"You may go half way," Jennie said, but when Harry Reade wanted to go with "money and checks," she told him he must stay at home.

They became quite excited in finding out the trick, but they were all bright enough to discover after some time that if they wanted to make the trip they must carry with them articles beginning with the initials of their names.

"Now," said Aunt Sue, "I have thought of a word that rhymes with cat, and I want you to guess what it is; but instead of asking me if it is rat, for instance, you must give some definition of the word, as 'Is it an animal a cat catches?' Now, if you understand, I am ready for your questions."

"Is it a mouse-like animal with wings?"

"No, it is not bat."

"Is it something to wipe your feet on?"

"No, it is not mat."

"The opposite of lean?"

"No, it is not fat."

"Is it an Irish name?"

"No, it is not Pat."

"Is it a covering for the head?"

"It is not a hat."

"Part of a bed, then?"

"It is not a slat."

"Is it level?"

"Yes, it is flat, and as you guessed it you may give the next word."

Lucy's word rhyming with cross was soon found to be dress, but Fred's word rhyming with week was, only after a long trial, guessed to be tweak. Just as Jennie stumbled on it, the clock struck ten. "Why, what a short evening," they all exclaimed.

"We have had such a nice time," was the farewell word.

A Measure of Precaution.

The directors of one bank in the country prove themselves wide awake to the interests of their depositors. They reside in Cleveland, Ohio, and have control of a moneyed institution in that city. They discovered that the President of their bank was speculating in stocks, and forced him to resign. He was using his own money for the purpose, but there was no assurance that he would not, if he became a loser, draw upon the funds of the bank to conduct his operations, with a strong probability that he might in the end prove a defaulter, as many persons occupying responsible financial positions have done in the past. The public at large will say that the directors of the Cleveland Bank deserve to be commended for their action.—Morning Call.

This is a good hint to ordinary business men as well as to bank directors. Does not every firm employing clerks in responsible positions incur some hazards? Do we not in California, of all places, need to guard against gambling and other dissipations? Do we not have here one of the means of a valuable reform in business honesty, business morality, business health, and a surety of a worthy building up for future generations? We should free the paths of our young men and our old men from many of the temptations which now beset them.

Health Column.

The Origin of Physicians.

The first physicians of whom mention is made in history were those who embalmed the Patriarch Jacob (Gen. chap. 50-2), by order of Joseph, his son. They are styled the servants of Joseph, whence it appears they were not priests, for the Egyptian priests had too much honor and influence with both king and people to be the servants of any man, however exalted his station.

The Egyptians attributed the invention of this art to Thoth, or Herms, who engraved its principals in hieroglyphics upon pillars. These hieroglyphical writings were supposed to have been transcribed into books by Agathodemon, or the second Mercury, which books the priests asserted had been preserved in the sacred recesses of their temples.

But the system of medicine among the Egyptians appears to have been nothing better than a collection of absurd superstitions. The ancient Greeks, likewise, according to the picture which Homer gives of them in the Iliad, seem to have possessed but a very low degree of this art. Esculapius was the first person among them who had any valuable knowledge of this kind; and his knowledge, probably scanty, procured him such respect that after his decease he was deified by his countrymen. Hippocrates, who claimed the honor of being the seventeenth in descent from Esculapius, was the first who treated of medicine in a regular and rational manner. Hippocrates is supposed to have lived about 400 years before Christ. He is the most ancient author whose writings on the medical art are preserved, and is therefore styled the father of medicine. He endeavored to explain the causes of the diseases of the human frame and their symptoms, to classify them, and to point out their preventives or remedies. He laid down maxims for the preservation of the health; for the regulation of exercise and bathing. He appears to have used purgatives, emetics, venesections, sudorifics, moist and dry fomentations, gargles for the throat, oils and ointments, cataplasms, mixtures composed of various substances to soften tumors and disperse swellings, and various other compounded medicines. Celsus was another celebrated ancient writer on the subject of medicine. He lived in the time of the Roman Emperor Tiberius. In the reign of Adrian, A. D. 131, lived Galen, a native of Pergamus, one of the most illustrious men in the annals of medical science. After the downfall of the Roman Empire, the Arabian or Saracenic physicians became illustrious for the knowledge and practice of the art of medicine. To them Europe is indebted for the preservation of the medical science of Greece and Rome, and likewise for the description of many new diseases, and the mode of treating them. Of these Avicenna was the most famous. Their system of medicine was introduced into Europe very early with great success.

In the beginning of the sixteenth century, Paracelsus, a famous chemist, advanced a new system of medicine, founded on chemistry. In 1628, the celebrated Harvey demonstrated and communicated to the public the important discovery of the circulation of the blood. This overthrew almost all the former systems, and prepared the way for that highly improved state in which the medical art exists at present.—Sanitary News.

CHARCOAL AS A FOOD.—Whatever increases the power of laying on fat, or promoting the rapid and healthy production of flesh, must be food or equivalent thereto. This, pure charcoal does most effectually, as recently proved by taking the live weights of two lots of sheep, and simply separating them by an ordinary net, the artificial food, corn and cake, being carefully weighed out to each lot alike daily, one pint of charcoal being added to one lot only. When re-weighed prior to selling to the butcher, the increase in weight was in favor of charcoal by 16 1/2 per cent. Sanitation causes easy and complete digestion, and assimilation only can account for these results, which charcoal alone can accomplish. The charcoal should be given mixed with the food, except in urgent cases, when it may be mixed in water or thin gruel, and given as a drench. The dose is one pint to every twenty-five head of sheep or lambs. One-quarter pint per head for full-grown cattle, horses or pigs; half the quantity for young cattle, and two teaspoonfuls to one dessert-spoonful for young calves, daily, when suffering from disease, or in ill condition. To keep in good health and fortify against diseases, the dose should be given two or three times per week according to the class of food they are having, and the state of the atmosphere. The best plan is to wet a quantity of bran, pollard, or malt combings, mix the charcoal amongst it, and then amongst the food you give them. For rapid and healthy fattening of cattle it should be used daily amongst their food. Charcoal for internal and medicinal purposes must be pure vegetable charcoal, free from all irritating and injurious foreign matter. The charcoal, when coming into the user's possession, must be kept perfectly dry and free from any ill-smelling surroundings, such as the vapors of a stable or artificial manures, etc., or it will absorb them and thus become septic, and of no medicinal value. It is better kept in a closed bin or tin canister with a closely fitting cover.—Farm and Home.

Household Hints.

Why Corned Beef Spoils.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing on this subject, says: Farmers who live away from meat markets salt both pork and beef for the annual supply. Fat pork usually keeps well, but beef—and the same may be said of veal and mutton—has so much juice in the lean that the brine becomes full of the meat juices. If there is a stone or other weight upon the meat, then apparently it is safe, as the rule is to keep all meat under the brine; yet in this case the minute particles of blood or juice are on the surface of the brine, and as warm weather comes it becomes very corrupt. The upper part of the brine becomes putrid, and gradually contaminates the whole. As a remedy, the brine can be taken out in spring, scalded in a large kettle, when the blood and juices coagulated can be skimmed off and the brine returned; or the old brine can be thrown away and new brine put with the meat; or, in the first place, the meat can be put into a kettle of water and scalded, brought to a boil, then salted the same as pork, and the brine remains clear, and with the same treatment keeps as well as pork. It is well to stir up the brine of all salted meats, as it keeps it more uniform. While it is at rest several months, it is believed that the saltiness settles toward the bottom, making the top too fresh to keep properly.

CURING HAMS.—The process of sugar-curing hams is as follows: The hams are trimmed and rubbed with salt and left to drain on a bench for a day and a night. They are then wiped dry and packed in a clean barrel, and each one is rubbed with salt as it is put down. They are packed as closely as possible. A pickle is made as follows: For each 100 pounds of meat, 7 pounds of salt, 2 1/2 pounds of brown sugar, and 2 ounces of saltpetre are dissolved in hot water, and the liquid is boiled for a short time, being skimmed if necessary. It is then cooled, and when cold is strained into the barrel through a doubled cloth on to the meat. The meat should be kept three inches under the pickle. It is best to head up the barrel and pour the pickle through a hole in the head, and then cork it tight. Otherwise, a loose head should be put on the meat and weighted down, and a cover put on the top of the barrel. After two months the hams may be taken out, well wiped and rubbed with ground black pepper, and then smoked.

CREAM SHORT CAKE.—Two cups of prepared flour; one tablespoonful of lard and as much butter; one-half cup of milk; three tablespoonfuls of white sugar; one saltspoonful of salt. Rub the shortening into the salted flour, and wet up with the milk in which the sugar has been dissolved. Roll out half an inch thick and bake in two jelly cake tins. The dough should be soft, and handled very little. Bake to a nice brown, and when cold lay between the cakes the following mixture: One-half cup of milk; one even teaspoonful of cornstarch; one egg; one-half teaspoonful of vanilla or other essence; two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Heat the milk, and thicken with the cornstarch wet in a little cold milk. Beat up the egg, stir in the sugar, and both into the hot thickened milk. Cook one minute, stirring all the time; take from the fire, and when cold flavor. Sift powdered sugar on the top of the cake, and eat while fresh, cutting into triangles.

ALMOND CREAM.—Blanch two ounces of sweet almonds and a few bitter almonds, and pound them all until smooth. Add, a little at a time, one-third of a pint of cold water. Stir it well, and then let it settle. To one pint of sweet milk add five ounces of granulated sugar. Let this boil slowly. When the sugar is dissolved, stir in an ounce of gelatine which is entirely dissolved in a very little cold water. Let this stand on the stove two or three minutes then remove from the fire, add a table-spoonful of vanilla, a tea-cupful of cream and the almond water. Strain this off through a fine wire sieve and put it in moulds.

FISH SAUCE.—A very good fish sauce is thus made: Into two cups of hot milk and water, mixed in equal proportions, stir a teaspoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water so that there are no lumps left in it. Beat and then strain three eggs, and stir them in with two tablespoonfuls of butter, and pepper and salt to suit your taste. Pour this over the fish. The sauce may be varied in this way: Instead of putting the eggs in the sauce, boil them ten minutes; then remove the shells and cut the eggs in slices and lay them over the fish; then pour the sauce over all.

ORANGE CREAM.—Take the juice of six bitter oranges and the rind of two grated, put them into a stewpan with a pint and a half of water and twelve ounces of white sugar, stir till the sugar is dissolved, then add the well-beaten whites of six eggs, stir over a slow fire till it thickens, then strain through a hair sieve or muslin, and stir till cold. Put back into the pan and add the yolks of the eggs well beaten, stir over the fire till the mixture begins to simmer, then pour into a basin and stir again till cool enough to be transferred to glasses.

Poisonous and Troublesome Plants of California—No. 3.

(Written by J. G. Lemmon.)

Lupinus Burkei—"Burke's Lupin"—"Meadow Bean"—"Sun Dial."

"The Assyrian came down like a wolf on the fold."

With this bold simile Byron begins one of his most celebrated battle poems.

The devouring character of the wolf caused its name—lupus in Greek—to be given to a very large and interesting family of plants. But, like certain architects, who build wiser than they knew, so this name of lupinus is preeminently fitting, since the habit of stealthily and persistently attacking the sheep-fold by wolves is closely imitated by the lupines that so fatally invade the farmer's fields. They swarm on the borders of meadows, hover along streams, rally around springs, deploy among rocks, charge in open fields, flourish anywhere that a chance bean may be planted by bird, beast or man. No spot of ground is too poor for lupines, and a rich, loamy meadow is their especial delight.

The plants may be readily known by their digitated leaves; that is, their leaves are divided into many leaflets radiating from a common point, giving the plant one of its vernacular names, "sun dial."

Its flowers are pea-blossoms, often large and beautiful, growing in spikes. The fruit is a flat pod, filled with beans.

The higher regions of California are infested by several species of lupine. Some form tufts or rosettes on the ground, composed of dozens of their peculiar sun-dial leaves, from the center of which the spikes of flowers arise but a few inches high. Others throw up a dozen or more stout, large-leaved stalks, two or three feet high, effectually preventing the growth of other plants over a wide area.

In certain meadows occur swamps of lupine so rank that the mowing machine cuts through the mass with difficulty, leaving a heavy swath of green stalks that require many days of turning and drying before cured, and then the product is nearly worthless for hay. Some of the pods will be ripening their beans in haying time, so the turning about and raking serves to widely disseminate the troublesome plant.

As the species of lupine under discussion is perennial-rooted and very prolific of seed, it were wise in the farmer, when this insidious enemy first appears on the borders of his meadows, to at once institute vigorous measures for its complete annihilation. Thoughtlessness or indifference has doomed the richest portions of certain valleys to the production of worthless crops, with the added entailment of interminable labor. The headquarters of the large genus, lupinus, is Western America. Out of about 100 species known 60 are found in California. Two only extend northward into British Columbia and Alaska, one to the States east of the Mississippi river. A dozen are found southward in Mexico, a few more extend down along the Andes, while three or four species only, and these annual, are indigenous to the Mediterranean region.

Because Western America is the headquarters of the lupine, here in California is found the greatest diversity of form and character, rendering the species very difficult to distinguish. Why diversity of character is connected with—is evidence of—headquartership is a very interesting topic, which it is not pertinent to discuss at this time; an entire article would not exhaust the subject.

All species of lupine in America are troublesome and damaging because of their persistence and abundance, connected with their nearly worthless qualities for forage; but none are known to be poisonous, as are a few other plants of the great pod-bearing family to which it belongs.

The few annual species referred to as indigenous to the Mediterranean region, have emigrated so far and left home so long ago that they have become peculiar in several respects. Fortunately for the reputation of the family, they are well-behaved annuals, producing abundance of beans which are excellent food for both animals and the human family. The ancient Romans extensively cultivated these species, a custom still continued by the Italians, especially of the State of Tuscany, where fields of lupine are cultivated as assiduously as are the allied alfalfa fields of California.

The "loco weeds" of Central California grain-fields are species of the genus Astragalus, belonging to the same great family of Pod-bearers as the lupines; but, as the loco-weeds and their mischief have been described from time to time in the RURAL, they will be dismissed here with this mere mention.

The figure of Lupinus Burkei given herewith is one-half to one-fourth natural size.

CAPT. EAD'S LATEST PROPOSITION.—Galveston is throwing up her hat in honor of Capt. Ead's answer to her committee's letter relating to her bar. The Captain says that if Congress will give him $7,500,000 he will guarantee thirty feet of water, and maintain that depth for twenty years at a cost of less than $100,000 a year. He proposes to give that city twenty-two feet of water within two years. A Texas newspaper says that with thirty feet of water on her bar Galveston will soon rank New York City.

A Noble Work.

MESSRS EDITORS:—I have written the inclosed article for the purpose of making known to your readers the bed-rock principles which underlie the action of the Boys and Girls Aid Society. We wish them to be completely understood by the whole people of the State. Your paper goes among the best industrial classes. They are the very men in whose families boys should be placed.—J. C. KEMP, 228 Ellis street, San Francisco, Cal.

Juvenile Reform.

The Boys and Girls Aid Society, whose exceedingly limited and unpretending Home is located at 68 Clementina street, San Francisco, has in the most thorough manner solved the great question, How shall we save to good citizenship our orphan, neglected and wayward children? And being deeply impressed with the fact that this is the most vital issue of the present time, and that the whole people of the State should be made fully acquainted with the plan of this admirable organization, we propose in the present article to give a clear and concise explanation of its method, which has proved the tion that ever existed, every detail having been brought right down to the most economic basis. To explain more fully, it costs the society to take a boy or girl, feed, clothe and discipline either, and finally place him or her in a well ordered home, then to remain (still under the society's oversight) until of age, then to go forth fitted to assume the duties of life, the comparatively insignificant sum of seven dollars and fifty cents. These are the exact figures, as shown by the records of the society kept during the past twenty (20) months. The expense for food has been so low, that the officers of the society have actually felt a great reluctance to state the amount, which is only eight cents per capita, per day, and which also includes both fuel and light, the children too being better fed than those of any institution we know of; and this the result of bed-rock management—of the employment of no unnecessary help whatever. And in this connection we will state that a Superintendent Assistant and Matron constitute the whole paid force, these three persons performing every duty, aided only by the assistance of such boys and girls as can be made available, there being on an average sixty at its Home. Let the reader take the record of reformatory institutions in general, and see what the amount per capita has been. It has cost the State of Caliindividual characteristics, and then quickly a possible sent away to the most appropriate home that can be found. This process is constantly going on, the building being simply a depot, and not an institution in any sense of the word. As we said before, it needs money at all times. Its quarters are entirely too small, and far more commodious ones are needed, so that it can be enabled to extend its operations, and provide ten children with homes where it now provides but one. It receives no aid whatever from state, county or municipality, except through the few boys and girls occasionally sent to it in conformity with Section 1388 of the Penal Code, but depends wholly upon charitable contributions for the means to meet its obligations.

One of its most pressing wants is a good, reliable, big-hearted Corresponding Member in each town and city in the State, who will act in such capacity without remuneration except the true, pure satisfaction such a noble position should afford and the unqualified respect it would certainly command. Such an one, furnishing all necessary information to those in his or her district who desired to adopt, indenture or employ a boy or girl, and also to act as a sort of consul for both parties, seeing that each lived strictly up to his portion of the contract.

Queer Freak of Watches.

"Decidedly watches are queer things," said D. H. Hopkinson, of the Jewelers' Circular, seated in the easy chair of his editorial sanctuary. "They possess some unaccountable peculiarities. For instance, some time about the beginning of last summer, when there had been a succession of fine displays of the aurora borealis, it was estimated that in a single night in the city of New York the main springs of not less than three thousand watches broke. This estimate is based on actual inquiries. Fine sensitive watches are particularly liable to be affected by electrical atmospheric disturbances. During the months of June, July and August, when these phenomena are most frequent, there are more mainsprings broken than during all the remaining months of the year. They break in a variety of ways, sometimes snapping into as many as twenty-seven pieces.

"It is a fact that since the introduction of the electric light has become so general a large number of watches, some of them very fine ones, have become magnetized. While in this condition they are useless as timekeepers. This defect should be considered incurable, and because of it thousands of watches have been thrown away after much money had been spent on them in vain attempts to persuade them to keep good time. Among the methods resorted to were washing the parts in garlic juice, refining and passing them through the fire. But all these devices were entire failures or only in part effective.

"I know of a man who had a fine and valuable movement which kept excellent time. He transferred it from a silver case to a second-hand gold one. Immediately it lost all of its characteristics of steadiness and reliability, and, in fact, did not keep time at all. When replaced in the silver case it kept good time again. The owner, a jeweler, puzzled himself, and experimented in vain to discover the cause of this strange partiality on the part of his watch for silver. At length he sent it to an expert. He discovered that the lifting-spring of the gold case had become magnetized. On substituting another for it, the watch kept as good time in the gold case as in the silver case.

"There are occasions when it is a very serious matter to have your watch magnetized. The most striking instance in point is one which lately came under my notice. Captain W. R. Smith commands the steamer Delaware, which plies between New York and New London. Before putting to sea, on a recent voyage, he was invited to inspect an electric light dynamo machine and examined its parts closely. Soon after getting on board the steamer he observed that the compass became strangely affected when he approached it. Whether he stood on the right or the left, or immediately in front of the compass, the needle would invariably point to him. The compass was worse than useless when he came near it. It was dangerous and might wreck the ship. You can imagine that this phenomenon alarmed and puzzled Captain Smith not a little. At length he recalled his visit to the dynamo machine and the true solution of the eccentric behavior of the needle flashed upon him. His watch had become magnetized. When he removed it the needle resumed its constancy to the polar star. On his return to the city he took the watch to a watchmaker, who demagnetized it for him. This firm has invented some machine, the mechanism of which is a secret, by which they demagnetize a magnetized watch speedily and effectually. They get watches sent them from all parts of the world to be thus treated.

"Watches frequently get magnetized in iron mines or in machine shops, where they are incautiously brought near swiftly running belts. I knew a workman who used to hang his watch between the parts of a running belt. He expended a small fortune on mainsprings.

"It is a well-known fact among horologists that no watch will keep the same time with two people. The cause has not yet been definitely ascertained, but it would seem that in some mysterious way a watch is affected by the temperament of the wearer. The mere physical differences in gait and movement between different people is not sufficient to account for all the variations that have been observed.

BURKE'S LUPIN Lupinus Burkei.

most pronounced and eminent reformatory success of the West, its grand work during the past twenty months having no parallel, either in this or any other country. First of all it bases its action on the great fundamental fact that the well ordered home and family constitute the distinguishing mark between civilization on the one hand and barbarism on the other; and that to this source and this alone must we look for all youthful reformation. It is opposed, first and last, to the wretched, imbecile, institutional idea, which during the past forty years has cost the people of America millions of dollars, and resulted in a harvest of criminals so large that the combined resources of every prison in the land stretched to the utmost tension is not adequate to contain them. Reformatory and so called industrial schools have had their day, and a most terrible and fearfully expensive one it has been, intelligent people everywhere having become fully alive to the fact that such places are, in most cases, nothing more nor less than dens of iniquity, nurseries of crime, and hotbeds of the most loathsome and revolting practices, in which children are practically educated, to finally gravitate, first to the jail or House of Correction, next the State prison, and last of all, in many cases, to an ignominious end upon the gallows.

The Boys and Girls Aid Society, whose method like everything else in nature that is truly useful, is pre-eminently simple, has accomplished results greater and less expensive than those of any other reformatory organiza-fornia about seven hundred and fifty dollars to educate and qualify for the business of robbery, murder and arson, the average of its well trained graduates during the past twenty years, the truth of which assertion can be seen at a glance by reference to its State and Municipal reports. Seven dollars and fifty cents to place a boy or girl in a good home, there to be schooled and brought up for the duties of life by the true method ordained by the Supreme Being, and seven hundred and fifty dollars to make a red handed criminal out of either by the accursed system, acts and tricks, invented and presided over by Satan. Is it not time that the fathers and mothers of the children of this generation looked this most vital matter squarely in the face, and will not, and should not every charitably disposed man and woman in this fair land, in our own beautiful California, come at once to the rescue and help with money, material, word and deed, this noble organization, that during the short period of twenty months has rescued from the very jaws of utter ruin, seven hundred of our boys and girls, and placed them in happy, well regulated homes, where, as the records show, there are but two of the number, placed outside of San Francisco, that are not doing well, that are not fairly on the high road to true sovereign independence.

The society owns a lot on Clementina street, San Francisco, 25x80 feet in size, and their home (a plain wooden one) covers the entire area. In this building the boys and girls are kept just long enough to determine each one's

OUR CITY LODGES.

District No. 2.

District No. 2, I. W. McKay, Deputy, held a grand meeting in Laurel Hall, Shields' building, under the auspices of Valley Lodge, Wednesday evening, Jan. 30th. The room was decorated for the occasion in fine style with emblems, devices of the esthetic order, and suspended across the hall were the words: "Welcome to District No. 2." Harry J. Lask, President of the A. O. U. W. Board of Relief, in a very well timed and appropriate speech, recounting the services of Deputy McKay through a long series of years as a Workman, presented him with a silver set of six pieces. Upon the salver were engraved these words: "Presented to D. D. G. M. W., I. W. McKay, by the members of District No. 2, January 30, 1884. Nos. 8, 30, 159 and 180, of San Francisco, Cal.; virtute et labore." Deputy McKay was evidently surprised and gratified by this generous exhibition of confidence, and in heartfelt words thanked his brethren. The balance of a very enjoyable evening was spent smoking Havanas and listening to speeches and songs by the following Workmen: Brothers Calhoun, P. M. W. of Franklin, and Murray of San Francisco, No. 4; song, by Brother Smith, of Golden Gate, No. 8; song, by Brother Smallman, P. M. W. of Triumph, No. 180; addresses by Wm. H. Barnes, P. G. M. W., and Deputy Lemont; song, Brother Smith; congratulatory speeches by Brother Russell, P. M. W. of Triumph, No. 180, Brother Brown, P. M. W. of Bay View, No. 159; E. F. Loud, P. M. W. of Valley, No. 30; W. W. Hanscom, P. M. W. of Fidelity, No. 136; E. M. Reading, Grand Lecturer; Brother Brownrigg, P. M. W. of Harmony, No. 9; Deputy Jordan; WATCHMAN representative; Brother Jensen, M. W. of Golden Gate, No. 8; Brother Hoerber, P. M. W. of Valley, No. 30; Brother McLeod, P. M. W. of Valley, No. 30; Brother Terrill, of Valley; with songs sandwiched in that made this one of the most pleasant occasions of the season.

Golden Dawn, No. 10, D. of H.

On Saturday evening, January 26th, the officers elect of this Lodge for the term ending June 30th were duly installed in Excelsior's new hall, whither they have just removed. As the ceremony was a public one, many of the friends of the members, as well as many of the sisters and brothers of "down town" Lodges were present. Expressions of pleasure and delight were freely exchanged, especially by the lady members and visitors, at finding themselves amid such elegant and comfortable surroundings. Brother Frank S. Poland, of Golden Dawn, the installing officer, was assisted in the ceremony by Sisters Reading, Lord, Lyle and Caldwell, of Silver Spray Lodge. After installation, came a short musical and literary programme by members of the Lodge and Grand Lecturer Brother Reading, of Silver Spray. An adjournment was then made into the dining hall up-stairs, where ice cream, coffee, fruit and cake were served, and when all were satisfied with this, short speeches were called for and responded to by Brother Lemont, Sister L. A. Meek, of Unity Lodge, Grass Valley, Brothers McKay and Jordan, of Hercules, and Brother Tyrel, also of Silver Spray. The hour was now growing late, and Brother Sam Booth, who had constituted himself master of ceremonies at the supper table, returned thanks, in the name of Golden Dawn, to the sisters, brothers and friends who had honored them with their presence, extending to them the freedom of the Lodge and a hearty welcome whenever they felt inclined to renew their visit.

Franklin, No. 44.

This old pioneer, as the mother of several Lodges in this city, has had her numbers depleted at various times to an alarming extent. During the last term, under the administration of Brother Hamilton, a few of the members anticipating inevitable results that would follow, determined by uniting their efforts to place Franklin Lodge in the front rank again. It gives us much pleasure to state that they are now on the high road of prosperity, and at the same ratio during this term will be up to their former standard in membership.

Burns, No. 68.

ON Thursday evening 28th inst., Burns Lodge, No 68, will have a reunion in their Lodge room, Pythian Castle. It is proposed to have all the charter members present who can be. W. E. Flint, the first P. M. W., will preside. It will no doubt be a very pleasant time, and all Workmen are invited to be present.

Excelsior, No. 126.

On Friday evening, January 18th, the entertainment arranged and prepared by Brother Sam Booth, P. M. W., for the purpose of aiding in the furnishing of the library of the new building, came off in Mission Music Hall. As might have been anticipated from those who participated in this enterprise, the performance was an assured success, the excellence of every number being such as to maintain unflagging interest to its close. Nor was the pecuniary result less gratifying to the manager, over a hundred dollars being the net gain for the object to be benefited. The first prize conundrum, gotten up for the occasion, was as follows: "What scriptural impossibility presents itself in our programme this evening?" Answer—"To pull down our Barnes (barns) and build greater ones." The programme which was a unique one was entitled "Odds and Ends," and was in the following form and text:

Synopsis of scenes and events: Day break in "Camp Excelsior," Ah Sing and the Tramp; glee, "Hail Smiling Morn;" Waking up; Camp gossip; song, "Five o'clock in the Morning;" The call to Breakfast; The Tramp again; His story; Camp life; glee, "May Day;" going fishing, hunting, fern gathering, Ah Sing; The Train; High Jinks in Camp; The new arrival; The wandering minstrel; song, "Please give me a Penny Sir;" The professor's contribution; glee, "All among the Barley;" Mrs. William White speaks a piece; C. C. F. and C. L. P. in humorous X. N. tri C. T.; The trials of a Twin; Return of the fishers, hunters and ferners; glee, "Foresters sound the cheerful horn;" Charade, in three parts; Leap-Year Party; "Farewell to the Forest;" Finale.

It was well carried out by the following ladies and gentlemen: Mrs. William White, Mrs. C. L. Parent nee De La Bar, Miss Alice Colby, Miss Nellie Rollins, Miss Alice Jewell, Miss Ella Booth, Mr. L. S. Clark, Mr. William H. Barnes, Prof. E. Knowlton, Mr. J. S. Swan, Mr. Fred. Maurer, Jr., Mr. Chas. L. Parent, Jr., Mr. C. C. Flagg, Mr. Geo. Day and others.

House-warming of Excelsior.

On Thursday evening, January 31st, the members of Excelsior, No. 126, were "at home" to the brethren, their families and friends, in their new hall. The ordinary Lodge business was dispatched as briefly as possible, and the waiting crowd admitted to seats with which the hall had been filled. Promptly at half-past eight, Brother Sam Booth, of the Committee of Arrangements, called the meeting to order and introduced the various participants in the evening's entertainment. First came a duet by Messrs. McMahon and West on the banjo and mandolin. These gentlemen have volunteered their services once or twice before for the entertainment of Excelsior, and that their efforts are appreciated was evinced by the vociferous encore which rewarded their first performance. P. G. M., Wm. H. Barnes, was then introduced as one of Excelsior's oldest and best friends, and delivered one of his usual forcible and happy addresses, at once instructive and amusing. Prof. Hahn was next introduced, who exhibited the good qualities of the new organ by performing a solo on that instrument. Brother Booth then repeated his song, "Hunting a New Lodge Hall," with additional verses, exulting at having found the new Lodge hall. Next came a recitation, "The Old Man's Story," by Brother T. C. Maher, of Burns Lodge, rendered in a masterly manner. In response to a well merited encore, he gave "Othello's Defense before the Senate." Bro. T. V. O'Brien, of the Board of Building Trustees, then delivered a short address, after which came a piano solo finely rendered by Miss Hahn, the accomplished daughter of the Lodge organist. Mrs. King next rendered a song in such exquisite style as to merit the desire that the Lodge may often enjoy the pleasure of hearing her. Mrs. Wm. White recited "Victor Galbraith," and in response to a unanimous recall gave, in her inimitable manner, "The Courtship." A piano solo introduced Miss Fannie Danforth. This young lady's splendid playing has been so recently complimented in these columns that to fitly characterize her performance would merely be a repetition of her praises. Next came a song by Mrs. L. S. Clark, an old favorite of the Lodge. Grand Lecturer Brother E. M. Reading then gave a few well-timed remarks, and a most enjoyable evening's entertainment was concluded by a vocal trio, "Adio," beautifully rendered by Mrs. King and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Clark. To say that everybody was pleased would but feebly convey an idea of the delight of all who enjoyed this initial entertainment in Excelsior's beautiful new Lodge hall.

Friendship, No. 179.

Generally known as one of our "baby Lodges," this thrifty subordinate has assumed proportions, however, in membership and in influence, that entitles her to discard this epithet. Starting under adverse circumstances, by constant work Friendship has passed many of the older Lodges and is reckoned as one of the solid Lodges of this city. Their attendance is good, and there is hardly a meeting night but one or more Degrees are conferred.

Noe Valley, No. 185.

Will give a prize masquerade ball on Wednesday evening, February 27th, in Duveneck Hall, corner 24th and Church streets. In the past their entertainments have been very enjoyable, and always a complete success. It is the intention to make this one eclipse any heretofore given.

ALAMEDA COUNTY.

Pacific, No. 7.

The members of this Lodge had a novel Lodge entertainment in their hall, corner of Franklin and Twelfth streets, Oakland, on Thursday evening, directly after Lodge meeting, the 24th ult. It consisted of a series of illustrated views, shown by the sciopticon, accompanied by an explanatory lecture given by Brother Potter, a member of this Lodge, and owner of the apparatus. It was highly appreciated by the members and their families who were present in force. Pacific expects a fraternal visit from Occidental, No. 6, on the 21st inst.

Mission, No. 56.

The Ladies' Sewing Society of the pleasant little burg of Mission San Jose, presented the Workmen, recently, with a useful and ornamental adjunct to their new hall, in the shape of a clock. It was bought with the proceeds from needle work done at the meetings of the Society during some time past. The time-piece is a superior eight day clock, and is a handsome, carved, walnut case. It is an ornament fit for the finest hall in the land. The following resolution is said to but faintly express the feelings of the members of the Lodge:

Resolved, That the heartfelt thanks of Mission Lodge, No. 56, A. O. U. W., be hereby expressed to the Mission Ladies' Sewing Society for the elegant, useful and timely gift of a clock for the Workmen's Hall; and that this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge, and published.

AMADOR COUNTY.

Ione Valley, No. 141.

We learn from the Amador Sentinel that this Lodge held a public installation on the 9th ult. Their hall was crowded with invited guests. The officers were installed by District Deputy Grand Master Workman, J. F. Parks, of Amador City, assisted by Bernhard Isaacs and W. A. Bennetts. Remarks were made by Geo. F. Mack, Rev. E. I. Jones and others, relating to the Order. At the conclusion of the remarks, all were invited to partake of a bountiful supper, prepared by the families of the members, and spread in the adjoining hall. While supper was being served, the floor of the Lodge room was cleared and made ready for dancing. It was a late hour when the party broke up. The gathering was one of the most pleasant of the season, and the only regret expressed by those present was that these enjoyable gatherings do not happen more frequently.

BUTTE COUNTY.

Gridley, No. 67.

A public installation of officers was held by No. 67, on the 14th ult. The Herald says that a large number of written invitations had been issued and the hall was so crowded that the Lodge had hardly room enough in which to conduct the exercises. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the company repaired to Stone's Hall and engaged in a social dance, which continued until nearly three next morning. An intermission was taken at midnight, during which the company, to the number of 160, enjoyed a magnificent supper in the hall over Norman's. The fraternity are to be complimented upon the event. The management was so systematic, the arrangements so complete, and everything passed off so pleasantly that the evening's enjoyment will not soon be forgotten. The installing officer, G. H. Norman, P. M. W., delivered a very able and entertaining address.

COLUSA COUNTY.

Willows, No. 115.

Willows Lodge, No. 115, was visited by Deputy Grand Master E. Danforth and Grand Lecturer E. M. Reading on Monday, the 28th ult., for the purpose of installing the officers elect and perfecting them in the secret work of the Order. All the members living in the town and several from the country were present, though it was raining in torrents. This Lodge is composed of excellent material, and under the new order of things bids fair to rank second to no other Lodge in the county. After the business of the Lodge was transacted, the entire company repaired to the Phoenix Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet under the management of mine host, Brother Cranford, awaited them. A good time was had, and all expressed themselves pleased with what they had seen and heard.

MARIN COUNTY.

Sausalito, No. 20.

One of the proudest events of old No. 20, was the celebration of her sixth anniversary on Friday evening, January 25th. It was long anticipated, therefore it was not at all surprising when it was found that it required the large and commodious Pacific Club House, situated at Old Sausalito, to accommodate the members and guests. There were large delegations from San Francisco and San Rafael. Deputy Grand Recorder, J. W. Watson, delivered the opening address, caught the interest of all present by his stirring remarks, and was greeted by hearty applause. At the close, a portion of his remarks touched upon the young ladies who had not received the degree of matrimony. He advised them in doing so, to secure to themselves a beneficiary certificate in the

A. O. U. W. Then followed a recitation by Mr. Ciprico, and solo by Miss Slinkey, which were well rendered, after which Brother J. E. Slinkey, Master of Ceremonies, introduced Supreme Master Workman, Dr. M. W. Fish, who delivered an address which we publish in full. He was followed in a recitation by Mr. O'Connell, a fine effort, which was well received. This concluded the programme, after which the floor was cleared and the grand march was formed, and Terpsichore reigned supreme. At 12 o'clock, the march again was formed and the feast called on, and all adjourned to the beautiful dining room. The spread was a most sumptuous one, and was discussed with much satisfaction. The tables were elegantly decorated, and all reflected much credit on mine host, Brother John Holthusen and Miss Holthusen, with their able corps of assistants. Thus ended the sixth anniversary, and we can assure those who constitute its membership, that we are as proud of No. 20 as they are themselves. Brother J. E. Slinkey, the genial host of the El Monte, merited praise for the excellent arrangements and hospitality shown the Grand Officers and the WATCHMAN representative upon this occasion. The following were the Committees: Committee of Arrangements—J. E. Slinkey, Geo. J. Hood, Major H. A. Cobb, Con. O'Leary, Capt. John Holthusen. Floor Manager—J. E. Slinkey. Reception Committee—Robt. Furlong, J. E. Slinkey, Con. O'Leary, Geo. J. Hood, Major H. A. Cobb.

MENDOCINO COUNTY.

Ukiah, No. 33.

The Workmen of Ukiah held a social reunion at the residence of Master Workman E. S. Ames, Saturday evening, the 19th ult., as a farewell compliment to Brother H. Price, who has since taken his departure for Washington Territory. Those who were present had a most delightful evening in social converse, and in partaking of the bountiful repast which had been prepared by Mrs. Ames. The surprise to Brother Price consisted in the presentation of a purse, containing some thirty-five dollars, accompanied by a few appropriate remarks by D. D. G. M., A. O. Carpenter. He accepted the present, but his feelings so far overcame him that he could not respond for a few moments, but finally, in a feeling manner, he returned thanks, and assured his brother Workman that he would ever endeavor to deserve their love and respect.

NEVADA COUNTY.

Bridgeport, No. 107.

On Friday evening, the 11th ult., the officers elect of Bridgeport Lodge, No. 107, A. O. U. W., of this place, were publicly installed by the District Deputy, J. E. Isaacs, of Nevada city. From the North San Juan Times, we take the following particulars: "A large number of members with their families attended the installation. A choir, under the leadership of Professor Davis, rendered some excellent singing. In response to the demands of the M. W., Rev. Mr. Bartley, Messrs. A. J. Tiffany and Jas. A. Stidger addressed the assemblage. M. W., Rev. Mr. Bartley, read Poe's poem, 'The Bells,' with fine effect. At 10 o'clock P. M., the exercises having concluded, the members of the Lodge and families repaired to German's Hotel and sat down to a most excellent supper. After the supper was over, the dining room was cleared, when dancing ensued, at which many remained until a late hour. Every person who attended the installation and partook of the supper, say that, upon the whole, nothing superior thereto has been seen here for years. The singing was rendered by the Misses Bach, Mrs. D. Furth, Mrs. Hoffman, and Messrs. Davis, Manhire and Tiffany."

PLACER COUNTY.

Manzanita, No. 154.

From the Placer Herald we learn that a public installation was held by this Lodge on the 17th ult., and from all accounts they and their friends enjoyed a most delightful time. The ceremony and entertainment took place in the spacious hall connected with the Forest House, which was comfortably filled with members and their guests. After the installation ceremonies, an appropriate address was delivered by School Superintendent, O. F. Seavey, Esq. An elegant supper was then served, after which the hall was cleared and all who felt disposed given an opportunity to dance. The day, we understand, was the fourth anniversary of the founding of the Lodge.

SACRAMENTO COUNTY.

Lily of the Valley, No. 11.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Having just returned from one of those entertainments peculiar to our Order, I hope you will pardon me for endeavoring to impart to your readers some of the enthusiasm which I cannot but feel, after attending them, especially one as successful as this one. Sacramento Lodges have not been very successful in getting them up prior to the organization of the Degree of Honor here, but the ladies having taken the matter in hand, success follows of course. The special occasion for this entertainment was a warming up of their new hall, having changed quarters to the new Grangers' Hall, which is far better adapted to the purpose than the one they have been occupying for some years. The entertainment to-night consisted of literary and musical exercises, then dancing. During the dancing a recess was taken for refreshment. Sister J. D. Kent, Mistress of Ceremonies, called the audience to order and introduced Miss Annie Ash, the youngest, I dare not say (for fear of a hair-pulling) the handsomest member of the Order here, but I do say and have plenty of proof for the assertion that her address of welcome places far in the shade any similar efforts of the male members of the other Lodges, and was universally appreciated and loudly applauded. Miss Minnie Roth followed with a piano solo which called forth so much cheering from all the handsome young men that I am inclined to think my criticisms are not needed. Mr. Ashworth sang "The Flying Dutchman" and came off with flying colors. Mr. Hunter recited "Hamlet's Instructions," but being late in arriving got the wrong piece and did not make a hit in the selection. Mrs. Fitch, so well known to the Order here, rendered in her inimitable manner the vocal solo "Twickenham Ferry." The Order is under many obligations to Mrs. Fitch, as she is ever ready to give them the benefit of her cultured voice, and they never fail to appreciate it. She responded to the encore with "Good Night, my Sweet." Miss Gertie Garrish gave a piano solo, "Fra Diavolo," here the handsome young men came in again and made such a noise that she was compelled to respond with "Nearer My God to Thee." Mr. Hunter was called out again, and selecting "Leedle Yawcup Strause" for his subject, fully made up for lost time, and having an appreciative audience, who knew when they had a "good thing," he had to come out again and partially restore order with "Dot Wee Small Baby." The literary and musical closed with a vocal duet, by Mrs. Fitch and Mrs. J. B. Guthrie. After the uproarious applause subsided, Sister Kent announced that dancing was in order, and in a twinkling the chairs and the old folks, that is some of them, were occupying positions of vantage around the hall, and eighty feet of various sizes were wildly chasing the fascinating notes of a full orchestra. At eleven o'clock the notes flew up stairs followed by the guests, who found eight tables reaching across the dining hall, loaded with tempting viands. Sister Francis, Chief of Honor, but pro tem Chief of the coffee racket, came upon the scene wielding a coffee pot, with the same grace she wields the gavel, and the rest you can imagine. Much of the success of this very successful entertainment is due to the untiring efforts of the Floor Committee, consisting of Miss Mary Ash, Floor Director, and Miss Carlin, Mrs. H. O. White, Mrs. J. B. Guthrie, Mrs. C. of H. Francis, and Miss Annie Ash as Managers. Owing to the unavoidable circumstance of "this being leap year," the committee found some difficulty in alluring the bashful young men from their secluded nooks in the corners, but when the right one came around, how quick they hopped out. Three cheers for the Lily of the Valley! Long may she wave!

SOLANO COUNTY.

Vallejo, No. 75.

From a member of the Order who was present, we have just casually learned of a public installation and anniversary ball given by Vallejo, No. 75, on the evening of Jan. 4th. Supreme Master Workman Fish was present by special invitation, and at the request of the District Deputy, took charge of the ceremonies of installation. Other features were the supper and ball, magnificent affairs, and largely attended by the elite of Vallejo and Mare Island. The music was by Ballenberg's band of this city, and like everything else connected with Vallejo's yearly anniversary entertainments, was first class. The only point that can be criticized was the excessive modesty of the Vallejo brethren in being so adverse to sounding their own praises, that none of them could get up courage enough to send the WATCHMAN an account of their celebration.

YOLO COUNTY.

Yolo, No. 22.

Deputy Grand Master Danforth, and Grand Lecturer Reading, were the guests of Yolo Lodge, No. 22, in Woodland on the 29 ult., and were kindly and hospitably entertained. The secret work was rendered by the visiting brethren, much to the pleasure and gratification of the members of the Lodge.

YUBA COUNTY.

Sharon, No. 142.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—Sharon Lodge has now been established over four years, and we have never had to mourn the death of a member, and have never had but one sick member to take care of, and that only for a few days, which I think speaks well for the healthfulness of this part of the country and our Medical Examiner, Dr. De Turbeville.

A. D. ARNETT, Recorder.

IDAHO.

Hailey, No. 1.

T. E. Picotte, D. G. M. of the Jurisdiction of Nevada and Territories, last month installed the officers of this Lodge as follows: Dr. N. J. Brown, P. M. W.; George M. Parsons, M. W.; Thomas Bell, F.; E. S. Chase, O.; Homer L. Pound, Rdr.; J. J. Tracy, Fin.; J. M. Burkett, Rvr.; J. H. Bacon, G.; E. Heckerthorn, I. W.; Mr. Criswell, O. W.; E. A. White, Jos. A. Rupert and W. T. Riley, Trustees; Dr. S. B. Miller, Med. Ex. At the conclusion of the installation a grand ball was indulged in, which was a success socially as well as financially. Although the aim of the Workmen was not so much to make money as to have a sociable time, the receipts exceeded the expenses—which were unusually heavy—by at least $175.

UTAH.

Ontario No. 1.

EDITORS WATCHMAN:—During the past year our Lodge has increased greatly in membership and is now in a prosperous condition, and before the close of another year, we are in hopes of making Ontario Lodge, No. one in more senses than one, if we are not already the Banner Lodge of Utah Territory, which I strongly suspect.

A COWARDLY CRIME.—Brother Frank Correa, of Higuera Lodge, No. 194, San Luis Obispo, was assassinated on the evening of January 3d, by some person or persons unknown while going home from the Lodge room. A memorial will be presented to Governor Stoneman asking him to offer a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of the assassin. A Committee of Higuera Lodge consisting of Brothers Ernest Graves, Joseph de Roco and John Hanlin have the matter in hand and will do all in their power to bring the culprit or culprits to answer for their crime.

HON. G. W. T. CARTER, of Point of Timber Lodge, No. 92, has been appointed District Deputy for Contra Costa, vice, R. M. Jones, resigned.

DISBANDED.—We are sorry to note that two Degree of Honor Lodges have disbanded. They are Oak Leaf, No. 13, of Redding, and Bright Star, No. 20, of Kernville.

THE Kansas Workman propounds the following conundrum, addressed to every member of the Order: "What have you ever done for your Lodge, except to join it?"

IT is with pleasure we note that Supreme Master Workman Fish is often seen and heard at the gatherings of the A. O. U. W. in California.—Fraternal Censor.

To enjoy life you should be a little miserable occasionally. Trouble, like cayenne, is not very agreeable in itself, but it gives great zest to other things.

R. B. LOUDON, Recorder of San Rafael Lodge, No. 24, has just returned from a flying trip to South Carolina.

California in 1883.

The progress of the State during 1883 must be regarded as gratifying from whatever point of view it be considered. Though the season was not particularly favorable, in fact, exhibited several quite unfavorable features, the aggregate of production was large and values realized for produce quite satisfactory. A handsome sum of money was returned to producers as the fruits of their toil, and the greater part of it has been expended in wise increase of productive ability, improved facilities and means for work or for better homes, which, in many cases, have been fully earned by years of self-denial and economy by the noble farmers' wives of our State. The progress and improvement in our agricultural regions, both from this spirit of enterprise among our older residents and from the work done by able and energetic new comers, is plainly discernible wherever the observer may go throughout the length and breadth of the State. Better kept farms, new dwellings, fences and barns, good work on roads and bridges, the planting of trees and other marks of successful agriculture may be seen on every hand. The fact of the matter is that now the earnings of California agriculture are going to build up California agriculture and are not being wasted by stock gambling or other speculative dissipations, as was the case a few years ago. The California farmer is coming to see that there is nothing surer and nothing more prosperous and profitable than California farming, and the result is the progress and improvement which has been so general during the last two or three years.

Our Gain in Population.

During the year the arrivals in the State by rail and water reached about 88,000 souls, and the departures 60,000, leaving a surplus remaining in the State of about 28,000. The character of those seeking homes in California during the year has been generally high. They have brought much money and much energy, and the result has been a disposition to invest, which has been felt in nearly all parts of the State, but especially in districts which have been most enterprising and industrious in making their desirability known through the press and by means of pamphlet publications. The holding of the great Conclave of Knights Templar has served as a good advertisement of the whole State, the influence of which will be felt for several years, as it takes time to arrange for seeking new homes.

Agricultural Produce Received in San Francisco.

For the last few years San Francisco has been declining somewhat in relative importance to the balance of the State. As each district develops new centers of receipt, consumption and shipment of produce are created; and the result is a vast amount of wealth is produced, and its value realized by producers, without its appearing at all in the statistics of this market. Formerly, San Francisco received nearly all the produce, which was not consumed near the points of production. The aggregates of the year's trade at this point are, however, of great interest, and they show quite respectable figures, although, as intimated above, the season was not one of great things in the field. The following is a record of the receipts of the various kinds of produce in this city during the year:

Wheat, cbls.	13,690,528
Flour, bbls.	1,108,242
Barley, cbls.	1,632,757
Oats, cbls.	295,496

Butter, lbs.	11,300,000
Cheese, lbs.	6,125,500
Eggs, doz.	3,178,307

Our Export Trade.

The export trade of this port does not compare well with the previous year. The adverse weather when the cereal crops were ripening reduced the aggregate production considerably. This was not given weight enough by ship-owners, and the result was that a great amount of tonnage was brought here by early reports of an unusually productive year. The shipment of wheat to various ports during the year was 12,961,258 cents, valued at $22,973,832; and of flour there was a value of about $6,250,000 to be added. The following statement of exports and their destination as prepared by the Chronicle, gives a good idea of the direction in which our trade is extending:

In 1881 the exports were $53,546,190, against $34,686,760 in 1880, $36,941,670 in 1879 and $33,993,550 in 1878.

Fruit.

It is reported that Dr. Chapin, State Inspector of Fruit Pests, estimates the value of the fruit crop of California last year at $15,000,000. This is rather a large figure, but it is probably not too large. The amount of fruit shipped out of the State is not yet reported by the railroad companies, but it was large. Shipping was brisk, and when the aggregate by both Southern and Northern routes is made up it will be handsome. It is estimated that the value of the canned fruit and vegetables will reach $4,500,000. The canning interest is now well distributed over the State and the last year's run was, as a rule, quite satisfactory. The number of canneries will be considerably increased if there should be a good promise of fruit this year, and the thousands of young trees now coming into bearing will contribute to the supply. In fruit drying there was also good progress made during the year and the market has been active and satisfactory.

Hops.

The year was one of unusual activity in hop planting, owing to the high prices which prevailed during the previous year. Last year's rates were less satisfactory, and yet yielded considerable money to growers. There was trouble to get pickers, and some loss followed. The hop crop on the Pacific Coast this season was estimated at about 40,000 bales, or an increase of 15,000 bales over last season. In 1882 the crop was given at nearly 25,000 bales, divided as follows: California, 13,064 bales; Washington Territory, 8,404 bales; Oregon, 3,511; total, 24,979 bales.

Dairy Produce.

The receipts of dairy produce at San Francisco were considerably less than the previous year, but we doubt whether the aggregate production of the State was any less. Butter and cheese are distributed now from the farm to the interior centers more than ever before. Prices have been fairly good, especially for cheese, and our dairy industries are prosperous.

Lumber.

An interest which makes little noise, except within hearing of its steam mills, is the lumber interest, and yet it brings much wealth into the country and supports many families in peace and comfort. The lumber business is increasing in a gratifying way both for local use and for export.

F. E. Preble, Secretary of the California Lumber Exchange, has furnished the following statement showing the receipts of Lumber at the port of San Francisco during the year 1883:

Redwood, rough, ft.	522,903,857

Wool.

The wool product has not varied greatly during the last few years. The last year was slightly better than the previous one, and it would be fair to expect a gradual increase hereafter if Congress properly protect the industry. Sheep are now being slowly introduced on mixed farms, and are being fed and cared for better than under the old pastoral system. The report of George Abbot for the year 1883 gives the following statistics:

The receipts at San Francisco were 108,508 bags, of which there was spring wool, 66,344 bags, weighing 20,566,640 pounds; spring wool shipped direct from the interior, 2,799,865 pounds; total spring production, 23,366,505 pounds. There was fall wool received, 38,895 bags, weighing 13,613,250 pounds; fall wool shipped direct from the interior, 2,368,935 pounds; total fleece wool, 39,348,690 pounds. Pulled wool shipped direct from San Francisco, 1,500,000 pounds; total production of California, 40,848,690 pounds. ## New Publications.

Honorable Success.

To have achieved marked business success in any honorable business pursuit is a cause for congratulation; but to have done this in the single line of publishing good literature is especially deserving of favorable notice. As the result of patient, persistent adherence to a worthy policy, success of the character indicated has been won by the house of D. Lothrop & Co., which from modest beginnings has grown to become one of the most important publishing houses in the United States. The magnitude of their undertakings is suggested by the fact that more than $30,000 was expended upon the illustrations of their holiday books for the present season. Our readers will be interested in the following notes relating to some of them:

Recent Publications.

Culled from the "American Bookseller" and other sources.

"A History of the American People," by Arthur Gilman, M. A. Concise, authentic, philosophical, impartial and thoroughly interesting, this is pronounced by competent reviewers the best one volume history of the United States yet published. Profusely illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Life of Washington," by E. E. Brown, author of "Life of James A. Garfield," "Life of Oliver Wendell Holmes," etc. This is far more than a compilation from previous works. Besides containing much new matter, essential facts are presented in new lights, and valuable information is given in a terse and graphic style. It is a model of biographical writing. 12mo, illustrated, $1.50.

"Self Giving," by Wm. F. Bainbridge, under the veil of fiction, presents chapters in the real life of some of the most honored of our American missionaries. The story is as interesting as any romance, and will deserve the attention it is sure to receive. 12mo, $1.50.

"How the Rain-Sprites were Freed" is a story of two little children in search of "the store-house of the rain." The conceit is prettily wrought out, and the book is worthy of comparison with some of the tales of Andersen and Grimm. With its lithographic illustrations and illuminated covers, it is a choice gift book for young readers. 4to, $1.00.

"Child Lore: its Classics, Traditions and Jingles," by Clara Doty Bates, will prove a mine of treasures to the boys and girls fortunate enough to possess it. German, Italian, Norse as well as English folk-lore have furnished its material, and choice illustrations by the best artists give it added value. 4to, elegantly bound, $4.

"Field, Wood and Meadow Rambles," and "Wild Flowers, and Where They Grow," by Amanda B. Harris, are two books whose pages are full of interest, and whose illustrations are admirable in design and execution. Mothers, in reading them to or with their little ones, will repeat the unalloyed happiness which came to them in the midst of field and woodland flowers, in days which will not return. "Wild Flowers," 8vo, extra cloth, gilt edges, $3; "Field, Wood," etc., 4to, $2.

"From the Hudson to the Neva," by David Ker, is a narrative unusually true to nature, in which the author recounts for the benefit of the boys the story of travels and adventures in Northern Europe and the Malay Islands. 12mo, $1.25.

"Their Club and Ours," a story by John Preston True, was received with great enthusiasm while running through the pages of Wide Awake, and will find equal favor with a wider public as presented in attractive book form. 12mo, $1.25.

"The Wedding Day Book" is dedicated to a sentiment which is expected to find its proper expression, sooner or later, in the exchange of vows, with the accompaniment of wedding bells, orange blossoms, etc. With dainty selections from the best poets, set opposite blank pages, it provides a register for these red letter days. 4to, $2.

"Daisy Green." Fond mothers love to recall the quaint sayings and mischievous pranks of their little ones, but few have opportunity to keep such a record of them as Mrs. Susie A. Bisbee presents in this volume. They will smile as they recognize many of the odd sayings and doings of their own boys and girls. It is a book which will be received with favor. 12mo, 80 cents.

"Cambridge Sermons" is a selection from the pulpit utterances in the Shepard Church, Cambridge, of Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., one of the most instructive and entertaining of American preachers. 12mo, $1.50.

"Yonge's Histories for Young Folks," brief, graphic, authentic, and intensely interesting, are the very best histories of Rome, Greece, England, France and Germany, specially adapted for the instruction and entertainment of the young, ever published. 12mo, $1.50 each.

Among new editions of late publications in elegant bindings, we note the following: "Our American Artists," in two volumes, by S. G. W. Benjamin, American Minister to Persia, which contain sketches the most prominent artists in America, with view of their studios, reproductions of their famous pictures, etc.; "Waifs and their Authors," by A. A. Hopkins. A collection of choice poems, which have won their way to fame, regardless of their authors; "The Old Oaken Bucket," with drawings by Miss L. B. Humphrey; the series of handsome Birthday Books, "Shakespeare, Tennyson," and "The Autograph;" "The New England Story Book," with its thirty-seven tales, by the most famous of New England writers, excellent illustrations; "Christmas Carols," by notable American poets, with illustrations by the best American artists, in a new and elegant edition, furnishing one of the choicest of gift books; "Out of Darkness into Light," with exquisite poems and drawings by Mary A. Lathbury, illustrative of the soul's striving after truth.

Among authors who are standard favorites with boys and girls, Pansy contributes to the new publications of this house "Ester Ried yet Speaking," a story which we will be as welcome as her "Four Girls at Chautauqua," "The Hall in the Grove," etc. Margaret Sidney, one of the most popular writers of the day, and author of "Five Little Peppers," "What the Seven Did," etc., furnishes a book of equal interest under the title of "Who Told it to Me," while Edward A. Rand's new book, "All Aboard for the Lakes and Mountains," will be received with enthusiasm by all boys.

With remarkable unanimity the press notices award the highest rank, among juvenile periodicals, to the several magazines published by D. Lothrop & Co. Appreciating the difficulty of adapting one magazine to all ages, they have provided for older youth their splendidly illustrated Wide Awake, which well deserves its title of "king among juveniles;" for those a little younger, the remarkably useful and successful magazine, The Pansy, which is all and more than is suggested by its name in the way of attractiveness, and which is edited by Mrs. G. R. Alden (Pansy); for readers still younger, that delight of the nursery, Our Little Men and Women; and for the delectation of the "bib and tucker folk," the wide-eyed youngsters who do more seeing than thinking, the pictorial wonder book, Babylond.

The publishers, who promise to make these magazines more attractive than ever the coming year, will send specimen copies of all to any of our readers upon receipt of twenty-five cents.

THE PHENOMENA OF DEATH.—A Philadelphia physician has made a special study of the phenomena of death, both through his personal observations and those of others, and his conclusion is that dissolution is painless. "I mean," he explains, "that it approaches as unconsciously as sleep. The soul leaves the world as painlessly as it enters it. Whatever be the cause of death, whether by lingering malady or sudden violence, dissolution comes either through syncope or asphyxia. In the latter case, when resulting from disease, the struggle is long protracted, and accompanied by all the visible marks of agony which the imagination associates with the closing scene of life. Death does not strike all the organs of the body at the same time, and the lungs are the last to give up the performance of their functions. As death approaches, the latter gradually become more and more oppressed; hence the rattle. Nor is the contact sufficiently perfect to change the black venous into the red arterial blood. An unprepared fluid consequently issues from the lungs into the heart, and is thence transmitted to every other organ in the body. The brain receives it, and its energies appear to be lulled thereby into sleep—generally tranquil sleep—filled with dreams which impel the dying to murmur out the names of friends, and the occupations and recollections of life."

THE THAMES.—The Thames is about to have a second tunnel. The Severn resents the attempt at a tunnel by periodically flooding out and drowning the operators. The Mersey tunnel is rapidly becoming a fact, and the projectors of the Humber tunnel promise success.

Notices of Recent Patents.

Among the patents recently obtained through DEWEY & CO.'S SCIENTIFIC PRESS American and Foreign Patent Agency, the following are worthy of special mention:

SUPPORT FOR BEAMS AND GIRDERS.—Peter H. Jackson, S. F. No. 291,192. Dated Jan. 1, 1884. This invention relates to an improved connection and support between girders and beams which meet them at right angles and at points intermediate between their ends. It consists of independent wrought-iron plates which extend across the girder or girders, and also over the end of the beam, above and below, and a wrought-iron clamp or band which surrounds the end of the beam and the plates, together with belts, wedges and check pieces. Mr. Jackson has made a specialty of the construction of beams, girders, etc., and has made several inventions in this line. As they are rapidly introduced into use they must be of a practical character, adoption being probably the best proof of this.

KEY-FASTENER.—E. W. Wagner, Cherokee, Butte Co. No. 291,434. Dated Jan. 1, 1884. The object of this key-fastener is to receive the key within the lock, in order to prevent it from being turned from the outside by those means in use by those who seek unlawful entrance. The invention consists of a sliding bolt seated within the lock-casing and operated by means of a thumb-piece projecting through a slot in said casing, said bolt being adapted to engage with a notch in the bit of the key.

DIRT SCRAPER.—Daniel A. Faulkner. No. 290,410. Dated Dec. 18, 1883. The invention relates to a new and useful dirt scraper for leveling land, and it consists in a peculiarly mounted and suspended bowl, and a novel means for dumping it. The mechanism is simple, rendering the device an efficient implement for leveling or scraping land.

LOGGING ENGINE.—John Dolbeer, S. F. No. 290,755. Dated Dec. 25, 1883. This is a novel apparatus for moving logs or other heavy weights; and it consists of a vertical gipsy or winding device with gearing, by which it is connected with the engine and a swiveling rope-guide. The bed and frame are portable.

MISERS' COMBINATION TOOL.—John Ryan, Salt Lake City, No. 291,627. Dated Jan. 8, 1884. This combination tool is a device for holding a candle, for cutting fuse, for pressing the caps thereon, and for sustaining the tool.

The auditorium of Hamilton (Independent) Church is to let for Lectures, Concerts and Choice Entertainments. It is one of the best auditoriums in Oakland; has a fine organ; is comfortably seated, well lighted and conveniently located. Apply to TAGGART & DINGEE, No. 460 Eighth St., Oakland, Cal.

GOOD TEAMS IN OAKLAND can be had at the City Hall Stables, No. 514 Fourteenth street, west of the City Hall.

Every Member of the A. O. U. W. Should Subscribe for the "Pacific States Watchman."

It is officially recommended by the Order on the Pacific coast. Splendidly illustrated, reliable and chaste. The WATCHMAN is published semi-monthly—on the 1st and 15th of the month.

It is one of the best home and family papers on the coast and this feature commends it to all Workmen and all members of their families.

The subscription price is only $2 per year, payable in advance.

It is a worthy representative of the Order, a profitable companion for every member to read and consult, and a friend that each can take pride in recommending to readers everywhere. Its circulation has been of immense benefit to our noble Order and many of its individual members who read and patronize its many enterprising and sterling issues. All Workmen should lend it a helping voice and hand.

Advertisers will find it one of the best means of reaching a class of readers, including many Workmen and others who are large buyers in the aggregate.

Good Agents are wanted at all times, to whom large commissions will be paid.

SAMPLE copies sent free for circulation and examination with a view of increasing its subscription list.

WATCHMAN PUBLISHING CO., 252 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

To All "Workmen."

Ever onward and upward is the motto of the A. O. U. W. and with the success of the Order is the PACIFIC STATES WATCHMAN's progress. There are, however, some Workmen who are not subscribers, and we wish to draw their attention to the merits of our journal. Those of our readers who have been with us from the start, and also those who have come later, can do much to not only aid our enterprise, but also that of our organization. They have been with us, seen our work, and can best tell whether the WATCHMAN has been an earnest advocate of the Order's interests or not.

Members of the A. O. U. W. have a pecuniary interest, which renders an able exponent of their rights and privileges of paramount importance. Therefore, every member of the Order should take the paper, read it, and if he has some friend who is morally and physically qualified, lend him the paper for the purpose of hastening action.

Members of the WATCHMAN family who have felt strength and received encouragement from a perusal of the Order's doings in its columns, would do well, also, to pass it occasionally around to the lukewarm, that they may be partakers in the faith which moves them.

The privileges we now enjoy by reason of our membership will last while life is in us, and when we are gone, others will be ready to fill our places. If the Order should ever perish, lukewarmness will be the rock upon which we shall split, and one of the greatest preventives of this will be the enthusiasm that is kept alive by a careful reading of the WATCHMAN.

Our subscription rates are two dollars a year. We will send copies free for samples to those who are willing to assist in the circulation of our paper.

REGULAR MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE:

Second and Fourth Saturday Evenings of Each Month, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

A member of the committee will be in attendance each evening (Sundays excepted) from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and on Sunday mornings from 11 A. M. to 12 M., for the purpose of receiving and attending to applications for Relief and Employment, and no application will be entertained outside of the above hours and place.

All communications and business connected with this committee should be addressed to the Secretary at the above permanent headquarters.

Work for the Advancement of the Order.

Let the family of each Workman to which comes the WATCHMAN, show to their neighbors who are not members of the Order, but who would make good and efficient Workmen, the advantages of this oldest of beneficiary organizations, and the one which they believe to be the best, as superiority is shown in each issue of this journal. If you are pleased with our paper, make it do the best possible work for the advancement of the Order, by circulating it where it will do the most good in creating favorable opinion of the Order in the minds of those who may be induced to join it and become good members.

The Lemmon Herbarium.

This Herbarium has been removed from the Blake House to a permanent place at 1205 Franklin St., near Fourteenth St., Oakland, one square east of the Post Office, where plants of the Pacific Coast, including Arizona, may be determined on application, and instruction given in botany during the winter. Business Notes.

WM. H. PORTER, the well known undertaker and embalmer, will remove to No. 116 Eddy street on or about March 1st.

ONE year ago Brothers Page and Falch opened a grand restaurant, and connected therewith a bakery and oyster saloon, on the northwest corner of Turk and Mason streets. Steadily this resort has been growing in favor and patronage, until now they hold the same relation to our city as Delmonico's does to New York. Society celebrations, dinner and wedding parties find this place, with its ample accommodations, appointments, cuisine and prices, a favorite retreat.

BROTHER GUS POHLMAN is one of the most skilled workmen, as an enameleur and manufacturer of souvenirs, charms, etc., in this city. It has become a common practice to reward faithful officers by presenting them some valuable testimonial. In following this custom, our genial brother is kept quite busy in originating designs and manufacturing souvenirs and enameleur articles for this purpose.

B. PASQUALE manufactures all kinds of Silk and Bunting Flags, Rosettes, Regalias and Banners, as well as Gold and Silver Trimmings. His place of business is located at 650 Washington and 967 Howard streets. Mr. Pasquale has been in business in San Francisco since 1858, and enjoys an enviable reputation in the community, and those who may favor him with their patronage can safely accept his guarantee. He is prepared to furnish all military and fraternal societies with anything they may require in his line.

PACIFIC GROVE RETREAT.—This popular resort is steadily growing in favor as a rendezvous for invalids and pleasure seekers. Water from the Carmel river has been introduced, new avenues laid out, streets graded and macadamized. A liberal expenditure of money, increased accommodations and new attractions have been added this winter. It seems to be the policy of the managers of this haven of rest to provide accommodations and appointments at a lower cost, within the reach of all, with a view that families can avoid the vexations and care of house-keeping. Within two weeks from the time of putting lots on the market this season, the efficient and urbane manager, Mr. J. O. Johnson, has sold over $5,000 worth, at increased value.

CASTALIAN.—The Castalian is a natural mineral spring water from the Castalia Spring, Inyo county, Cal. It was discovered by accident by one of our pioneer miners while prospecting, who, in a spirit of curiosity, used this water as a remedy for a malady that was pronounced incurable by the physicians. After he was cured it has been used by thousands of our afflicted people, and in every case with marked beneficial and curative effect. Professor Thos. Price, M. D., analytical chemist, after making a careful analysis, certifies to its hygienic properties, and says it is a "remarkable water," and after a therapeutic study of it says that it is the most remarkable of any he ever knew or heard of. It is a positive cure for diseases of the blood, stomach, kidneys and urinary organs, and has proved a specific for poison oak and catarrh. Two diplomas for the "Best Natural Mineral Water" have been awarded by California State Fair and Mechanics' Institute. Bros. Forbes & Davenport are sole agents for the Pacific coast. Depot, 27 Sixth street.

In Twenty Years.

Among the congratulatory notes which we have received on the completion of our first score of years as a firm, is the following from an old Californian, who, though distant, has still at heart the interest and progress of his old friends, and of a State in whose advancement he rejoices:

Messrs. Dewey & Co.—Gentlemen: As one among your host of friends, allow me to congratulate you upon recently passing unitedly time's score as a business firm, also the journalistic score far in advance of all rivals and competitors on the Pacific coast, entering the race since the 1st of December, 1863.

Twenty years in this earth's chronology is an infinitesimal fraction of time. With man it marks a generation. History records no such complete and wonderful changes—national, political or social—occurring as within the last score. The legalized consorting of freedom and slavery no longer exists in these United States. Years of war and the blood of a host of martyrs was required to verify as truth what had existed only in theory. Japan, from time immemorial shut up and excluded from the world, now ranks among the most progressive of people. Ancestral China, with consecutive historical records ante-dating time as previously computed, proudly exclusive, bigotly conservative, anxiously seeks admission into the conclave of nations. Geographical research has lifted the veil from a vast continent, with its millions of idolatrous inhabitants. A boundless field is opened to the philanthropist, the missionary, the trader and the agriculturist. The long sought for sources of that ancient, yet mysterious river, the Nile, have been determined, after baffling adventurous travelers of many nations for generations. The vexed problem of an Arctic passage has been solved. Science has subjugated to man's uses the most erratic, subtle and powerful of nature's forces—electricity, which lights, speaks, writes and labors for him, with possibilities of development beyond conception. From earth's deeply buried resources fountains of oil have poured forth, lubricating the commercial wheels of this and other lands, added millions to our wealth, a priceless benefit to mankind.

Space forbids more than thus tracing a few of the most prominent of the many objects dating within the past twenty years. With the compliments of the season, coupled with a wish that you may enjoy many returns, with increased abilities of appreciation, G. C. PEARSON.

Notice to Members.

Brethren wishing Society Address Cards can be supplied by sending their orders to Cubery & Co., 415 Market street, San Francisco, sole agents for the Pacific Coast of Milton H. Smith & Co., Rochester, N. Y. These cards have the emblem of the Order on one corner, and are universally used in the East, which suggested the idea of establishing a Pacific Coast Depot. Remember the address: Cubery & Co., 415 Market street, San Francisco. Send for samples and price list.

COMPLIMENTARY SAMPLES OF THIS PAPER are occasionally sent to parties connected with the interests specially represented in its columns. Persons so receiving copies are requested to examine its contents, terms of subscription, and give it their own patronage, and, as far as practicable, aid in circulating the journal, and making its value more widely known to others, and extending its influence in the cause it faithfully serves. Subscription rate, $2 a year. Extra copies mailed for 10 cents, if ordered soon enough. Personal attention will be called to this (as well as other notices, at times), by turning a leaf.

PROFESSIONAL begging is represented as being in a high state of development in New York City.

Don't Fail to Write.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time they intend to pay for it, let them not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

TELEPHONING OVER THE SEA. Experiments were recently made on the large wire of the Postal Telegraph Company between New York and Meadville, Pa., a distance of 509 miles, with a telephone devised by Prof. Webster of Ypsilanti, Mich. Owing to the storm and atmospheric conditions the magneto bell was kept jingling by the induction alone, but there was little difficulty in carrying on a conversation.

What Prof. Gillett calls a ten-point instrument was used. Each point, Prof. Gillett says, is like adding another telephone in power. The feature of the receiver attached to the telephone is the increased magnetic surface presented to the diaphragm. Chicago, a distance of 1,010 miles, including a cable containing twenty-two wires, has been reached satisfactorily with a ten-point instrument.

One of the principal objects of these experiments was studying the possibility of constructing an instrument by which telephonic communication can be had across the Atlantic ocean as well as over long land distances. To effect this result, a twenty-point instrument is being made for the purpose of ascertaining the distance it will reach. Prof. Gillett said that the French cable was 2,436 miles long from end to end, and the resistance was 2.89 ohms. The resistance of the wire used in the above experiment was 1 1/2 ohms, but as satisfactory results had been obtained from the smaller copper wire, the resistance of which was six ohms. "We feel confident that before we get through we are going to say 'Hello!' and a good deal more, too, to the people on the other side," said Prof. Gillett. "What we are aiming at is communication at long distance."

THE NATURE OF ELECTRICITY. - Professor Thompson has shown how a series of floating magnet poles of like name, repelling one another, tend to produce equal distribution of the poles. Prof. Thompson, arguing from the second law of electrostatics (inverse squares), sought to explain the first law in a rational manner, on the hypothesis of self-repelling molecules, which tend to uniform distribution. When there is a surplus in one part and a deficit in another, the molecules are urged toward each other, i. e., attract. This was shown by putting a surplus of floating magnets at one part of the basin. By the movements of these magnets, when confined in barriers and with surplus and deficit purposely made, the author imitated the effects of a Leyden jar, induction, a battery current, etc., the motions and arrangement of the poles illustrating the hypothetical behavior of electricity. The author was led by the hypothesis to infer that either the ether is electricity, or, that the ether is electrified, and the former seemed the simpler conclusion.

A DRY GALVANIC BATTERY. - Electro-piles without fluids were among the earliest forms invented, but they had but very little power, and although they last a long time, have very little value. They are now beginning to attract attention again, and C. Schneler, of Dresden, has invented one consisting of a copper cylinder open at both ends, in which is placed another open cylinder of amalgamated zinc. For filling, he mixes up plaster of Paris with a saturated aqueous solution of chloride of zinc, containing 7 per cent of common salt. A stiff paste is made in this way, and poured in the annular space between the two cylinders, where it soon hardens and sets. The electromotive force is not stated.

Mining and Scientific Press.

THE MINING AND SCIENTIFIC PRESS is the leading mining
journal in America, and enjoys a larger circulation among
the more intelligent operators and workers in the gold
fields of the world.

Established in 1860, it has firmly maintained its position as a reliable, progressive journal. The information given in its columns has saved millions of dollars to the practical miners, metallurgists, mill men, mine and share holders on the Western side of our continent.

Among its contributors are the ablest and most experienced mining engineers, superintendents and practical
miners in this country.

The PRESS gives a condensed summary of Mining News
from the most important mining districts of the country.

New processes and methods of mining are described in its weekly issues. New mining machinery and improvements are frequently illustrated and explained in a manner to be of great value to all interested in mining.

As a scientific and mechanical representative of the Pacific Coast it is decidedly popular, and a standard journal
with the most thrifty industrial people of the Pacific States and Territories. Its authority is of the highest order, and its usefulness in its special sphere unrivalled.

Every public library, mining engineer, metallurgist,
mining operator, and intelligent mechanic and manufacturer, will find profit by its reading.

Inventors on the Pacific Coast will find it greatly to their advantage to consult this old, experienced, first-class Agency. We have able and trustworthy Associates and Agents in Washington and the capital cities of the principal nations of the world. In connection with our editorial, scientific and Patent Law Library, and record of original cases in our office, we have other advantages far beyond those which can be offered home inventors by other agencies. The information accumulated through long and careful practice before the Office, and the frequent examination of Patents already granted, for the purpose of determining the patentability of inventions brought before us, enables us often to give advice which will save inventors the expense of applying for Patents upon inventions which are not new. ## WATCHMAN.

A Home Journal for the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY EDITION--TWENTY-FOUR PAGES.

VOL. 8.—No. 4.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1884.

In advance, $2 a year.
Single copies, 10c each.

A Mile Stone.

Since the organization of California as a separate jurisdiction we have paid to the widows and orphans of our deceased brothers almost exactly one million dollars! This munificent benefaction has been like a refreshing shower to the thirsty earth, making glad the waste places. Other great organizations, in most instances, tend directly to the concentration of wealth in the hands of the few—ours, on the contrary, has a diffusive tendency. It gathers from concentrated hordes of the wealthy and well-to-do, and scatters to the needy. No community can be poor that is a community of Ancient Workmen. Every household is worth two thousand dollars if it possesses neither houses nor lands, nor money, nor other worldly goods. Two thousand dollars does not make one wealthy, but yet it is more than the average citizen of this or any other country can count as his after all his obligations are provided for. To make certain that a Workman shall leave behind him, when he dies, the sum of two thousand dollars, costs less than the payment of taxes and insurance on the same valuation of property. Then it is more easily paid. It is easier to pay one dollar and a half a month than to pay eighteen dollars annually—especially it is easier for those who are not wealthy, and the great mass of mankind do not belong to this class.

What the A. O. U. W. has done and is doing for California, has been done and is being done all over the length and breadth of our country. Moreover, what our Order is doing directly is but a fraction of what it is doing indirectly. A score of other beneficial societies have sprung from its loins, and some of these are as great and as powerful for beneficence as the parent Order. These societies are working a revolution in our social structures. They are not only powerful aids in upholding the new commandment that we love one another, but they are so forestalling poverty and crime that the poorhouse and prison are being relieved of much of their fullness, and the work is only just begun. The future is big with promise if the Fraternities only half do their duty.

A. O. U. W. Hall Association.

The A.O.U.W. Hall Association Directors met Wednesday evening, the 13th inst., at the Relief Committee Rooms, Shiels' Building, dent; J. N. Block, of Unity, No. 27, Vice President; John Hoesch, of Magnolia, No. 41, Secretary; Frank W. Rossbach, of Olympic, No. 127, Treasurer. The best of feeling prevailed, and everything was unanimous, there being no strife for the offices. The committee voted to keep within the limit of $25,000 for a lot, and that any lot purchased should be within the space bounded by Geary, Larkin and Market streets. Brothers Block, of Unity, No. 27, Loud, of Valley, No. 30, and Alexander, of Silver Spray, No. 3, D. of H., were appointed as a committee on lots, etc.

The Secretary was instructed to have 1,000 copies of the By-Laws printed for distribution, and also to procure a seal.

The Directors will meet the last Saturday evening of each month, fourteen Directors concerned, you are very welcome to them. Your efforts to publish creditable journals in the interest of Fraternal Societies, deserve assistance and co-operation from members of all Orders, and it is a pleasure to ask your acceptance of the little poem referred to. Fraternally,

WILLIAM H. BARNES.
SAN FRANCISCO, February 20, 1884.

Our Patriotic Issue.

The engraving of the National Capitol on this page is a suitable introduction to the present Washington's Birthday issue of the WATCHMAN, which has been prepared with great care and no small expense and labor. We would here modestly, but plainly, call the attention of our readers to our efforts to please in this issue, and in fact all issues. We are glad to send out several thousand copies complimentary to Brothers not yet subscribers, but whom we hope will thereby be induced to become patrons and co-operators in sustaining the WATCHMAN and encourage its publishers to still greater efforts for the good of its readers and the Order in all sections of the country. Those receiving copies are asked to bring the attention, individually or collectively, of their fellow Workmen to any credit they may believe the paper deserving of, and aid us in any way in extending the circulation and power of the A. O. U. W. home paper. Should any re-there being 21 Lodges represented, Bro. Danforth, Deputy Grand Master, presiding, and J. Hoesch at the Secretary's desk. The various reports from the several Lodges showed the following subscriptions: San Francisco, No. 4, $1,500; Golden Gate, No. 8, $1,000; Harmony, No. 9, $3,500; Unity No. 27, $3,500; Valley, No. 30, $3,000; Magnolia, No. 41, $4,500; Washington, No. 60, $1,200; Sts. John, No. 73, $1,000; Bay View, No. 159, $500; Noe Valley, No. 185, $150; Silver Spray, No. 3, D. of H., $100; making a total of $19,950 already subscribed by Lodges. The stock taken by individual members brings the aggregate considerably above $20,000. A code of By-Laws was then adopted, which will receive further attention in a future issue. The Directors then proceeded to the election of officers for the balance of the term, with the following result: Edwin Danforth, D. G. M., Presiconstituting a quorum for the transaction of business.

The committee then adjourned to meet at the same place Saturday evening, February 23d.

A Pleasing Indorsement.

We are in receipt of the following pleasant communication addressed to our publishing company, by Past Grand Master Barnes, of the A. O. U. W. We appreciate it all the more highly as coming from one whose efforts in the cause of fraternity stand second to those of no other individual on this coast:

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I had the pleasure of reading Brother Booth's stirring poem on "Fraternity" to-day, to which you have awarded the prize. It certainly deserves a prize, and besides this, that which is far better, a lodgment in the hearts and memories of thousands. So far as the lines on the subject that I wrote you, signed "131," are ceive duplicates, please circulate the extra copy where it will be likely to do the most good. Thankful for past patronage, we desire to obtain more by deserving it.

DR. SAMUEL H. HALL, formerly Medical Examiner of Burns Lodge, No. 68, is now located at Centerville, Alameda county. He has been elected M. W. of Reliance, No. 93, at Alvarado. This Lodge he informs us is progressing, and general prosperity prevails in this section and especially among the Workmen.

As an evidence of the interest taken by a number of our zealous Workmen, we quote an example. Brother Wm. Smallman, P. M. W., of Triumph, No. 180, has been a member since 1879, passed through the chairs and held the several offices, and has never missed a meeting during that time,

The Fireside.

What the Traveler Said at Sunset.

I feel the dew fall in the air;
The muzzee of the darkening thicket
I hear the night thrush call to prayer.

The evening wind is sad with farewells,
And loving hands unclasp from mine;
Alone I go to meet the darkness
Across an awful boundary line.

As from the lighted hearths behind me
I pass with slow, reluctant feet,
What waits me in the land of strangeness?
What face shall smile, what voice shall greet?

What space shall awe, what brightness blind me?
What thunder roll of music stun?
What vast processions sweep before me
Of shapes unknown beneath the sun?

I shrink from unaccustomed glory,
I dread the myriad-voiced strain;
Give me the unforgetten faces,
But let my lost ones speak again.

He will not chide my mortal yearning
Who is our brother and our friend;
In whose full life, Divine and human,
The heavenly and the earthly blend.

Mine be the joy of soul communion,
The sense of spiritual strength renewed.
The reverence for the pure and holy,
The dear delight of doing good.

No fitting ear is mine to listen
An endless anthem's rise and fall;
No curious eye is mine to measure
The peewee gate and jasper wall.

For love must needs be more than knowledge,
What matter if I never know
Why Aldebaran's star is ruddy,
Or warmer Sirius white as snow?

Forgive my humar. words, Oh, Father!
I go Thy larger truth to prove;
Thy mercy shall transcend my longing,
I seek but love, and Thou art Love!

I go to find my lost and mourned for Safe in Thy sheltering goodness still,
And all that hope and faith foreshadow Made perfect in Thy holy will!

The Squire's Fun.

Squire Doolittle was a farmer, fat and jolly, who liked fun, but always preferred it at some one else's expense.

If he could play a trick upon one of his sons, he enjoyed it hugely. As a consequence his boys did not reverence him very much, and were always trying some practical joke on their father. Sometimes they succeeded, but not often.

"I'm too old a fish to be caught by the pin hooks of boys," he would say when some plan of their's had miscarried and the joke was turned upon themselves, much to his delight and their chagrin. "You've heard of weazles, haven't you? Yes? Well, weazles, especially old weazles, never sleep."

"We must get a laugh against him in some way," said Tom. "He's too provoking. I'd give a dollar to trick him in such a way that he wouldn't like to hear about it."

"So would I," said John.

"And I'd make it two," said Robert, "but we're hardly sharp enough. That's the trouble."

It happened that the squire was in the hay-mow in the barn when this conversation took place, and the boys were sitting on some boxes on the barn floor.

He chuckled as he listened, and a moment later called out from his lofty perch:

"I'll tell you what I'll do, boys, when you get a good joke on me, I'll buy each one of you a hat."

The boys looked foolish; but finally, because they had nothing else to say, they accepted the challenge, and in a half-hearted sort of a way, set their wits to work to earn the hats.

In the squire's flock of sheep was an old ram called David. The animal had a chronic spite against the whole human family and never lost an opportunity of exhibiting it to any individual of the family that crossed his path. If a stranger entered the yard or pasture where David was, the poor man was fortunate if he was not knocked down as suddenly as if he had been struck by lightning. The ram always attacked from the rear. He would get behind the object of his attack, curb his neck, shut his eyes and charge! As may be imagined, the great horns of the animal backed up by the momentum gathered by his charge, gave anything but a pleasant sensation when they came in contact with the legs of his unsuspecting victim. Generally a board was strapped to his horns, over his woolly face, to obstruct his range of vision and serve as a warning to strangers of his war-like propensities. But he often contrived to tear it from his head—and then alas for his unsuspecting victim.

The boys enjoyed many an hour of fun with David. The sheep pasture came up to the barnyard on one side, and a creek ran along by both. Where the pasture came to the creek there was a very high bank, and this bank was steep. The Doolittle boys used to get upon a narrow rock that was just under the edge of the bank. Here, when they stood up, all of their bodies above the waist could be seen above the level of the pasture. Placing themselves in this position, they would attract the attention of old David by calling and shaking their hats at him. He was always ready for a battle. With lowered head, curved neck and a snort of anger, he would rush at them with his eyes closed. Taking advantage of this peculiarity, the boys would drop down behind the bank and David would go over them into the water with a plunge that would have done credit to a Newfoundland dog. Then he would get back to the shore looking wrathful and sheepish; but he could not be induced to renew the attack at that time.

His memory, however, was poor, or his pugnacity was too strong for his discretion, for in an hour if the boys came back and showed themselves above the bank, he was ready for another charge. Perhaps the foolish animal thought that sometime he would be too quick for them.

The squire had often watched the sport and laughed at David's recklessness and at his appearance as he plunged into the water and came forth with wet wool and a disgusted and wrathful aspect.

One day the squire was in the barnyard, salt-ing the cows. He had a half-bushel measure in his hand, and as he looked over the fence into the sheep pasture and saw David watching him, he held up the measure and shook it at the old fellow.

David gave a snort of defiance and began to curb his neck and shake his head, as if challenging the squire to combat.

"I wonder if I couldn't trick the old fellow in the same way that the boys fool him?" thought the deacon. He looked about the yard, cautiously; his sons were not in sight, and he concluded he would have a laugh at David's expense. Crawling through the fence, he reached the rock on which the boys stood in their encounters with David. The ram had not seen him. When the squire raised himself cautiously and looked over the bank, David was watching the barnyard, and evidently wondering what had become of the man who had just challenged him.

"Hi, David!" cried the squire, holding the half-bushel measure out before him as a target for the sheep to aim at. "Hi, David!"

David "hi-ed" at once. He gave a grand flourish, as if to say, "Look out there!" then charged.

Unfortunately for the squire, he was so excited over the fun that he forgot himself completely, and only thought about the half-bushel measure. Instead of dropping out of the sheep's way, he swung the measure on one side, in his excitement forgetting that David always shut his eyes when he charged, and aimed for the object before him when he closed them. The consequence was that the ram did not follow the measure, but bolting straight for the place where he last saw it, struck the poor squire square in the stomach, and he and David went over the bank and into the creek as if shot out of a cannon.

"Wall, I swum!" sputtered the squire, as he made his way to the bank. "I forgot all about dodging. I do believe that the old reprobate broke my stomach in, by the way it feels. You old rascal!" he screamed to David, whose air was one of victory as he stood on the pasture side of the fence, making defiant motions with his head at the deacon, who had clambered out of the water on the barnyard side; "I'd like to break your old neck! I shan't get over this for a month, if I ever do. I wouldn't have been so bruised for five dollars. I'm glad the boys didn't see me."

He made his way up the bank and towards the barn under cover of the fence. He didn't want any one at the house to see him in his wet clothes. As he opened the barn-door a broad side of laughter saluted his ears from the hay-mow in the end of the barn toward the creek.
He knew then that the boys' hour of triumph had come. They had seen his discomfiture.

"I say father!" irreverently called out Tom, in a voice choked with laughter, "you didn't scrooch quick enough. Next time you'll know better how to do it."

"What became of the half-bushel?" asked John.
Rob screamed "Hi, David!" in such a way that notwithstanding his pain the squire was half inclined to laugh himself.

"I—I acknowledge that David was too much for me that time," said the squire, looking very red and foolish. "Laugh away, boys, if it does you any good."

"What's the price of hats?" asked John.
"Well, but the joke wasn't yours," said the squire. "But I'll tell you what I'll do. If you won't say anything about this foolish affair, I'll buy the hats and give you a day's fishing any time you wish to take it."

"We agree! we agree!" cried the boys.
But the story leaked out in some way, and the squire had to endure a good deal of sly laughing from his fun-loving neighbors. But he never quite forgave old David, and although he did not say so he had a feeling of unqualified satisfaction when he heard one day that the old sheep's neck had been broken.

THE BANANA TREE AS A FOOD PRODUCER.
The Spaniards have a superstitious reverence for the banana, believing it to be the fruit of which Eve partook in Paradise. It is asserted that 44,000 pounds of bananas can be produced on the soil that would be required for 1,000 pounds of potatoes, and that the area that would be required to raise wheat enough for one man would produce bananas enough to feed 70 men.

The Old Trundle Bed.

O, the old trundle bed where I slept when a boy!
What canopied king might not covet the joy?
The glory and peace of that slumber of mine,
Like a long, gracious rest in the bosom Divine;
The quaint, homely couch, hidden close from the light,
But daintily drawn from its hiding at night,
O, a nest of delight from the foot to the head!
Was the queer little, dear little, old trundle bed!
O, the old trundle bed, where I wondering saw The stars through the window, and listened with awe
To the sigh of the winds as they tremblingly crept
Through the trees where the robin so restlessly slept.
Where I heard the low, murmurous cheep of the wren,
And the katydid listlessly chirrup again,
Till my fancies grew faint and were drowsily led Through the maze of the dreams of the old trundle bed!
With its plump little pillow and old-fashioned spread;
Its snowy-white sheets and the blanket above,
Smoothed down and tucked round with the touches of love;
The voice of my mother to lull me to sleep
With the old fairy stories my memories keep Still fresh as the lilies that bloom o'er the head
Once bowed with my own o'er the old trundle bed.

Women's Right to Vote.

A meeting of the Women's Christian Suffrage Society was recently held at the Rev. Mr. Dille's church on Mission street, near Sixth. Mrs. Moulton, the President, was in the chair; Mrs. Theall, secretary. The secretary read a carefully prepared paper on "Women's Natural Right to Vote," which, in addition to the usual arguments, contained the following:

Only last winter fifty women, some of whom were widows with helpless children to support, were turned out of our City Hall and their places given to voters. Had they political equality with men, viz., the right to vote, this would not have occurred. Having the ballot would entitle women to these positions, and no official would then dare debar women from earning their bread in any of our Federal or State offices where she was competent to perform the duties of the office. The reason given for excluding the sex from these positions was that there were some women employed as copyists who ought to have been elsewhere.
Considering the undeniable fact that there are many ladies in this city suffering for the necessaries of life, whose reputations, from their pure and spotless lives, are above reproach, and whose association with any office would reflect on it unblemished credit, the excuse, to say the least, is extremely weak. As it is assumed that the City Hall is now the temple of morality —which it very properly should be—would it not be well to investigate and find how many men are employed there of pure and spotless lives, and also who are responsible for having given appointments in it to women who did not need or deserve them?

As mothers and sisters, we owe duties to ourselves and to the rising generation that we ought not longer to ignore, and the nation cannot much longer afford to have us ignore them.
For we say in the name of millions of suffering and downtrodden people that, on account of the wholesale fraud and corruption that pervades nearly every department of official life, that we are standing on the brink of a fearful precipice; and that the same conditions that caused the downfall of Rome and brought about the French Revolution, exist in our land to-day, and if the thundering sounds of the portending storm awake not our women and the better element of our men from their long lethargy to hasten to the rescue, our beautiful country will soon be a republic only in name, and we will have but the heritage to leave our children of bonded slavery to the moneyed few.

For the sake of home, truth, peace and native land, we implore all true women who consider the welfare of their sons and daughters, to unite with us in praying that our next Legislature may pass a bill granting the suffrage to all women citizens of the State of California.

The Ebell Society.

The Ebell Society, of Oakland, has filed articles of incorporation with the County Clerk. Its stated objects are the advancement of women in education and industrial pursuits, and the acquisition of real estate. The following is a list of members: Miss C. Annette Buckle, Mrs.
M. J. Mitchell, Mrs. E. H. Gray, Miss Helen
M. Handy, Mrs. Mary F. Browne, Mrs. Anna
M. Sherman, Mrs. Sarah J. McCheaney, Miss Abbie P. G. Grant, Miss Maria B. Bacon, Mrs.
Maria L. Varney, Mrs. Margaret B. Wyman,
Mrs. Susan Chamberlain, Mrs. Ellen C. Dick,
Miss M. F. Benton, Mrs. J. C. Campbell, Mrs.
W. Everson, Mrs. G. W. Grayson, Mrs. H. H.
H. Graves, Mrs. M. J. Goodfellow, Mrs. D. W.
Gelwick, Miss S. Jackson, Mrs. M. R. Lansing, Mrs. J. G. Lemmon, Mrs. W. Laidlaw, Mrs. W. Hawley, Mrs. A. P. Redding, Miss J. Richardt, Mrs. J. J. Scotch-ler, Mrs. J. K. Simpson, Mrs. J. M. Selfridge, Mrs. Edna Sessions, Mrs. S. R.
Trembley, and Mrs. M. D. Watson. The Directors for the current year are Mrs. Mary F.
Browne, Mrs. Marion J. Metcalf, Miss Maria
B. Bacon, Miss C. Annette Buckle, Mrs. Anna

M. Sherman, Mrs. Margaret B. Wyman, Mrs.
Susan J. Chamberlain, Mrs. Ellen C. Dick and Mrs. Sarah J. McCheaney.

This society enjoys a merited prominence in its valuable and honorable work, and we are glad that steps are being taken to make it a permanent institution in our sister city.

Tasteful House-Furnishing.

Harmony of color is of the first importance in furnishing. Not that walls, carpet, curtains, chairs, etc., should be of the same color; that would make a room cold and uninviting. There should be two or three colors in a room, but these should harmonize. If one is conscious that she has no eye for color, she should consult some one of known taste before purchasing articles which, although by themselves might be desirable, would, perhaps, if placed with others, spoil the effect of the whole, and be a
